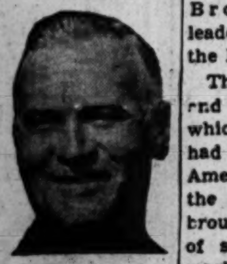
'DON'T SCUTTLE G. O. P. FOREIGN POLICY': GREEN

2 Frisco Delegates Cautioned.

BY GEORGE TAGGE.

Gov. Green yesterday forcefully projected himself into the front ranks of Republican leadership by a demand that his party spokesmen on foreign affairs hew to the line of the G. O. P. platform on foreign relations. He particularly stressed the party's promise that "the millions who fight the war should have a voice in making the peace."



Gov. Green.

Illinois' governor expressed what he believes to be the sentiment of the midwest in letters to Sen. Vandenberg of Michigan and Rep. Eaton of New Jersey. They are the Republican members of congress who will be delegates to the San Francisco conference of the allied nations on April 25.

Green, Vandenberg, and Eaton were members of the six man committee which in 1943 drafted the Mackinac Island statement of their party's position of foreign affairs.

Mackinac Role Recalled.

The governor's present action recalls his role in fighting at Mackinac for the preservation of the sovereignty of the United States in post-war parleys and participation of service men in post-war deliberations.

The letters are construed as a warning to the internationalists' favorite, Comdr. Harold E. Stassen of Minnesota, not to speak as the voice of midwest Republicanism at the San Francisco conference. Stassen was the third G. O. P. appointee of President Roosevelt to the allied nations' meeting.

Stassen is regarded as Roosevelt's favorite for the Republican nomination for President in 1948. The CIO in its Minnesota organ hailed Stassen on Friday as the successor to the late Wendell L. Willkie, G. O. P. nominee against Roosevelt in 1940.

Stassen last week prepared for his job in San Francisco by contending in a speech that the United States must yield a portion of its sovereignty to a world state.

Set Apart from Favorites.

Gov. Green's letters set him apart from the New Deal's Republican favorites. In the letter he asked whether the Mackinac charter of the Republicans is to become another scrap of paper, like the Atlantic Charter of Roosevelt.

Green called upon Sen. Vandenberg and Rep. Eaton to "champion"

Czarist Bond Flurry After Yalta Probed

BY WALTER TROHAN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 10.—The securities and exchange commission has ordered an investigation into the speculation bubble in Czarist Russian bonds which followed the Yalta conference and the visit to Moscow of Edward J. Paving Blocks] Flynn, Bronx political leader and former chairman of the Democratic national committee.

Edward J. Flynn.

The mysterious rise in the 6½ and 5½ per cent imperial bonds, which had been dormant for years, had interested London as well as American financial circles because the activity in Wall Street had brought a slight rise in the price of similar bonds on the London market.

The SEC has asked brokers to turn in reports on sales in order to determine what, if anything, is behind the sudden activity in these securities. As yet the SEC has made no report on its inquiry. However, it was said at SEC headquarters in Philadelphia that nothing important has been uncovered.

From 30 Cents to $16.

In 1939 the bonds were selling at a fraction above 30 cents on $100 value. Before Yalta they were quoted at 5 or 6, which means $5 or $6 a $100, or $50 to $60 per $1,000 bond.

Immediately after Yalta the bonds began to soar. They more than trebled in a few days. In one day they rose from 16 to 20. At the peak quotation purchasers of $1,000 bonds at the 1939 quotation of 5/16 [31¼ cents] could, by sale, realize a profit of about $197. Pre-Yalta purchasers at 5 could realize profits of $150.

Under the capital gains tax those who sold and profited could keep three-quarters of their gain, where they would face far heavier taxation under income tax laws on other forms of income.

Fantastic Rumors.

Fantastic rumors accompanied the rise in the securities. It was said that brokers from Washington were making purchases for clients in high places who had advance knowledge that the soviet Russians were going to redeem the czarist obligations in full.

The name of Flynn, who turned up at Yalta unexpectedly, was widely linked to the rumors. The President's explanation that he had asked Flynn along merely because he learned that his party servant was going to Moscow served to increase rather than quiet these rumors.

Speculation on Flynn's Moscow mission also served to provide fuel for gossip. It was reported on every hand that Flynn had gone to the Kremlin to insist that Stalin redeem the bonds as evidence of Russian good financial faith before seeking a 10 billion dollar credit here. It was felt that Stalin, a shrewd trader at Yalta, would gladly pay 75 millions to get 10 billions.

The anxiety to cash in on possible profit brought stenographers, clerks, and bootblacks into the lines of imperial bond purchasers. The rise gave Wall Street its first exciting speculative flurry in years.

Rise Is Checked.

The speculators ignored reports that Flynn had gone to Moscow to realize ambassadorial ambitions, nipped by the senate two years ago. They preferred to believe reports that he was agenting the Russian bid for credits and they assumed these involved the czarist bonds.

The rise was given a heavy check by a statement from Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Harry D White that there was no prospect of default settlement negotiations. The quoted prices dropped to around 8 and 9, but there is still trading in them on the New York curb market.

The soviet government repudiated the loans under official decree published by Pravda, official government newspaper, Feb. 8, 1918. At the same time imperial bonds in Russia were repudiated except those held by poor citizens, who were given soviet bonds in exchange.

BOOM DAYS END IN SHIPYARDS; THOUSANDS OUT

Mass Exodus from West Begins.

Portland, Ore., March 10 [Special]—Men from the middle west who flocked here at the start of the war to build ships are on their way home by the thousands, with many more thousands contemplating such a move in the near future.

Both here and in the San Francisco bay region, it was disclosed today by a survey, the west coast shipbuilding boom is over—except for repair work and a few contracts which will keep some of the yards moderately busy thru the summer and early fall.

Altho government spokesmen assert that no slackening of man power needs for over-all war production has taken place, figures on shipyard employment disclose a definite downward trend which is reflected in the homeward trek.

Big Layoffs Indicated.

For thousands of workers, the big paydays are ended. Many of them are taking to the highways with empty pockets, hoping to get home as they got out here—by hitch-hiking. All indications are that there will be a big increase in layoffs in the next few months.

The survey showed that the three Henry J. Kaiser yards in this area—the Swan Island, Oregon, and Vancouver yards—have laid off 13,000 workers since the first of the year and today employ 77,000 as compared with a peak of 95,000 in November, 1943.

In San Francisco the figures were even more revealing. Maritime commission yards in the bay area are today giving work to 116,000 as against a peak of 157,780 in November, 1943.

Heavy Declines Shown.

Maritime commission figures were as follows:

Richmond yard 4 now employs 4,216; peak, 5,394, November, 1943.

Western Pipe and Steel now employs 7,979; peak, 10,111, March, 1943.

Bethlehem Alameda now employs 5,771; peak, 6,604 in May, 1944.

Company representatives at the Kaiser yards here said today the company will lay off from 45,000 to 50,000 men before the end of 1945, closing the Swan Island and Oregon yards, but keeping the Vancouver yard active to complete an 88 million dollar contract for eight escort carriers.

Work to End This Year.

From 25,000 to 30,000 workers will be kept on at the Vancouver yard for the escort carrier contract, it was said. Today the Vancouver yard employs 31,000, with 30,000 at the Oregon yard and 16,000 at Swan Island.

Kaiser, who is in the east seeking nongovernment industrial jobs to keep some of his yards in operation after the war, said at a luncheon in New York yesterday that except for the Vancouver yard shipbuilding in his yards will be over by the end of 1945.

Rationing boards said they are providing gas for former shipyard workers desiring to drive back home. At employment offices it was said that for the first time since the yards opened men are seeking jobs instead of jobs seeking men and that applicants are asking for any job they can get.

In San Francisco, man power commission representatives said efforts are being made to channel men released from the shipyards into other war work. No estimate could be obtained on the number from this area who have taken the road back home to farms and inland towns and cities from which they came by the thousands at the start of the boom.

36.5 BILLIONS SPENT ON U. S. LEND-LEASE IN LAST FOUR YEARS

Washington, D. C., March 10 (AP).—Leo T. Crowley, foreign economic administrator, wrote President Roosevelt today that lend-lease totaled $1,175,000,000 during January, bringing the total expenditures under the law to $36,557,000,000. The letter took note of the fact that tomorrow is the fourth anniversary of the lend-lease act.

Crowley reported the administration had transferred abroad finished munitions valued at $18,542,000,000; war production and other industrial materials valued at $7,030,000,000; petroleum products worth $1,652,000,000, and $5,183,000,000 in foodstuffs and agricultural supplies.

Also furnished under lend-lease services were $4,151,000,000 toward training of air and navy personnel, repair of war and merchant ships, shipping and ferrying of planes.

NO-TAX CIGARET OUTGO ROSE 45 BILLIONS IN 1944

Washington, D. C., March 10 (AP).—A total of 321,856,156,236 cigarets were withdrawn from warehouses for consumption during 1944, an increase over 1943 of 25,591,856,734, the internal revenue bureau announced today.

The total included 237,852,802,186 tax paid cigarets [those which enter the normal market] and 84,003,354,050 tax free cigarets [those shipped overseas for the military forces, the Red Cross, and lend-lease]. Compared with 1943 these totals show a drop during 1944 of 19,585,514,454 in tax paid cigarets, and an increase of 45,177,371,188 in tax free cigarets.

The December total, the last month in which figures are available, was 26,191,128,353, including 17,387,713,573 tax paid and 8,803,414,780 tax free cigarets.

MANILA, March 11 [Sunday]—(AP).—American troops scored gains on mountainous battlefronts east and south of Manila, while their air force dealt heavy blows southward against Mindanao Island and northward against strategic Balete pass on Luzon, headquarters disclosed today.

Gen. MacArthur reported a strong force of Liberators dropped 300 tons on Zamboanga, on Mindanao Island, Thursday and Friday. It was the heaviest strike yet in that area, which the Japanese said was invaded Friday.

Elements of the 1st cavalry thrust into Antipolo in the foothills 13 miles east of Manila against light resistance. A headquarters spokesman said the town was not fully secured.

Gain Five Miles.

Antipolo is the southern anchor of the strongly defended Shimbu line, which the 6th division to the north breached in a major push after prolonged fighting during the last three days. The 6th gained approximately one mile from its position attained Saturday.

Indicative of the effectiveness of our concentrated bombing and artillery fire was the discovery of 900 Japanese bodies in one sector of the Zambales foothills, the bulletin reported.

Fifty miles south of Manila the 158th regimental combat group made a nine mile gain against long range machine gun and rifle fire to secure the road net between Lake Taal and Batangas bay, southeast of Manila.

Rough terrain and the enemy defenses in the mountains are providing stiff opposition for the 25th and 32d divisions to the north. More than 100 supporting Liberators bombed installations at Balete pass, the entrance to Cagayan valley.

Ignores Tokyo Claim.

MacArthur again ignored Tokyo radio reports that American forces have landed at Zamboanga, key city on the southwest coast of Mindanao Island. For the second successive day he reported heavy bombing attacks on Zamboanga. Heavy bombers of Lt. Gen. George C. Kenney's far eastern command unloaded 300 tons of bombs to shatter defense points and supply depots. A bridge also was hit.

Fighter bombers also struck Cotabato on Mindanao, across the Moro gulf from Zamboanga. Flyers reported large fires in fuel dumps were started at Zamboanga. One United States plane was lost in the attack.

Kenney's flyers continued hammering attacks on Borneo, striking Maggar airdrome at Balikpapan. A 2,000 ton Japanese freighter was attacked to the south.

FAKE BELGIAN COGNAC MADE OF SUGAR BEETS LAYS MANY G. I.S LOW

TONGRES, Belgium, March 10 (AP).—An epidemic of liquor poisoning among American soldiers has brought to light a Belgian bootleg industry being operated by peasants.

A number of soldiers have been downed by poisonous cognac in Tongres alone. In the Hasselt-Tongres-Maastricht region, raids by Belgian food controllers, excise officials, and American military police have unearthed many small distilleries hidden in peasant cottages, attics, and stables.

By evading the high tax on spirits and collecting as much as 600 francs [$12.00] from G. I.'s for a quart of faked brandy, moonshiners, and bootleggers are getting rich, by Belgian peasant standards, as long as the law doesn't catch them. The liquor is made of sugar beets and methylated spirits.

15 Sq. Miles of Tokyo Laid Waste in Raid

21ST BOMBER COMMAND, Guam, March 11 [Sunday]—(AP).—The great B-29 Super-fortress incendiary raid on Tokyo Saturday "left nothing but twisted, tumbled down rubble in its path," Maj. Gen. Curtis Le May said today.

The 21st bomber command leader added that the devastating results were "incontrovertibly established by reconnaissance photographs taken on the afternoon of the strike."

Le May said the photographs confirmed earlier reports from the returning pilots that the destruction had swept beyond the 10 square mile target in the heart of the city. The total of the ruined area was shown as 15 square miles, from which clouds of smoke had covered the returning B-29s with soot.

Fires Still Burning.

Fires were still burning at seven points in Tokyo when the photographs were taken Saturday afternoon, hours after the night strike. Three were blazing at the north end of the rectangle of destruction and four at the south end.

Some officers claimed the raid was the most devastating single blow ever laid in any war upon any city in the world.

The area of destruction, if laid upon metropolitan New York, would cover all the industrial sections of Brooklyn and Queens and half their residential sections, plus Manhattan from the Battery to 60th street.

"Shortens the War."

The destruction extends roughly from the imperial palace [which Le May said was not a target, altho Tokyo radio reported it had been set afire] to the waterfront at the mouth of the Naka river, thence approximately four miles north.

Le May added soberly: "I have something else to say at this time. I believe that all those under my command have by their participation in this single operation shortened the war.

"To what extent they have shortened it, no one can tell. But I believe that if there has been a cut from its duration only one day, or one hour, my officers and men have served a high purpose."

Eight Targets in Ruins.

Eight "identifiable industrial and urban targets lie in ruins," he added. They are the Ueno railroad station [damaged in a previous raid], the Rising Sun petroleum terminal, the Ogura Oil company, the Nisshin spinning mill, the Japan machine industry, the Maranouchi telephone exchange, Kanda market, and Hattori company. "Hundreds of small business establishments, directly concerned with war industry, many important administration buildings and other thousands of home industries were also in the area wiped out.

The 21st bomber command said it had no report of plane losses resulting from the raid, but added one or two may be missing and some landed on Iwo Island. An earlier report from the 20th air force at Washington said two of the big bombers were lost.

German West Bank Hold at Wesel Collapses.

SUPREME HDQ. ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, PARIS, March 11 (Sunday)—(AP).—American troops gained almost a mile in the Remagen bridgehead east of the Rhine yesterday while collapse of the German west bank bridgehead opposite Wesel and the mop-up of trapped pockets in the Eifel region dealt new blows to the German defenses.

The Yanks across the Rhine made their advances—deepening and lengthening the already powerful bridgehead — against the desperate opposition of enemy armor and infantry rushed up in an attempt to prevent the United States 1st army from rolling up the entire German Rhine line from the rear. The Germans, however, have not yet brought sufficient strength into the area to halt the Yanks.

Yanks Punch Inland.

On the basis of front dispatches early today, the Americans are punching inland and along the river. They gained 500 to 1,000 yards and seized new high ground as they struck for the commanding hills six miles east of the river. Only seven miles east is a new superhighway to Cologne, an ideal avenue for a northward charge toward the Ruhr industrial basin.

The Germans said American shock troops were storming across the Rhine in assault boats in the area of Honnef, five miles north in a bid to broaden the bridgehead. Supreme headquarters did not confirm this, but a field dispatch said enemy resistance was stiffening and at least one armored division was deployed against the American advance. German attempts to slash into the bridgehead yesterday were repulsed.

Foil Nazi Air Raid.

Alert United States 8th air force fighters broke up an attempt by six enemy planes to bomb the bridge yesterday in a spectacular air battle, 3,000 feet directly above the bridgehead, while German and American anti-aircraft gunners filled the sky with flak. Two German planes were shot down and two American craft were lost.

Standing outside the bridgehead of more than 50 square miles, enemy medium artillery and tank guns blasted at the bridgehead and the bridge.

To the south, the United States 3d army hammered within two miles of the Rhine city of Coblenz, and flushed 9,000 prisoners from the Eifel mountain trap which it shut on six enemy divisions by a junction Friday with the 1st army.

Recapture U. S. Equipment.

On the north side of the trap, the 1st army seized 20 miles of the Ahr river, moving so swiftly that it took 20 carloads of military supplies at Ahrweller, two flying bomb sites, an ordnance dump at Brueck, 14 miles west of the Rhine, and numerous jeeps and trucks taken by the Germans in the Ardennes break-thru. Some prisoners wore shirts of United States units mauled in that break-thru. At Brueck in the heart of the Eifels, the 1st army was eight miles or less from a second junction with the 3d army in the center of the trap. The 1st army's prisoner bag yesterday was 3,000.

On the north end of the front, a field dispatch said the long-held Wesel pocket on the west bank of the Rhine collapsed under combined blows of the Canadian 1st and United States 9th armies.

As allied forces drove within two miles of Wesel, in the northwest corner of the Ruhr, the Germans blew both bridges there and rearguards fled across the Rhine by barges in a storm of bombs and shells.

A dispatch from the 9th army front said that a spearhead regiment of the 35th infantry division cut off the last remaining escape route from the pocket late last night and reached the approaches of a railroad bridge which reportedly was blown out.

Final West Bank Battle.

This was the final act in the great battle west of the Rhine which supreme headquarters estimated cost the enemy 100,000 men in prisoners alone since Feb. 23. Twenty-two German divisions were destroyed or so badly mauled they must be refitted.

From the Netherlands front came reports by reconnaissance pilots of extensive eastward movements of German troops north of the Waal Rhine. This may indicate that the Germans have decided to abandon all of Holland south of the Zuider Zee in order to fall back on the Ijssel river and a better defensive position. Such a withdrawal would mean the abandonment by the enemy of Holland's main cities of Amsterdam, Rotterdam, the Hague, and Utrecht.

Farther south, the Germans said their soldier wounded, the aged, women and children were moving east across the Rhine in long lines in flight from the Saar industrial basin and the Palatine, the only two provinces still in enemy possession west of the Rhine.

Allied armies now were lined up on 150 miles of the Rhine's west bank from the Dutch border to near Coblenz.

The Germans said fierce fighting was raging at Honnef, with the town changing hands repeatedly. These accounts placed Honnef at the north end of the bridgehead, with Linz, six miles to the south, at the other end, and said the holdings extended four and a half miles inland.

Bridgehead Extended.

Supreme headquarters gave no hint of the size of the bridgehead except to say that it was steadily being extended and reënforced, and that the 1st army had firm control of heights east of the bridge.

A field dispatch said the fighting was of such urgency that American troops stepped from Ludendorff bridge into battle.

Railways and highways east of the Rhine leading toward the bridgehead were under allied medium and fighter bomber attack, but there was little question that a battle of the first importance was impending.

The bridgehead today was similar to Anzio and the first Normandy beachheads in that it was in easy German gun range.

It differed in that it was planted in rugged mountain country lending itself readily to defense and had the advantage of a bridge linking it with the rest of the allied armies and supply bases.

ONE DIVISION'S BAG

BY ROBERT CROMIE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WITH THE AMERICAN 3D ARMY, March 10.—The 4th armored division today gave out the impressive totals of enemy equipment destroyed or captured during its 60 hour dash from the Kyll river to the Rhine.

The figures, compiled by actual count: 406 motor vehicles in addition to 417 heavy duty trucks, 10 Mark VI [Tiger] tanks, 12 Mark V [Panther] tanks, 12 Mark IV tanks, two self-propelled guns, 36 105 mm. guns, 125 20 mm. guns, six Nebelwerfers [mortars], 29 75 mm. guns, 17 volkswagons [equivalent of our jeep], 12 anti-aircraft guns, 16 anti-tank guns, 39 88s, 31 motorcycles, one bicycle, three artillery batteries, one ammunition dump, in addition to 10,000 rounds of 88 shells, and 4,000 rounds of 20 mm. shells.

The 4th also has processed 4,207 prisoners thru the cages and still has an estimated 1,000 more not processed. It also destroyed many horse drawn wagons.

Tells of Bridge Seizure.

ON THE RHINE BRIDGEHEAD, March 10—(AP).—Maj. Ben Cothran, of the 9th armored division's combat command B which captured the Remagen bridge on Wednesday said today "that the Yanks' problem was not so much taking the bridge as getting something across to back up the two battalions of infantry who were across at daybreak Thursday.

"We wanted to get tanks and tank destroyers across in case of a counterattack," he said. "The Germans had managed to do some damage to the bridge, but the main charges had failed to explode. Anyway, at that time the bridge could handle only one-way traffic. Then a tank destroyer slid off the bridging and it took three hours to get it pulled out of the way.

"The engineers did a terrific job on the bridge. The first thing they did was check for demolitions. They found several heavy charges which had not gone up because they were defective. The engineers ripped out all the wiring and then went to work repairing the damage. They were under the command of Lt. John Mitchell [of Brentwood, Pa.].

"They had the bridge repaired in a couple of hours and about midnight the first tank rolled across. By daybreak we had a company of tanks over to support the infantry and things were moving."

GERMAN WAR REPORT.

The Germans' broadcast war bulletin said yesterday:

"On the lower Rhine our troops frustrated the enemy attempt to split up the bridgehead of Wesel in self-sacrificing fighting, destroyed many enemy tanks and brought in more than 100 prisoners in a counter-attack.

"On the middle Rhine 13 allied planes were brought down in defense against enemy low-flying planes and bomber formations.

"On Lake Laacher and in the Eifels our troops are engaged in heavy defensive fighting against American troops. The enemy was dislodged from Andernach and lost several tanks. The enemy attacking at the Salm, north of Trier, on a broad front, gained little ground in spite of superiority.

"East of Trier and in the lower Vosges many enemy thrusts were repelled."

BLOCKBUSTERS HIT BERLIN; RAIL YARDS IN RUHR BLASTED

LONDON, March 10 (AP).—Berlin reeled under a shower of blockbusters tonight following heavy day raids on Germany.

Mosquitos of the royal air force bomber command gave Berlin its 19th consecutive raid by night and the German radio reported another formation over western Germany when the Mosquitos started home.

Marauders, Invaders, and Havocs of the 9th air force hit rail yards at Lennep, Lippstadt, Neiderscheld, and Erndtebruck in the Ruhr and bombed main roads at Altenkirchen and Siegen.

Flying from bases in Italy, Thunderbolts of the United States 12th air force attacked enemy rail targets in northwestern Yugoslavia and southern Austria for the fourth successive day, while mediums continued assaults on the Brenner pass line and the United States' 15th air force hit rail bridges northeast of Verona.

EX-CHICAGO MAN AIDED CROSSING OF RHINE RIVER

Lt. Col. Leonard C. Engeman, of Minneapolis, Minn., who directed a task force of heavy fire power participating in the 1st army drive across the Rhine river in Germany, lived in Chicago before entering the army, friends informed THE TRIBUNE yesterday.

He had headquarters here for four years as assistant district manager for the Minnesota and Ontario Paper company, the home office of which is in Minneapolis.

Col. Engeman was graduated from the University of Minnesota, where he was a member of the reserve officers' training corps unit. His wife, Kathryn, and two sons, Michael, 3, and Karl, 1, live in Redwood Falls, Minn., where his parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Engeman, also reside.

BRIDGE AREA IS HOTTEST SPOT ON WEST FRONT

BY JOHN THOMPSON.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WITH THE U. S. 1ST ARMY ACROSS THE RHINE, March 10.—The 1st army's surprise bridgehead at Remagen remained the hottest spot on the western front today as the Germans poured in tons of artillery shells and rushed up panzer and infantry forces.

Lt. Gen. Hodges' troops are now fighting for a range of hills to the east, between the Rhine and the superhighway which runs north to Cologne.

Censorship prevents disclosure of the dimensions of the bridgehead, but there is speculation that, according to normal military calculations, it should be 10 miles wide and 5 deep. The bridgehead has not yet reached that status, and is still well within artillery range.

Prepared for Attacks.

The Americans, as they drive forward, are prepared to meet a counter-attack any time. So far there have been minor attacks, more in the nature of containing actions, by small combat teams coming into action and seeking to find our forward lines. Armored infantry from one panzer division has been encountered, but this German unit is believed to be deficient in armored equipment.

Except for these enemy elements, the American bridgehead fighters are up against various odds and ends of almost every type unit which fled across the Rhine in the face of our advance. These miscellaneous troops, which included one bakery company, have been welded into small combat groups to fight delaying actions until larger organizations are able to reach the scene.

Yanks Reorganize.

The principal reason why the bridgehead is not farther inland is that it is necessary to reorganize the American forces which were first thrown across the river.

When the golden opportunity came to cross the Rhine cheaply, Maj. Gen. John W. Leonard of the 9th armored division hurled in everything in that area, regardless of organization. Other units were hastily diverted from their missions and sent rolling across the river, so that it became necessary on the other side to sort every one out into ordinary unit organizations before renewing the attack.

When the Germans succeeded in reacting to the crossing, their artillery began registering on Remagen. By yesterday it had reached the most intense stage troops had ever encountered, but the job of reënforcing the bridgehead went ahead.

Shells of every caliber are pounding Remagen and the surrounding area. Their fragments whistle and sizzle thru the air, while columns of troops and vehicles move on thru what at times seems to be a waterfall of flaming metal.

It is a relief for the Yanks to get across the big Ludendorff bridge and start fighting inland, for almost all the German artillery is concentrated on the bridgehead. Because of a high hill we hold at the eastern end of the bridgehead, it is almost impossible for the Germans to hit the bridge with their shells.

There are reports that the German volkssturm [people's army] is being called up to defend the eastern bank. Many of them are being employed at night on guard duty to give the regular infantry some rest. Americans who captured one German colonel reported he was very stiff and very sour. The colonel was quoted as saying allied bombing had caused damage beyond belief.

Killed in Air Raid

DOROTHEA WIECK.

LONDON, March 10 (AP).—The German news agency D. N. B. said today that a German film actress, Dorothea Wieck, who once won a personal compliment from Adolf Hitler, was killed in the recent allied air raid on Dresden. She was known to American film audiences for her role in the German picture "Maedchen in Uniform."

ACQUIT 2 YANKS IN ENGLAND OF BRAWL KILLING

LICHFIELD, England, March 10 (AP).—Two American paratroopers were acquitted of manslaughter and assault charges today at a United States army court martial in which one American said he started a hotel fight after overhearing a British paratrooper say that, after this war, they "were going to have war with the Yanks."

A free-for-all fight ensued between the American and British soldiers and a Liverpool laborer, passing the hotel, was killed.

The two United States paratroopers, Privates Thomas L. Bailey and Moses Stukes, were cleared of all charges after nearly two hours' deliberation.

PINBOY SHARES RHINE HEROISM OF BUTCHER LAD

ON THE RHINE BRIDGEHEAD, March 10 (AP).—A former Ohio butcher boy and a Pennsylvanian who once set up pins in a bowling alley today were hailed as heroes of the 1st army's establishment of a bridgehead at Remagen.

Sgt. Alexander Drabik.

Sgt. Alexander A. Drabik, butcher boy of Holland, O., has been identified by Brig. Gen. William M. Hoge, of Lexington, Mo., whose armored forces took the Remagen bridge, as the first man across the Rhine in the daring coup.

Shoot as They Run.

The Pennsylvanian, Lt. John B. Mitchell, 27, of Pittsburgh, was named as the officer who led a daring charge of American engineers across the bridge and cut wires to a cache of German explosives which could have blown the 1,200 foot span skyward.

Drabik, Gen. Hoge said yesterday, was the first American to step on the east bank of the river, in the forefront of 10 rifle men shooting as they ran in a wild dash which so astounded the Germans they failed to blow up the structure.

Thirty-four year old Sgt. Drabik, grimy from combat and cradling an M-1 gun in his arm, told his story at Hoge's command post yesterday.

ON THE RHINE BRIDGEHEAD.

"It was like this," he said. "Lt. Timmerman [Lt. Carl Timmerman, West Point, Neb.] told us to go across the bridge, with the first platoon leading.

Took Shelter in Craters.

"When I brought up the third platoon the first was keeping the Germans in the tower busy. So I went by them and yelled to my men to go across—firing into the tunnels in the hill on the other side."

"We ran down the middle of the bridge, shooting as we went. I didn't stop because I knew if I kept moving they couldn't hit me."

A machine gun squad came up behind as Drabik's riflemen ran forward 200 yards on the German side and formed a skirmish line.

"We took cover in some bomb craters," Drabik said. "Then we just sat and waited for the others to come in. That's the way it was."

MUNITION DUMP ON FOOT: THAT'S PVT. JOE GARCIA

He Carries as Much as a 10 Ton Truck.

BY SEYMOUR KORMAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WITH THE U. S. 36TH INFANTRY DIVISION, March 10—They call him the one-man, mobile arsenal of the 7th army, and he is a welcome fellow to have around when the going is hot and the supply line extended. He is Pvt. Joseph Garcia, 5834 Nickerson av., Chicago, Ill., six feet, two inches and 220 pounds of machine gunner.

Joe is with A company of the 143d regiment of this veteran division. Formerly employed by the Ilg Electric Ventilating company, 2850 Crawford av., Chicago, he has been overseas five months, fighting thru the Vosges mountains and in the Alsatian plain with the 36th.

A normal load for him to carry into combat includes a light machine gun, a carbine with five clips of ammunition and 100 extra rounds, a .45 caliber pistol with 3 ammunition clips and another 100 rounds, plus any number of hand grenades that he can tuck in his pockets, fasten to his buttonholes, or attach to his straps.

Pile on 20 More.

"What's so much about that?" Joe grinned. "After all, I don't carry the tripod for the machine gun."

Getting ready for an attack one night, Joe had the usual amount of gear piled on his frame when he was told his platoon was short of grenades. Twenty more grenades were brought to him and festooned on his anatomy.

"I got up there," Joe related, "and the boys were really hurting for grenades. I passed out what I had and went back to get some more. I got enough that time—three dozen, maybe.

Throws Them Himself.

"The krauts were getting a little mad and dropped some stuff around me. I didn't have time to distribute the three dozen grenades, so I threw them all myself.

"I guess I killed quite a few krauts—our platoon had a good score that night."

The men of A company speak very fondly of Joe, giving him various graphically descriptive titles such as "the ammunition dump."

AWARD MEDALS TO 3D ARMY MEN FROM MIDWEST

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WITH AMERICAN 3D ARMY, March 10.—Twelve middle western members of the 4th armored division have received medals by order of Maj. Gen. Hugh J. Gaffey, their commander.

Corp. Donald U. Cunz of Aurora, Ill., received the bronze star for volunteering as a jeep driver for the 35th battalion to carry messages over perilous roads at all hours of the day. His citation says that "he has never failed to accomplish any mission—has gained the reputation of being able to go anywhere, any time under any conditions."

Indiana soldiers sharing in the awards included: Staff Sgt. Charles W. Bennett, Hammond, squad leader in a 10th armored infantry battalion, the bronze star for saving a damaged tank under fire after running and crawling 150 yards to reach the vehicle and its wounded crew.

Chicagoan on Radio Tells Story as 20 Nazis Die

ROME, Italy, March 10 (AP).—An action in which a raiding party from company K, 361st infantry, killed 20 Germans and captured three at the cost of four wounded was cited today in the allied bulletin. Pvt. Albert Lopez, 602 S. May st., Chicago, gave a description of the action over radio to headquarters. The raiders slipped thru mined areas to within 10 feet of a strongpoint north of Monte Belmonte and attacked in the face of five machine guns.

BRITISH BUSES, MINES, PLANTS HIT BY STRIKES

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, March 10.—Strikes in five areas of Britain this week-end affected bus transport, coal production and output of war factories. War workers and soldiers on leave were forced to walk in several Tyneside towns due to a strike of 3,000 bus drivers and conductors, who oppose an extra trip added to their new schedules.

In the Midlands, sit-down strikes at an aircraft factory in Wolverhampton and an automotive plant in Birmingham held up production. Three thousand automobile strikers passed the time playing cards. The wildcat aircraft factory strike was called in a dispute over meals in the plant canteen.

The plant fields in Scotland and northern England were crippled by strikes of 1,400 and 1,600 workers, respectively, in disputes over wages.

Commando Raid Captures U. S. Colonel, Say Nazis

LONDON, March 10 [Ruters].—The German Transocean news agency claimed tonight that an American colonel was captured during yesterday's German commando raid at Granville on the Normandy coast. "The German commandos were landed opposite the American officers' mess, where they penetrated immediately and captured numerous officers, among them a colonel. The American losses were estimated at several companies. One hundred German prisoners of war were freed," the reports said.

GOEBBELS CALLS ON ALL GERMANS TO 'STAND FAST'

LONDON, March 10 (AP).—Nazi Propaganda Minister Goebbels, speaking on the eastern front, called on German troops and workers today to stand fast, and said that if they did so "our capitulation will never come."

Paraphrasing Prime Minister Churchill's famed speech after Dunkerque; Goebbels declared at the west Silesian towns of Lauban and Goerlitz, according to a DNB news agency broadcast.

"We must fight them in the fields, in the forests, in our cities, at every street corner and in every house until they are bled white and cannot continue the struggle. Then the hour of our triumph will strike."

Must 'See It Thru.'

Goebbels asserted that "there is nothing left to do but see it thru in the east and west."

"We must not yield an inch of German soil without taking a bloody toll of the enemy," he cried.

"The enemy has left us in no doubt as to what he would do to us, to our women, our children, even our children's children if in this hour of destiny . . . we failed or lost courage—laid down our arms and abandoned our cause."

With the Russians across the Oder in the east and the Americans across the Rhine in the west, German military commentators speculated that fresh blows were impending.

Predicts Drive in North.

Capt. Ludwig Sertorius predicted the Canadian 1st, the British 2d, and the United States 9th armies would make simultaneous attempts to cross the Rhine.

Sertorius said the "main weight of battle" still lay with this army group and that the United States 1st army bridgehead at Remagen was in hilly countryside with less chance of exploitation than the northern German plain.

A different view of the Remagen bridgehead was taken by Transocean news agency correspondent Guenther Weber, broadcasting from headquarters of Field Marshal Karl Von Rundstedt. He said the allies intended to build Remagen into a major operative base.

Allied broadcasters likewise were active. The Brussels radio said the Germans so far had shown no signs of any real counter-drive against the Remagen bridgehead. The Luxemburg radio said German prisoners were pouring in so rapidly that counting them had been delayed 48 hours.

JEEP BEATS NAZI CAR, SAVES 5 YANK FLYERS FROM NO-MAN'S LAND

LONDON, March 10 (AP).—Five members of the crew crash landed their flak torn Flying Fortress in no man's land northeast of Strasbourg recently.

"We had only a faint idea of where we were," said Pilot Lt. Earl D. Greenstreet of Kankakee, Ill., "and we heard a lot of shooting. Two motor vehicles were racing toward the plane. A jeep from the west and a German car from the east. 'Get the hell aboard in a hurry,' an infantryman yelled as the jeep skidded up to us. We did.

"The jeep shot away and rifle fire whistled around us. I looked back and saw a load of Germans pull up to the plane. By that time we really were rolling and got back to a first aid station."

The entire crew was listed as missing for a week before they got back to their base. Among those rescued by the jeep was Lt. George J. Arnold, Cicero, Ill., bombardier. Four others had parachuted safely. All are members of the 390th bombardment group commanded by Col. Joseph A. Moller, Chicago.

EUROPEAN WAR MAY WIND UP IN MOUNTAINS

Nazis' Last Stand Seen in Central Mass.

BY COL. CONRAD H. LANZA.

Present evidence indicates that the Nazi high command intends to continue the war until the bitter end. How long off that is will depend upon how much support the Nazis receive from the German people. The increasing number of prisoners being taken on both the east and west fronts indicates that some Germans are convinced that their cause is hopeless, and that further fighting is useless.

To encourage and spread this idea, on March 6 Gen. Eisenhower broadcast an appeal to German officers and civilian officials to surrender their men and towns. On the same day, Russia broadcast an appeal to Austrians to desert Germany and revolt.

No one yet knows what results will be obtained by the desertion of Germans from the Nazi cause. So far radio broadcasts have not had much effect. In spite of the broadcasts from Moscow, presented as the views of the Free Germany committee, composed of captured generals, nothing occurred. This broadcast series has now been discontinued.

Bombing Is Another Matter.

The influence of bombing of cities upon the Germans is another matter. According to German accounts, and our own announcements, cities full of refugees have been bombed. The loss of life has been frightful. This method of fighting has been tried previously by the Japanese in China; was started originally in the Spanish civil war; was used later by the Germans against English towns, and has been used on an increasing scale by the allies against Germany. All these nations have taken it. It has intensified hatred and opposition rather than removed them.

Italy is an exception. She could not take it. When her cities were bombed she promptly quit.

Undoubtedly there are many anti-Nazis in Germany. There are other Germans who are Nazis, but not of the suicidal hero type. Yet there are many Germans who are, or have been, Nazis willingly. It seems likely that Hitler still has a majority of his people back of him. He has been the idol of the working classes. He was one of them, and is looked up to as their leader and a champion of their rights. Not all of these Germans approve of everything that Hitler has done. Perhaps a vast majority were opposed to his detestable cruelty against the Jews. But on the whole, they have accepted Hitler, and still back him.

Some Will Fight to End.

So it seems likely that some Germans will stick to the Nazi party and fight it out as long as they can.

It is consequently advisable to determine what the German Nazi high command could do in what appears to be a hapless cause.

This writer has no inside information as to German intentions, judging only from the moves made and known of, and considering the strategical situation as the Germans would do, it is possible to figure out something of their plans.

Present indications are that the German high command, composed of leaders who are threatened with sudden death should they be captured alive, are doing all they can to prolong the war, in the hope that something will eventually turn up to their advantage, provided enough German troops remain with them.

Stand in Central Mountains.

Should this occur, the signs point to a withdrawal to the European central mountain mass. This would include the south German states of Baden, Wurtemberg, and Bavaria; Austria, Bohemia, Moravia, and part of Slovakia; the northwest corner of Hungary; Croatia, including at least part of Bosnia, and North Italy, to include all of the Po valley for as long as possible.

This would be an area roughly 480 miles wide from west to east; by 320 miles from north to south, well over 150,000 square miles full of mountains and forests, suitable for protracted defense.

The west front is covered by the Rhine [now breached]. Just east of it are mountains and the famous Black forest. This is a very difficult country for attack. Neutral Switzerland on the south protects that flank. The north flank is the weakest of the entire central mountain mass. Presumably this would eventually be along the low mountains extending eastward north of the Main river and thru the Thuringer forest. It might be some time before the allies could reach this line as there are a number of good defensive positions farther north suitable for delaying actions.

Old Czech Forts Useful.

East of this line is the old Czechoslovak frontier facing Saxony. It is presumed, altho not known, that Germany has had the foresight to preserve and recondition the strong fortifications which the Czechs had constructed for their own use. These extend along the Sudeten mountains to near Slovakia.

In Slovakia, northwest Hungary, and Croatia, the Germans are now close to the line which covers the central mountain mass. They have fought hard for it. They recently undertook an offensive which straightened out their front by eliminating a considerable Russian bridgehead west of the Hron river. Many wondered why Germany, in her extremity, sent her few reserves off for this job. The German high command was looking ahead.

ROMMEL CALLED LEADER OF PLOT TO KILL HITLER

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, March 10. — Field Marshal Erwin Rommel, who had the reputation of being Hitler's favorite general, was one of the July conspirators against the German fuehrer, and would have asked the allies for an armistice if the plot to assassinate Hitler with a bomb had succeeded, the Germans were told tonight by the British Broadcasting corporation's German editor.

Scoffing at Goebbel's original claim the conspirators were only "a small, unimportant clique," the broadcaster asserted new information showed that Rommel was the leader of the conspiracy. He said other members of the assassination high command were Col. Gen. von Falkenhausen, military commander in Beligum, and Gen. von Stuelpnagel, commander in France.

Something went wrong, however, the broadcaster added, and Rommel was announced as wounded July 17 when royal air force planes attacked his car. He died Oct. 14. The B. B. C. editor implied the Nazis may have discovered his connection with the plot and eliminated him.

COLLINS' CORPS SPEARHEADED COLOGNE DRIVE

Disclose Part Played by Heroes of St. Lo.

BY JOHN THOMPSON.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WITH THE U. S. 1ST ARMY ACROSS THE RHINE, March 10.—Maj. Gen. J. Lawton [Lightnin' Joe] Collins' 7th corps was the tactical unit which spearheaded 1st army troops in their break-thru across the Roer river and captured Cologne, it was disclosed tonight.

Gen. Collins.

It was under Collins' command that the 104th, 8th, and 99th infantry divisions and the veteran 3d armored division operated in this spectacular offensive, which smashed the German strength on the Cologne plain.

The Roer was stormed by the 104th and 8th divisions in line. The 3d armored then drove over the bridges secured by Maj. Gen. Terry Allen's 104th and fanned out northeast toward the Erft river with the doughboys close behind. The 8th division, having more trouble, moved along on the left.

Same Pattern Beyond Erft.

Once the Erft canal and river system was crossed, the 7th corps followed the same pattern. Maj. Gen. Walter Lauer's 99th division, which had met the full force of the German Ardennes offensive in the Monschau-Bullinger area, was passed thru armor. Then it took off north along the Erft, opposite the 9th army, sweeping the entire area up as far as the Rhine just below Duesseldorf.

While his left flank was racing along in this fashion, Collins turned the 3d armored and Allen's 104th loose for Cologne, with the 8th coming up on the right to prevent German troops in the city from fleeing down the river road to Bonn.

The 7th corps crossed the Roer on Feb. 23 and the Erft a week later. Last Tuesday it attacked Cologne, and on Wednesday the town was completely secured, with the 3d armored and the 104th's soldiers along the battered city's Rhine waterfront, the same day that the 9th armored division of the central corps snatched its unexpected bridgehead at Remagen.

Yanks Hammer Away.

This type of action, which finds the Americans hammering at the enemy day and night, without giving him a chance to stand anywhere, is typical of the operations which have characterized Collins and his corps since they came ashore on "Utah" beach on Normandy's Cotentin peninsula.

The 7th corps at that time cut the peninsula with the 9th infantry division, then turned north and knocked off Cherbourg in four days. It was this same corps which Lt. Gen. Bradley, then 1st army commander, used to spearhead his famous breakthru at St. Lo.

A few weeks later, while the 5th corps was taking Paris, Collins again took off, across the Seine river. He again spearheaded a 1st army offensive. Moving faster than the Germans anticipated, the 7th corps fought into Belgium, and between Maubeuge and Mons captured or killed nearly 30,000 Germans who were hurrying home to the Siegfried line.

Break Loose Again.

Again without giving the enemy time to adjust to the situation, Lt. Gen. Hodges, the 1st army, and the 7th corps were loose.

With the veteran 1st infantry and the 3d armored, the 7th knifed thru the Siegfried line. Every one thought then that the 7th corps was a cinch to keep right on going to the Rhine, for the Germans were disorganized.

But at the crucial moment, our elastic supply line snapped, and Joe Collins was stopped. And while he had to wait, the Germans rushed up troops, so that when he could start again, the 7th corps found it a tough job to take Aachen and fight on thru the Hurtgen forest.

The crack American corps again distinguished itself in the German break-thru. At that time it was waiting along the Roer for the dams to be taken so it could attack again.

Spearheads Counter-Attack.

When Field Marshal von Rundstedt broke into the Ardennes, Hodges lifted Collins and his corps headquarters, gave them new troops, and tucked them secretly into position opposite the western tip of the German salient. It was to be a counter-attacking force.

Collins sent Maj. Gen. Ernest J. Harmon in to liquidate the last German effort to outflank the 1st army, and the 2d armored virtually exterminated the German 2d panzer division. Then the 7th corps was ready to strike.

And it led off a counter-attack which gradually spread all along the 1st army line until, in conjunction with the 3d army, it eliminated the entire German salient.

Once more, Hodges shifted his crack corps back into its old Roer position. And there, on Feb. 23, Collins opened the new Rhine offensive.

'Recap and Roll'

The civilian automobile and truck tire shortage promises to become so severe by summer that motorists will be faced with the prospect of riding on recaps or rims, Rae E. Walters, regional OPA administrator, said yesterday. Passenger car tire supplies will not even meet demands of B and C card drivers, he said, and trucks will have to run on casings recapped as many as four or five times.

Walters said the truck tire shortage will increase with greater successes on war fronts, because military tires wear out in proportion to the speed of advances and lengthening supply lines. He said Mayor Kelly had provided a terse slogan for Tire Conservation week, which started Friday. It is "Let's recap and roll!"

PRAISE POURS IN ON EISENHOWER FOR VICTORIES

PARIS, March 10 (AP).—Congratulations poured in to Gen. Eisenhower today on allied victories in Germany and the American crossing of the Rhine. Prime Minister Churchill hailed "the great victory won by the allied armies under your command by which the defeat or destruction of all the Germans west of the Rhine will be achieved." Churchill praised the "remarkable speed and flexibility of the American armies," and expressed pleasure that British and Canadian armies "should have played a part in your far-reaching and triumphant combinations."

Among other messages were these: United States Navy Secretary Forrestal: "The United States navy joins the nation in admiration for the feats of the armies under your command and particularly sends its congratulations to the 1st army on its historic crossing of the Rhine."

Speaker Rayburn of the United States house of representatives: "At the request of the house of representatives, unanimously expressed, I send to you, your officers and the men of all the services under your command our congratulations and thanks for the magnificent victories recently achieved on the western front."

WRECKED DOCKS OF MARSEILLE COME TO LIFE

Jobs for All, but Many Are in Rags.

War Goods Pour In

NANCY, France, March 10 (AP).—Almost 2,000,000 tons of war material has been brought into France thru the southern beaches and ports since Aug. 15, Lt. Gen. Devers said today. The 6th army group commander reported that during the last four months alone 807,000 tons of food, oil, ammunition, vehicles, and other supplies had been delivered to the French and American armies in this sector.

BY DAVID DARRAH.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MARSEILLE, France, March 10.—Altho the docks of this great port are strewn for miles with piles of twisted iron and debris, the harbor teems with activity and is cluttered day and night with ships.

The port has been cleared for traffic and despite destruction from bombing is able to handle almost the normal amount of sea borne traffic, thanks to American engineers and divers, who cleared out the harbor so fast that the first Liberty ship came into port as far back as September. The Germans, on leaving, sank about 60 ships in the harbor and blew up much of the port installation.

American soldiers and French civilian employes swarm over the docks.

Much Damage in City.

The city has suffered much from bombing. The old port, probably the most iniquitous and unsanitary quarter on the Mediterranean, was wiped out by the Germans in 1943 because they wanted to fortify the area and it was the hiding place of resistance forces.

Marseille seems to be a miserable conglomeration of nondescript and wretched humanity. The streets swarm with ragged, half starved, undisciplined people, who beg and complain that the Americans have not kept their promise to better their condition. Traffic is a maze of confusion and misdirection mixed with American, British, and other allied troops.

Black Market Flourishes.

The black market is solidly organized and rampant. Little is sold legitimately and what does get into the free market is doled out with medicine dropper scantiness.

In a small badly paved street, near the old port, you can see the black market. Every one in Marseille knows about it. There, every day, you can see a cosmopolitan crowd. Even the ragamuffins seem to have money. American cigarets sell at 70 francs a pack, French at 50. There are also cans of corned beef, chocolate, and candy. A pair of socks is quoted at 130 francs, pants 800, a shirt, 500. A little farther on can be found woolen scarves, soap, and even watches. Down at the end of the street stand four policemen, but they do not intervene. They are there just in case rioting breaks out.

Work for All.

There are no unemployed in Marseille. Every one can get a job working at the port. But authorities say the urgent problem is to get industry, particularly metallurgical and naval construction, working again. Management has disappeared. Many managers of factories have been interned.

In Marseille 15 enterprises already have been requisitioned and are run by the state. These include three naval shops and two repair shops. The electric power plant also has been requisitioned. The seized enterprises are operated by a directorate named by decree with a consultative committee of the workers.

Marseille, like all the Mediterranean, is pretty red. They first asked for American food and some supplies were distributed. Then the town authorities wanted ships diverted to bring supplies from North Africa, and this was done.

Then they asked for trucks and they were allotted—200 of them this last week. Finally they proposed that the American army should handle the distribution problem since labor is scarce, and here the American authorities called a halt.

French Claims on Germany Spur Demands by Belgium

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BRUSSELS, Belgium, March 10.—With an allied victory looming ever nearer, Belgium is formulating the demands she will make upon a vanquished Germany at the peace conference.

Gen. De Gaulle's repeated statements that France's frontier rests on the Rhine and his claim to the occupation of the Ruhr for an indeterminate period have provoked counter-claims by certain Brussels political circles. They insist that Belgium obtain economic compensation for her ruined industry and territorial guarantees against future Teutonic military aggression which twice within a generation violated her neutrality to make the onslaught on France.

Of Concern to Holland.

The delicate and touchy angle of Belgium's war aims is the fact that any alteration of her eastern frontiers involves rectification of her border with the Netherlands, which Holland jealously regards as inviolate.

Both Holland and Belgium consider they are entitled to a slice of the Rhineland if that area is amputated from Germany and that France is not justified in taking a whole loaf. They further believe they have justifiable claims for a portion of the proceeds of Ruhr industries while their industrial plants are being rehabilitated.

The fact that Ruhr factories have been flattened by bombing does not change the viewpoint, as belief is generally held that Germany will soon reconstruct the producing facilities there, probably with allied aid.

Neither Holland nor Belgium appears willing to take part in a military occupation of Germany, and each is ready to forgo any claim against Ruhr output if it is predicated on sending troops across the Rhine.

"Belgium is a small country of only 8,000,000 inhabitants, and regardless of what we consider our rights, we do not wish to antagonize the next generation of Germans with a deep seated feeling of revenge and hatred," said an informant, who is a former deputy. "If the Rhine is adopted as Germany's western frontier, however, we do not believe the entire left bank should be handed to France. We consider the area between Cologne and Duesseldorf or even farther north to Duisburg justly due to Belgium.

Problem Complicated.

"The problem is complicated by the existence of the Dutch salient along the Maas river, which resulted in the Nazis' capture of Eben Emael in 24 hours because they violated Dutch neutrality and attacked from north of the town of Vise. We also are determined to renew our demands for sovereignty over the south banks of the Scheldt estuary to protect the river mouth and Antwerp."

All personages I consulted expressed doubt that the Netherlands would join in an alliance with Belgium and France for their common safeguard against Germany in the future.

"Belgium alone cannot align with France else she becomes a mere satellite of a larger and more powerful partner," said one informant. "And the scheme is unworkable without Holland's participation."

Wary of League.

Finally economic ties between Holland and Germany and Dutch apprehensions over kindling German antipathy are considered too strong to be overcome by Dutch expansionists who want the Netherlands to seize the Rhine bend from Nijmegen down to Duesseldorf and absorb the textile towns of Muenchen-Gladbach and Krefeld as an annex to Limburg's industry.

All my informants expressed the conviction that Germany will rise again 20 years hence as a powerful economic and therefore military factor in Europe, and none seemed content to accept a security guarantee from a renamed league of nations as protection against future reprisals by the reich.

BONDHOLDERS OBJECT TO CITY TRACTION PLAN

Objections to the municipal ownership plan for the elevated and surface lines pending in federal court were filed with Judge Michael L. Igoe yesterday by trustees for the elevated lines, the bondholders' committee of the elevated lines, and H. M. Barman, a bond holder in the Northwestern Elevated Railways company, part of the elevated lines.

All three petitioners objected to the projected price of $12,162,500 for the properties as inadequate because it leaves out certain classes of security holders and because pending legislation might affect the issue. They objected to the city's proposal to take over only the leases and operating agreements which it desires and to the city's not specifying which "nonoperating" properties it wishes to acquire.

The petitioners also objected to the plan to set aside gross receipts above operating expenses for the city after May 1 and alleged that the plan for handling "materials and supplies" accounts is unfair to the "L."

A group of junior security holders of the surface lines filed objections to the city's purchase offer of 75 million dollars, and contended that it failed to give them any equity and abrogated city obligations under the reorganization of 1907.

PURSE TAKEN IN LOOP STORE.

Mrs. Thomas Wilson, 4815 Woodlawn av., laid her purse containing $25, ration books and keys, on a bench yesterday while she entered a phone booth in a loop department store. When she finished telephoning, it was gone, she told police.

CITIZENS NICKED AS N. Y. NICKELS CLICK IN SUBWAY

Subsidized Fare Is Hot Potato for City.

BY CHARLES GOTTHART.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, March 10.—Municipal ownership of New York city's sprawling transportation system has cost the tax payers a sum rapidly approaching 50 million dollars. They pay in realty and other tax levies the annual deficits resulting from the 5 cent fare, a political hot potato that no elected city official has been willing to handle.

Inquiry today into this city's transportation situation, prompted by Illinois legislative moves to swing Chicago's street car and elevated-subway system over to municipal ownership, disclosed that New York's problem is growing progressively worse from a financial standpoint.

In no year since unification of the New York subway, elevated, trolley, and bus system in 1940, has the city realized an adequate return on its 1 billion, 525 million dollar transportation investment.

War Increases Problems.

Promised operating economies have failed to materialize and costs have mounted steadily, partially because of war factors beyond the control of management, that have affected other types of business as well.

Altho total revenues in the fiscal year ended June 30, 1944, rose to $125,159,869, from $124,710,404 the year before, operating and other income fell to $16,980,731, from $24,845,087 in the 1943 fiscal period. The latter figures fell far short of the amounts needed to pay interest on the city's bonds issued to finance the system or otherwise service the big transportation debt.

Were adequate provision made for debt service, the accumulated transportation deficit by the end of the 1944 fiscal year would have been computed at 37 million dollars. The current year's budget carries an accumulated $41,118,808 deficit, and by the next fiscal year the figure will have grown to 50 millions, as forecast recently by Mayor Fiorello La Guardia.

Pay Rolls Increase.

Operating pay rolls are up 15 millions from pre-war levels. The ratio of operating cost to operating revenue has mounted steadily.

Hesitancy of political leaders to advocate an increased fare is based in part on the fact that the complicated transfer of securities finally carried out in June, 1940, was based on the value of the properties under a 5 cent fare. Holders of securities of the old privately owned companies would have demanded better terms if a 10 cent fare had been considered.

In the six years of legal wrangling that preceded the deal, there was no political suggestion that the established fare would fail to carry the load, despite the fact that a 10 cent fare had been found necessary on the privately owned bus system that handles a relatively small part of the city's transportation.

7 Cent Fare Covers Cost.

Traction experts report that a 7 cent municipal fare would cover all costs and avoid the subsidy which burdens realty and other taxpayers, and that a 10 cent fare would provide sufficient leeway to finance improvements and extensions along with much needed rehabilitation of the system. There has been no serious consideration of an odd-penny fare that would exactly cover the cost of transportation.

How the issue is dodged politically is evident from the complicated "transportation tax" proposal advanced by Mayor La Guardia last summer but since neglected.

Among other ideas, the mayor had suggested taxing New York renters on the basis of 2 per cent of the rents paid on residential properties, taxing home owners on the rental value of the homes they occupy, and taxing commuters a flat 40 cents a week for the privilege of working in the city and using its transportation.

This would produce 50 million dollars a year, altho the mayor conceded a 10 cent fare would bring in 125 millions more than is now dropped into the thousands of turnstiles thruout the city.

City Ownership Fails.

New York has had extensive experience with municipal ownership, little of it satisfactory financially. The city has financed the construction of all except an infinitesimal part of the subway system, first opened in 1904, and in 1932 built its own "independent" subway system.

City bonds were issued to finance the construction of subways turned over for operation by companies that eventually became the Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit and the Interborough Rapid Transit companies, into which the city had put 400 million dollars.

Under the original I. R. T. contract, the city collected interest and sinking fund charges on its initial investment until the company was taken over in 1940. Supplementary "dual contracts" were drawn in 1913 to cover the city's additional investments in new subways built for both I. R. T. and B. M. T. Under these the city collected nothing between 1929 and 1940, except for about 4 million dollars in 1932.

Miss Nellie G. McMahon receiving plaque from County School Supt. Puffer yesterday.

Thirty friends and co-workers met with Miss Nellie G. McMahon of 1036 S. Oakley av. yesterday at luncheon in the Morrison hotel to observe her 25th anniversary as assistant superintendent of Cook county schools. Noble J. Puffer, superintendent, and the staff marked the occasion wth a plaque which they presented to her.

Miss McMahon supervises the 5th district, embracing 38 elementary and four high school districts in the townships of Lyons, Palos, and Stickney. She first taught school in the district in 1909, after being graduated from the De Kalb Normal school.

"Back roads were none too good when I began visiting schools as an assistant supervisor in 1920," Miss McMahon recalled, "but I shifted from a horse and buggy to a model T Ford as soon as I could." She has seen her area grow from one in which there were only one room crossroads schools to urban communities having several large schools. She is a native of the Palos Park area.

MILITARY RULE GETS FIRST BIG TEST ON RHINE

BY ROBERT CROMIE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WITH THE AMERICAN 3D ARMY, March 10.—The 3d army's lunge into the Rhineland has meant overrunning some hundreds of German towns and has given the military government officers their first large scale chance to prove themselves.

Gen. Manton S. Eddy.

In the area of the 12th corps, commanded by Maj. Gen. Manton S. Eddy of Chicago, American troops have taken 144 towns whose peace time population totaled 61,000. Despite war's approach some 35,000 of these people have remained either in their own homes or have gone back to seek refuge with friends or relatives farther behind the lines.

It is now the task of the military government to round up these people and see that they obey the strict regulations intended, for the most part, to see that the civil population in no way interferes with the war effort.

Houses Requisitioned.

Civilians are ejected from houses needed for military purposes and kept under some sort of guard in other quarters—after all have been registered and "screened" by intelligence officers.

Free movement is forbidden but they are allowed on the streets between 8 and 10 a. m. and 3 and 5 p. m. and to feed and milk their cattle. Even then they are supposed to have passes and to do their chores under guard.

Local priests, doctors, and nurses and the burgomaster are permitted free passage but they have been given special permission as have small bodies of German police who wear special arm bands and help the military government regulate other civilians.

Food Supply Ample.

Food, to date, has been no special problem since the Germans seemingly are well supplied in contrast to the French and Belgians.

Doctors also keep a close check on health conditions and in one place recently, prevented a typhoid and diphtheria epidemic. German doctors and nurses, in most cases, see to the health of the civil population under allied supervision.

The German civilians, whom Hitler once boasted would fight on as guerrillas to date are as docile as lambs, in most instances, perhaps, bacause, since childhood, they have been trained to recognize authority when it speaks in stern enough tones. They even turn in an occasional deserter and obediently hand over whatever firearms other Nazis haven't taken for their own use.

Offenders Promptly Punished.

Any infraction of the rules—most of which are minor ones—are promptly dealt with. Offenses can be dealt with by a general court, an intermediate court, or the summary court with the top penalties ranging from the death sentence by the first, to 10 years and a fine of 10,000 marks in the intermediate, to one year and 1,000 marks fine in the summary branch.

One troublesome fact which may spell trouble in the reduction of the Nazis is the fact that none—or almost none—seem to have any sense of guilt or any feeling of shame for the fact that they plunged the world into its most disastrous turmoil.

18 NAZI GENERALS KILLED, 32 TAKEN PRISONER BY ALLIES

PARIS, March 10 (AP).—Eighteen German generals have been killed on the western front alone, it was disclosed today at supreme headquarters, and 32 have been captured.

The captured include six full generals, 12 lieutenant generals, and 14 major generals. Three colonels in command of divisions, four admirals, and one vice admiral also have been bagged.

The dead generals include two field marshals—Erwin Rommel, victim of an allied air attack, and Guenther von Kluge, who committed suicide.

Since the western Rhine offensive began Feb. 23, allied armies have taken well over 100,000 prisoners.

RUSSIAN TROOPS SEIZE HALF OF KUESTRIN: NAZIS

Fight for Key Fortress East of Berlin.

LONDON, March 11 [Sunday]—(AP).—Russian troops began shelling the great shipping center of Stettin yesterday and drove four armored spearheads close to bombarded Danzig, while the Germans announced that Red army shock forces had captured half of Kuestrin, key Oder river fortress 38 miles east of imperiled Berlin.

A late German broadcast said the Russians had captured the northern half, or new city district, of Kuestrin, last big bridgehead held by the Germans on the east bank of the central Oder. Then the Russians fought their way across the Warthe river into the older section of the town on the south side.

"Murderous battles are raging for every single house and every single floor of every house," the enemy broadcast said. The Germans said the Russians were striving for a quick cleanup of the Kuestrin area so that they could shift thousands of troops northward for the developing siege of Stettin, main port for Berlin, 67 miles northeast of the reich capital.

Close on Stettin.

The soviet high command bulletin ignored the flaming battle around Kuestrin, where by German account the Russians also have bridgeheads on the west bank of the Oder above and below Kuestrin, and are threatening to trap the Nazi garrison on the eastern shore.

But in the north the Russians said their troops had pressed within three miles southeast of Altdamm, Oder river crossing town two miles from Stettin's great ship basins, with the capture of Franzhausen. The village of Klebow, six miles southwest of Altdamm and about the same distance south of Stettin, also was taken.

Gaining this high ground opposite the Pomeranian capital the Russians were reported in front dispatches relayed thru Moscow to have begun shelling Stettin itself.

Trap Is Narrowing.

The attack toward Stettin was a slow slugging match between hundreds of tanks, but far to the northeast Marshal K. K. Rokossovsky's 2d White Russian army forces were making gigantic strides in narrowing the Baltic trap where thousands of Germans are pinned in the northeastern tip of Pomerania and the adjacent Gdynia-Danzig sectors.

Advancing up to 17 miles in 24 hours troops overran more than 300 towns and villages and squeezed the Germans into a 1,750 square mile pocket.

Premier Stalin in an order of the day announced the fall of Lauenburg, last big northeastern German stronghold in Pomerania. This 10 way junction town is 30 miles west of Gdynia, former Polish naval base, and 35 miles northwest of Danzig city.

Fourteen miles southeast of Lauenburg, which is on the main Stettin-Gdynia-Danzig railway, the Russians overran Sierakowitz. Thirteen miles east of the latter point they toppled Kartuzy, an important road center only 15 miles west of Danzig and 17 miles southwest of Gdynia.

ALL NAZIS GONE FOREVER, MONTY TELLS BELGIANS

LONDON, March 10 (AP).—Field Marshal Montgomery told the people of Brussels in a broadcast today that no Germans remained on Belgian soil and "never will they return—never, never."

The commander of the allied 21st army group said that "if ever a nation brought misery to millions of good people, it was the German nation."

"She now is paying the full price of her tyranny," the commander said. "There is not the slightest doubt that final victory is assured. The only point which is still in doubt is to know exactly when."

TRANSYLVANIAN AREA RESTORED TO ROMANIANS

Reds Give Back Part of Province.

MOSCOW, March 10 (AP).—Northern Transylvania, Hungary's share of Hitler's Balkan loot, has been restored to Romania.

Marshal Stalin informed Premier Petru Groza of Romania in a letter made public today that under terms of the Sept. 12 armistice the 17,400 square mile territory was being returned.

The marshal informed Romania's new premier that it was his government's responsibility to keep order, protect minorities, and to see that war front needs imposed upon Transylvania were met.

Soviet newspapers, hailing the transfer as soviet faith in Groza's new regime, declared that sabotage and terrorism in the province under the recent government of Premier Nicolae Radescu had made it impossible to restore the province earlier.

Pledges Democracy.

Groza pledged his government to "look after the rights of nationalities living there, being guided by the principles of democracy, equality and justice for the entire population" and promised to maintain order.

In reply, Stalin said:

"Taking into consideration the fact that the new Romanian government, which has assumed the direction of the country, takes upon itself the responsibility for necessary order in the territory of Transylvania and guarantees the right of the nationalities and the proper functioning of all local institutions serving the needs of the front, the soviet government has decided to satisfy the petition of the Romanian government and, in accordance with the armistice agreement of Sept. 12, 1944, to agree to the establishment of an administration of the Romanian government in Transylvania."

Accuse Former Regime.

The newspaper Pravda said the Red army had taken over the area under the Radescu government because the former regime "not only did not halt terroristic sabotage activities" but "shielded them."

Transylvania, with a total of 40,530 square miles, had been a Balkan sore spot even before the end of the first world war, when it was taken from Hungary and ceded to Romania.

Northern Transylvania, representing less than half the entire area but with a population of 2,500,000, was returned to Hungary in August, 1940, when that Balkan nation became a Hitler partner.

The population is about 58 per cent Romanian, altho there are a million or more Hungarians.

BRITISH ORDER JET AIR LINER FOR AFTER WAR

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, March 10.—The British government has placed an order with a British firm for a jet-propelled air liner for use in post-war air service, the Evening News' air correspondent reported today.

The correspondent also said Britain has a second jet-propelled fighter in an advanced stage of development, augmenting the Gloster Meteor, the first allied jet plane to go into action. The latest model is reported being built by De Havilland, maker of the famous plywood Mosquito bombers.

A British firm is on the verge of designing an aircraft that will travel faster than sound, more than 700 miles an hour, A. T. Lennox-Boyd, parliamentary secretary to the aircraft production ministry, also disclosed today.

TITO TO SEEK WIDER DOMAIN FOR YUGOSLAVIA

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Premier Tito broadcast a declaration pledging his new government to complete the liberation of Yugoslavia, punish war criminals, cooperate in world security, and seek inclusion of "our national territories which remained outside the borders of our state after the first World war." He said free elections would be held as soon as possible, that civil liberties would be extended, and the government would intervene in regulation of Yugoslav economic life because of widespread destruction, but would "guarantee completely freedom and assistance to private initiative and economy without which the speedy reconstruction of the country cannot be conceived."

RUSSIANS WELL ALONG IN TASK OF REPAIRING DAM

MOSCOW, March 10 (AP).—One year ago a soviet plane landed near the wreckage of the giant power station at Novoye Zaporozhe with the first detachment of experts to supervise reconstruction of the great Dnepr dam. Today press dispatches told of substantial progress in the task, described as "perhaps the most difficult in the soviet union."

Three hundred thousand tons of blasted concrete—enough to fill 15,000 freight cars—have been removed. A number of the 26 wrecked piers were repaired, but experience has shown it is simpler to build an entirely new system than to patch up the damage.

The imminent breakup of Dnepr ice is a crisis for which soviet engineers have been preparing. The water regulating mechanisms still are wrecked, and flood waters will pour thru the dam at the rate of more than 15,000 cubic yards a second. To save the power plant site on the right bank from inundation, a special barrier has been thrown up.

Russians Report Planes Sink 3 Nazi Transports

LONDON, March 10—(AP).—Aircraft of the Russian Baltic fleet have sunk three German transports totaling 20,000 tons, a patrol ship and a high speed landing barge in a raid of the port of Pillau, the Moscow radio reported tonight.

CITY'S REBIRTH CHARTED THRU POST-WAR PLAN

Toll System Will Repay Part of Cost.

Chicago's post-war plans, on a magnificent scale, have been presented to Mayor Kelly by the city's plan commission, of which A. H. Mellinger is chairman. The program contemplates spending 947 million dollars in the immediate post-war era.

Among the heaviest proposed expenditures are 175 millions for local transportation, 167 millions for super-highways, and 135 millions to improve Chicago's water supply.

Toll System to Pay Costs.

The report, drafted by H. Evert Kincaid, executive director of the commission, stressed several projects that may be financed on the toll system, under which the users pay the cost until the improvement has been amortized. Adoption of such a system would obviate laying heavier burdens on real estate taxpayers.

Kincaid and the mayor emphasized that the projects are not designed primarily to make employment, but are for betterments that will be needed if Chicago is to be physically reborn as a great metropolis of the future. Housing, health, sewage treatment, parks, playgrounds and schools are included in the master plan.

Priority on Slum Clearance.

Another important activity recommended by the commission is slum clearance, which the mayor has given a high priority. Several bills that will be helpful in solving this problem are under consideration at Springfield.

Kincaid said that the city already has made much use of the "fast developing" comprehensive plan, on which work was started five years ago.

"It's a large program as outlined," he continued, "but it is by no means impossible or even impractical."

Brothers File Appeals in Draft Bribe Cases

Appeals from prison sentences imposed last week by Federal Judge John P. Barnes on Frank and James Cerone, brothers, on charges of evading and conspiring to evade the draft regulations, were filed yesterday in the United States Circuit Court of Appeals. Frank, 32, of 5048 Marine dr., was sentenced to two five year sentences and fined $10,000, and James, 25, was sentenced to one five year term. The men will have a hearing Tuesday for the fixing of appeal bonds.

ADVERTISE IN THE TRIBUNE.

IWO FIGHT NEAR END; JAPS SPLIT INTO 3 POCKETS

Resistance Crumbling, Says Adm. Nimitz.

PACIFIC FLEET HDQ., Guam, March 11 [Sunday] — (AP). — Overwhelming American superiority brought "the beginning of the end" on Iwo Saturday afternoon, with advancing marines cutting the sharply reduced Japanese garrisons into three parts for the kill. The enemy's power to resist is crumbling.

The largest portion of the foe is in a half mile square area at Kitano point, northernmost tip of the island.

A bulletin by Adm. Nimitz today reported that the 4th marine division, which had been held back for days on the right flank, made big gains yesterday, with patrols reaching the beach at Tachiwa point, easternmost point of the eight square mile island. That point is almost due east of Motoyama town but well south of points where the 3d marine division has spilled out onto the northeast beaches.

Hold 1,400 Yards of Shore.

The 4th apparently overran the village of Higashi just west of Tachiwa point. Higashi is the Japanese word for east.

Compressed by the 4th division and some 3d division troops along the eastern shore is a small pocket, perhaps 500 yards long, reaching 200 yards inland. Just south of that, a larger pocket is 1,200 yards long and extends 300 yards inland.

Beginning of the End.

The 4th division in order to reach Higashi, had to move over some of the worst enemy held terrain. It had been the 4th division which was slowed up as the 3d division in the center reached the northeast beaches. The 4th made substantial advances all along its left flank sector.

The report of decreasing resistance suggested what staff officers have predicted—that it is the "beginning of the end" of the toughest fight of the Pacific war, now in its 21st day.

Warships still shelled the Japanese and army planes based in Iwo's southern airfield and carrier planes of the United States 5th fleet covered the advances.

MAJ. R. T. REES ARRIVES FOR DUTY ON GUAM

BERMUDA PAPER CENSORED OVER REP. LUCE VISIT

BERMUDA, March 10 (AP).—The British colonial government has imposed a severe censorship on the Midocean News, asserting the newspaper violated emergency security regulations in connection with the presence here of Rep. Clare Booth Luce [R., Conn.] while she was en route to Europe.

The News had criticized the government's muzzling of the press on Mrs. Luce's presence in an editorial written by John R. Higgins, editor, who was on his first day on his job. The editorial, referring to Mrs. Luce only as "a very well known Republican congresswoman," objected to the government's refusal to explain why her presence was considered a security matter.

Higgins worked on New Castle, Pa., and Buffalo, N. Y., papers before coming here.

Marine Breaks His Gun and a Jap's Head in Same Blow

BY THOMAS MORROW.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

IWO ISLAND, March 10.—Sgt. Robert E. Hoskins, 2437 Berteau av., Chicago, with the 24th marine regiment, had three rounds left in his carbine when he came upon a hole containing three Japanese. He killed two with as many shots, and his final shot wounded the third. To bring the action to a conclusion, he used his weapon as a club, and broke his carbine and the head of the third Japanese.

Bill Hengen, marine combat correspondent, Minneapolis, Minn., heard about the feat and went to Lt. Patrick Young, Dallas, Tex., who introduced him to Hoskins.

"This man," Young told Hoskins, "is from ordnance. He wants a statement on why you go around breaking up marine property. You may have to pay for it."

"Do you mean that?" asked Hoskins, open mouthed.

While Hengen grinned, Hoskins indulged in some bitter comment and returned to his post.

Fighting thru broken ground makes defined front lines impossible, but the marines are forcing their way yard by yard toward the sea. They creep around knolls and burst into caves and pillboxes to exterminate the enemy.

One enemy cave on a slope behind the lines on the right flank gets the attention of a flame throwing tank each day. The next morning the Japs are back harassing the assault troops with fire. Episodes of this kind are causing officers to wonder how extensive the passages are connecting the caves.

Maj. Thomas Philpott of New Rochelle, N. Y., stopped to report on the number of Notre Dame men in the fighting.

"My brother, Robert, is a private in the front lines," he said. "I haven't seen him since we came ashore. Angelo Bertelli, the football player, is here. So is Thomas Fitzharris."

"There are others, too, and they still drop in," said Col. Thomas A. Wornham, as a mortar shell smashed in the area. "When the island is secure my commanding officer and I plan to go to the end of the island, spit in the direction of Tokyo, then cut up a bottle we've been saving. Three of us will have to drink to the fourth, who isn't around any more."

Wornham paid tribute to the men of the 27th regiment who have rushed across the island and fought their way to the north end with little rest.

Among the Chicagoans in the front lines with the 27th are:

Lt. Harry Whitney, 3804 N. Leavitt st.; Corp. Lawrence M. Roseen, 7637 Calumet av.; Catholic Chaplain Leroy J. Calkins, 3445 W. Congress st., and Pvt. 1st Class Tracy Stewart, 4453 S. Albany av.

From the midwest are:

At the south end of Iwo, tractors lumbered about the summit of Mount Suribachi. Workmen made this possible by constructing a road around the steep sides. Volley ball courts and baseball equipment began to put in an appearance in the rear area at the south end of the island, not more than five miles from vicious fighting, and still within artillery range. And white crosses began to appear as the division's two cemeteries grew.

Aiding in the fight for the northern end of Iwo is Pvt. William S. McCarver of Ziegler, Ill. His exploits on the left flank of the 5th division have won him the title, "The boy they can't pin down."

First out of his foxhole in all the advances since D-day, the officers marvel at his escapes during the constant Japanese firing. McCarver was superficially wounded in the shoulder and back, but rejoined his company fighting against Jap pillboxes.

"It's a hell of a thing to say," McCarver reported, "but I actually enjoy this thing. It gives me a thrill when I am under fire against the Japanese."

15 SQUARE MILES IN TOKYO HEART RAZED BY BOMBS

'Greatest Damage Ever Done in One Raid.'

29 flight which left the imperial capital a 15 mile square of flame showed that the first plane off was the first to return after a flight of more than 15 hours. Aboard it was Col. Carl Storrie of Denton, Tex., a unit commander. It was piloted by Capt. Earl Russell, a fellow Texan, of Stamford.

"We didn't see much until we dropped our first bombs," Col. Storrie said. "Then we saw plenty. Our bombs started fires that spread swiftly. When we left two or three square miles were afire."

Indianan Is Pilot.

The colonel paid tribute to his precision instrument specialist, 2d Lt. James Warren of Dunn, N. C., who tuned Tokyo in on the radio following their bomb run. A Jap broadcaster was reporting that only 100 of our planes had struck, the others having been driven off by fighters, and that all the fires would be out by dawn.

"Hell, they won't get those fires out in a week," Warren said. "Gosh, they were pretty fires," he added.

One of the planes was piloted by Charles Shaffer, 23, son of Alfred and Mabel Shaffer of Long Beach, Michigan City, Ind.

"There were acres and acres of smoke and flames," he said. "The town was burning like hell—and I mean hell. Jap searchlights caught and held us for a while and the flak [anti-aircraft fire] was heavy." His ground crew found 24 holes in the plane. Lt. Robert M. Rothfus of Des Moines, Ia., commended Pilot Shaffer for doing a swell job of flying evasive tactics while the searchlight had them pinned against the sky.

3d Trip for Kankakeean.

Corp. Harold I. Seeling, 27, of Hartford City, Ind., gunner on one of the planes, spoke indifferently of the raid, complaining that he didn't get too good a look at it.

In the plane of Brig. Gen. Thomas S. Power of Fort Worth, Tex., flight commander, the flight engineer was S./Sgt. Vern M. Schiller, whose father, Orrie, lives at 293 Greenwood st., Kankakee, Ill. Vern said it was his third trip to Tokyo and when asked if he would like to return, replied:

"Sure—as soon as I get a little sleep. This is what we've waited for. It was like a ringside seat at the Chicago Stadium."

Gen. Powers was greeted on his arrival by a delegation of elated brass hats, including Col. Leigh H. Hunt, a Chicago attorney whose wife, Marcelle, and son, Leigh Jr., live at 2648 Lakeview av. Col. Hunt is Powers' chief of staff for administration.

The almost maternal anxiety which the ground crews feel for their Super Forts, was typified by the comment of Sgt. Michael L. Irpino, 21, 4345 N. Kedvale av., Chicago, whose mother, Mary, is a widow. Irpino, a mechanic, was gazing fondly at his ship as she roared up the taxi strip.

Peorian Feels Repaid.

"There's our pride and joy," he breathed—and there was no banter in his eyes.

Pvt. Frank Miranda, 20, son of Peter and Mary Miranda, 2023 W. 47th st., Chicago, allowed that "sweating them in and out is worse than flying them."

"Wonderful" was the one word description of burning Tokyo applied by Co-Pilot Lt. Leland Rudiger, 22, Peoria, Ill. "Believe me," he said, "I was repaid over and over for my 2½ years of waiting."

Ruidger's flight officer, Frank A. Urso, 29, 1232 S. Scoville av., Berwyn, Ill., who worked on a Tribune truck as a kid, described the rapid spread of the flames in the Jap capital.

"It was like throwing matches on a floor covered with dry sawdust," he said.

IN-LAW ROW TRIAL DELAYED.

Judge Harry Beam in South Chicago police court yesterday continued to March 22 a charge of disorderly conduct against Erick Ohman, 40, of 509 E. 78th st., who was arrested on the complaint of his mother-in-law, Mrs. Nellie Scarle, 52, of the same address, that he struck her.

CHICAGOANS AID IN GIVING TOKYO 'THE HOT FOOT'

One Is Flight Engineer of Super Fort.

BY MARTIN SHERIDAN.

[Boston Globe Correspondent, Written for the Combined American Press.]

2d Lt. R. W. Metcalfe.

OVER TOKYO, March 10 (AP).—I not only saw Tokyo burning furiously in many sections but I smelled it. The conflagration was so great that the bomb bay doors of this Super-Fortress, the underside of the fuselage, and the gun blisters were blackened with soot.

This bomber was one of more than 300 which gave the Japanese capital the hotfoot early today. Our navigator didn't have to give the pilot a bearing on Tokyo. Other bombers were ahead of us, and 40 miles from the city we could see the glow of fires already started.

I have never seen such a display of destruction. Fires were raging in several multi-block areas and creating almost daylight conditions. There were hundreds of blazes thruout the waterfront area, most densely populated section in the world.

Another indication of the conflagration's intensity was the turbulent air conditions we encountered over the target. Our plane, named "Patches" and bearing a semi-nude painting on its nose, struck down and up drafts and bounced 2,000 feet in split seconds. Crewmen were tossed from their seats. Several struck their heads violently against the top of the plane.

Maj. Walter F. Todd of Ogden, Utah, operations officer and command pilot, said he thought we were hit by flak, but speedy examination proved everything was operating satisfactorily. A moment later 2d Lt. Leo P. Ziemiansky of Buffalo, N. Y., navigator, sang out: "Three, two, one, mark!"

At the last word of the count, the bombardier, 2d Lt. Thomas G. Moss of Aurora, Ill., dropped the "eggs" in the target area.

Second Lt. Richard W. Metcalfe of Chicago, flight engineer, at midnight broke out a carton containing sandwiches, a few oranges, and several cans of grapefruit juice.

[Lt. Metcalfe, 23, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Sidney A. Metcalfe of 6326 Lakewood av. and has been overseas since last October. A brother, Flight Officer Gerald H. Metcalfe is on duty in this country.]

The plane commander was 2d. Lt. Leon L. Ballard of Houston, Tex. Also in the crew was Staff Sgt. Frank A. Gish of Chicago.

MIKADO'S TOKYO PALACE BUILT IN 1,000 ACRE PARK

The Imperial palace in Tokyo, reported by the Japs to have caught fire in Saturday's B-29 raid, was completed in 1889 after six years of work. It was built on the site of the old Shogun palace, which was burned down in 1873.

It occupies about one thousand acres of ground in the heart of Tokyo. Once the hill upon which is stands was the center of the Japanese capital, and all distances were computed from it. The palace is surrounded by a moat, which is walled with stone and crossed by stone bridges guarded by soldiers. The grounds consist of hill and valley, gardens, woods, lakes, and lawns.

The palace contains hundreds of rooms, and standing in some of them one might look thru what appears to be an endless vista of chambers.

Screens Replace Windows.

The rooms have no windows, but are walled with sliding screens of glass, which take the place of the paper walls of the ordinary Japanese house and extend to about seven feet from the floor. They move back and forth so that several rooms easily may be made into one. Walls between the glass and the lofty ceilings of the rooms are covered with fine silk woven at Kyoto.

The hall in which the emperor worships the spirits of his ancestors is of knotless cream white timbers polished like mirrors. In the whole palace there is no paint, and the color decoration is supplied by gilding, lacquer, and fine cloth.

Many of the rooms are enormous. The banquet hall requires 540 square yards of matting to cover its floor. The ceiling of this room is finished in gold. The throne room is equally splendid. The palace is equipped with foreign furniture, much of it brought from Germany. The tables have thin tops, the chairs are uncomfortable, and the mantels in some of the rooms are cheaper than those of an ordinary cottage.

Shrine on Grounds.

The Yasukuni-Jinja, a shrine which is believed by the Japanese to safeguard the tranquility of the empire, stands far back on Kudan hill at the northwest corner of the palace grounds. It is dedicated to all soldiers who have fallen in the wars since the empire's restoration.

Two sculptured stone lanterns flank the entrance and deeply cut characters on the tall square shaft at the right give the name and rank of the shrine and announce that it is under imperial protection. Two huge stone Dogs of Fo, war prizes brought from China at the close of the war in 1895, flank the campus on either side.

JAP WAR SCHEME TRACED TO 1930 NAVAL PARLEY

Planned to Block U. S. with Submarines.

Washington, D. C., March 10 (AP).—As early as 1930 Japan spread a smokescreen of propaganda and diplomatic double talk which may have helped to disguise her intentions in Asia and the Pacific.

This is suggested by the release today of state department papers relating to American foreign affairs in 1930, the year of the naval disarmament conference in London.

The papers show the Japanese at this conference were seeking to get the prevailing naval ratio [10-10-6] for America, Britain, and Japan set by the Washington naval treaty in 1922] revised to 10-10-7. Japanese naval experts told American naval attaches in Tokyo that if Japan had anything less than 7 to America's 10 in naval strength she would inevitably lose any war in which the two powers might become involved.

Expected Quick Decision.

The theory they spread was that in the event of war, America would seek a quick decision, because a war of attrition would use up American merchant shipping and lose American carrying trade to rivals.

The American fleet, they theorized, would go immediately from Pearl Harbor to Manila if war should be declared, and, as a counter measure, the Japanese would intercept them with a large fleet of submarines operating from the Marshall and Caroline Islands.

All this was reported at the time to the state department by William R. Castle Jr., then American ambassador in Tokyo.

He further reported that Masanao Hanihara, former Japanese ambassador to the United States, had called upon him with a story about how public opinion in Japan feared an American attack because it was believed American naval plans covered the possibility of war with Japan to compel Japanese acceptance of American ideas regarding China.

"Acting Under Instructions."

Hanihara told Castle that war with the United States would be the worst possible disaster for Japan, and Japan could never think of it. Castle informed the department that Hanihara was obviously acting under instructions. He said he told Hanihara that "our aims approximated the Japanese as both countries wanted only a China which was substantially and politically sound."

The next year 1931, Japan struck in Manchuria, in a campaign of aggression against China which continues today.

In 1941 the Japanese struck first in the Pacific and attempted to force a decision themselves by knocking out Pearl Harbor and capturing Manila quickly.

Their alleged plans about using submarine fleets to stop American naval advance thru the Marshalls and Carolines did not materialize. One of the great mysteries of this war is the little Japanese submarine activity that has been reported.

CLAIM FUGITIVE CONVICT KILLED CAPITAL WOMAN

Washington, D. C., March 10 (AP).—Police pinned a murder charge today on Joseph Medley, 43, an escaped convict, in the gunshot slaying of Mrs. Nancy Boyer, 45, in a Washington apartment.

Joseph Medley.

But they first must catch their man, also wanted elsewhere for questioning in the bathtub deaths of two other women.

Less than 48 hours after Mrs. Boyer's body was found in her apartment, Inspector Robert J. Barrett, District of Columbia chief of detectives, obtained a warrant charging Medley with murder in the first degree.

The search for Medley, who was serving a 30 to 60 year sentence for kidnaping and armed robbery when he escaped last November from a Michigan state prison, centered on pawn shops.

It was on a pattern of finger prints, found in the Boyer apartment, and a series of pawnshop visits by a man identified by shop proprietors as Medley, that the police picked the escaped convict as their man.

Medley has been indicted in the slaying of Miss L. A. Fisher, 28, a textile worker whose body was found Christmas day in a New Orleans, La., hotel bathtub.

He also is wanted for questioning in the death of Mrs. Blanche Zimmerman, 38, a telephone operator, whose body was found Feb. 17 in a Chicago hotel.

JAPS CONTINUE TO WARN PEOPLE OF U. S. INVASION

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

War Minister Sugiyama of Japan was quoted in a Tokyo broadcast yesterday as declaring that Japan's situation is "very serious" and that "the enemy will land in Japan in the near future."

"The enemy wants to force the issue and will use every means at his disposal to that effect," he said. "It is our duty to defend our fatherland and to annihilate the enemy. The result depends on our morale and confidence in victory. The fate of the Japanese empire, which has lasted 3,000 years and has never had to face such an assault, lies on the shoulders of our army."

Premier Koiso also warned the Japanese "the enemy will no doubt increase his bombings and is planning for landings on the mainland."

An unidentified Tokyo broadcaster went further when he got mixed up in his English. He was obviously attempting to paraphrase Sugiyama's warning that an invasion was imminent but what he said was, "the enemy is now attempting to make a landing on Japan proper."

FRENCH 'RULER' OF INDO-CHINA SEIZED BY JAPS

CHUNGKING, China, March 10 (AP).—Japanese authorities have disarmed French and native forces in Indo-China and arrested the puppet governor-general, Vice Adm. Jean Decoux, in fear they would collaborate with the allies, a Chinese army spokesman said today.

Chinese sources estimated the French garrison in Indo-China at about 10,000 officers and men, but said that, having eliminated its threat to aid any allied invasion attempt, the Japanese still faced opposition from a well-organized underground army of natives.

[The OWI quoted the Tokyo radio, which had announced seizure of Indo-China Friday night, as saying "some French troops" still were resisting the Japanese in Hanoi, where they were barricaded in the citadel barracks of the capital. Another broadcast said Decoux was held in protective custody at Saigon.]

Arnold Praises Doolittle, Says 8th Speeds Nazi End

LONDON, March 10 [Reuters].—Lt. Gen. Doolittle, commanding the 8th air force, today received an behalf of his thousands of air crews and ground men, a message of commendation from Gen. Arnold, commander of the United States army air forces, on the 8th's recent "magnificent effort," saying "the complete defeat of the Germans is surely hastened by your perseverance."

40 SUPER FORTS BOMB RAIL YARD AT MALAY BASE

A B-29 BASE IN INDIA, March 10 (AP).—A force of about 40 Super Fortresses, flying a round trip of approximately 3,500 miles, bombed the strategically vital Kuala Lumpur railroad yards on the Malaya peninsula today. "Generally excellent" bombing results were announced by Brig. Gen. Roger M. Ramey, commander of the 20th bomber command.

The weather favored the Super Fortresses. They previously had attacked Kuala Lumpur Feb. 19, when its railway repair shops were obliterated by precision bombing.

Pilots reported that the Japanese offered considerable fighter opposition today.

[A Washington announcement of the raid said all of the B-29s returned safely. One of the enemy fighters was reported probably shot down.]

Tirpitz's Doom Credited to New British Carrier

LONDON, March 10 (AP).—Existence of a huge new aircraft carrier, H. M. S. Implacable, already in action with the home fleet, has been disclosed. The Implacable discovered the Norwegian hiding place of the German battleship, Tirpitz, which was put out of action with "earthquake" bombs.

THE QUEEN OF CABINET WOODS

Robert Adam, on his return from Italy, about the year of 1758, introduced to the London public furniture made of satinwood and decorated with classical detail. No wonder this furniture created so much interest! Designed in the Adelphia Studios of Adam Brothers, much of it was made by Thomas Chippendale, and decorated by two members of the Royal Academy—Angelica Kaufman and Antonio Zucci. Choice pieces of this period are to be found in the great museums throughout the world.

In the John A. Colby & Son exhibit of 18th and 19th Century satinwood are a number of collector's pieces.

From London we have a handsome settee with miniature panels said to be the work of Angelica Kaufman. From the J. Pierpont Morgan sale we have a satinwood half-round commode, the interior fitted with many compartments for collections of miniature paintings and other precious items. Richly decorated and has the lustrous patina of age.

Arm chairs in satinwood and cane, a Pembroke table, small stands, curio cabinets. A handsome secretary bookcase from Yorkshire, a Regency table from Scotland, an end sofa from the Harry Paine Whitney collection.

The most interesting exhibit of satinwood furniture in all America.

ONE GENERATION TELLS THE NEXT

YOUTH WHO LED 'TIN PAN' ARMY BEATS JAPS NOW

Disclose Iowan Directs Filipinos.

Clinton, Ia., March 10 [Special].—Home town pals of Col. Russell W. Volckmann, who played war under his command in their boyhood here nearly 25 years ago, glowed with relief and pride this week when war department notices officially listed him among the living for the first time in almost three years and disclosed he has been leading guerrilla forces battling Japs on Luzon Island.

They also learned that he had been promoted from major to full colonel and had been awarded the distinguished service cross by Gen. MacArthur, tho he has been so busy he hasn't yet had time to appear for a personal presentation of the honors.

Volckmann, a regular army officer, was reported missing in action in May, 1942, after the fall of Bataan. For many months no word of his fate was learned by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. William J. C. Volckmann of Clinton, or his wife, Nancy, who now lives with her son, Russell Jr., at Arlington, Va.

Used Wooden Swords.

But his lifelong friends, remembering his militant boyhood, believed he would survive. They recalled they had been in schoolboy troops he directed in rough and tumble encounters with wooden swords, tin pan helmets, and makeshift banners. Their "battles" were waged thru swamps, timber and underbrush of Mississippi river lowlands where they camped out, built their own huts and shelters, and foraged for their food.

And now they learn that their former leader transferred these boyhood games into grim reality and took in his stride the hard and dangerous existence forced upon him by the Japs' early successes. Not only did he survive, he organized a band of Filipino guerrillas that wreaked important losses upon the enemy.

His little army fought against overwhelming odds during three years of Japanese supremacy on Luzon, inflicting thousands of casualties while suffering only minor losses themselves. Gen. MacArthur described their fighting as of an "irregular type which the enemy has been unable to fathom."

Clear 2,000 Square Miles.

Col. Volckmann's guerrillas are credited with clearing Gen. Yamashita's Jap forces from the entire province of Ilocos Norte, an area of 2,000 square miles in the northwest corner of Luzon. When MacArthur split the island by his invasion in January, thousands of Japs fled to the northern province seeking refuge but found only death at the hands of Volckmann's avengers.

Col. Volckmann is the second Clinton man who has become a Philippine guerilla leader. The other is Sgt. Joseph W. Donahey, who escaped the infamous march of death and organized a command of guerillas in southern Luzon. Twice during the years they harassed the Japs, the two Clinton men met on the island. Donahey returned home last month with his Filipino wife, Corajon, the daughter of a wealthy plantation owner. They were married last year.

TELLS OF FIGHT AGAINST ILLNESS IN CABANATUAN

Col. Stephen C. Sitter.

There was hardly an idle moment for Col. Stephen C. Sitter of the army medical corps thruout nearly three years as a prisoner of war in the Cabanatuan prison camp on Luzon. His first relief from medical duties came when he started home to America. Col. Sitter arrived in Chicago by United Air Lines yesterday and went on to Milwaukee and his first visit in four years with his wife and two sons, Stephen Jr., 9, and Larry, 5.

Even the entry of American Rangers into the camp the night of Jan. 30, when all the surviving American prisoners were whisked out from under Jap guns, did not relieve Col. Sitter. He and other prison doctors spent most of the night on the arduous journey back to American lines giving emergency treatment to wounded Rangers and Filipino guerrillas.

Filipinos Made Vraciu Major, He Says in East

Lt. Alexander [The Indestructible] Vraciu of East Chicago, Ind., navy ace, related in New York yesterday that he was made a major in the Filipino army after his plane was shot down behind Japanese lines on Luzon last Dec. 14. Five weeks later Vraciu led 150 Filipinos to a meeting with American forces that had landed on the island.

MOTHER SEES HIT-RUN AUTO KILL CHILD, 2

While Mrs. Deana Sparberg looked on from the window of her third floor apartment at 6726 Bosworth av., a topless jalopy driven by a boy of high school age yesterday struck and killed her daughter, Hildreth, 2, in the street below.

Mrs. Sparberg's father, Dr. Benjamin M. Nadler, who was with her, ran downstairs and picked up the girl's body. Police took both to Edgewater hospital, but Hildreth was dead on arrival.

The driver of the car, who was hatless and wore a leather jacket, stopped and got out. He told Mrs. Alice Posner, 6729 Bosworth av.: "I just ran over a child. I don't know what to do. I'm going home and tell my father." Then he drove away.

Hildreth's father, Sidney J. Sparberg, is an attorney with offices at 134 N. La Salle st.

William Morgan, 7, of 709 Glenwood lane, Glenview Countryside in Northfield township, was killed when he walked around the rear of a bus into the path of an automobile on Glenview rd. east of Greenwood av. The car was driven by Fletcher G. Lipitt, 22, a United Air Lines co-pilot, who lives in the Evanston hotel. He was charged with involuntary manslaughter.

Harold Wright, 4, Negro, of 1370 W. 14th st., died in County hospital of injuries suffered Friday when he ran against an automobile at Hastings and Throop sts. driven by Le Roy Franklin, 39, of 830 W. 14th st.

20 MILITIAMEN GIVE BLOOD TO RED CROSS BANK

Twenty officers and soldiers of Company L of the 1st infantry regiment Illinois reserve militia, headed by their captain, Dean Bixler, swelled the crowd of almost 500 donors yesterday at the Red Cross blood bank, 5 N. Wabash av. Altho several of the militiamen are many-time donors, yesterday was the first time they donated as a group.

"My brother died in the last war because no plasma was used to save soldiers' lives," Capt. Bixler said. "I am a donor because I don't want any man to die if my contribution of blood can save him."

Ralph A. Baier, director of the blood donor center, commended the men for their coöperation. "It's a case of the militia on the home front aiding fighters on the battle front," he said. The bank now is meeting its quota of 2,500 pints of blood a week.

Hours at the center are 9 a. m. to 5 p. m. on week days, and 9 a. m. to 4 p. m. on Saturdays. The time spent by the individual donor is approximately one hour.

TELLS PRIMITIVE METHOD OF JAPS IN MEDIC CORPS

Milwaukee, Wis., March 10 [Special].—Unlike their American counterparts, Japanese medical officers try hard to be soldiers, carry Samurai swords and pistols and sterilize their equipment only when they treat officers, Dr. Theodore Braun said in an article in the Milwaukee Medical Times published today.

Dr. Braun, a former intern at Milwaukee hospital and Lutheran medical missionary, spent 16 months as a prisoner of the Japs in various camps in New Guinea. He was taken prisoner at Hollandia and was freed when the Americans won that section.

"In general the medical men were rough," he wrote. "Nonsterile equipment was good enough for enlisted men. When I was 'requested' to do dental work for them and was drilling a private's tooth, he would leave the chair in the midst of the treatment and make way for any applicant of higher rank."

Tells Mistrust of Medics.

Dr. Braun wrote that combat officers had misgivings about their medical corps. They thought it had become too occidental; they claimed Japanese earths and herbs were best."

"They had stocks of proprietary medicines that were made of certain earths," he wrote, "for tuberculosis and liver troubles. These drugs were dispensed privately by soldiers and officers who had faith in them. One soldier told me the Japanese medics of the old school were too westernized and in the future would have to beware of the consequences."

Braun said the most surprising thing to him was the Japanese lack of tooth care and sanitation. He said that most of the troops had unfilled tooth cavities and that what fillings they had were of gutta-percha. He was constantly ordered to fill teeth.

Used Only Mosquito Bar.

"When it came to malaria protection they had good mosquito bars but did nothing to combat mosquito larvae.

"Most Japanese soldiers did not use latrines, and in spite of our own precautions the majority of prisoners contracted dysentery at one or more times," he wrote. They never used disinfectants in the latrines.

"We prisoners received no medical aid altho I was allowed to take care of our own wounded. We never got over their callousness toward us as well as to their own sick soldiers. Japs of different units could laugh about the sick and dying in other groups. We were told that a Jap would rather die than become a burden to the emperor."

AUTO INDUSTRY SAYS U. S. POLICY FAVORS UNIONS

Asserts Grievances Used to Promote Strikes.

Detroit, Mich., March 10 (AP).—George Romney, managing director of the automotive council for war production, told a senate war investigating subcommittee today that national labor policy has permitted unions to usurp management functions in the automotive industry.

Romney, speaking for the industry, resumed his testimony in the committee's investigation of war production and man power untilization in the Detroit area. He said unions were "thwarting efforts to get productive efficiency" and that unions were being supported by decisions of governmental agencies.

Romney and Sen. Ferguson [R., Mich.] engaged in a sharp exchange as to Romney's personal knowledge of conditions in the Detroit area plants.

Sleeping on Assembly Line.

"I saw a man sleeping on an assembly line yesterday," Ferguson said. "What are industry and labor doing about this?"

"We have attempted to apply discipline but have been thwarted by the unions," Romney replied. "The United States government manacles industry by an outdated and weakened labor policy."

"You admit management has lost the right to manage?" Ferguson asked.

"To a degree yes," Romney replied.

"To what degree?" asked Ferguson.

Romney replied "every time management exercises its functions workers are encouraged to develop grievances. These grievances are used to promote strikes."

Romney charged yesterday that labor had caused a 25 to 50 per cent drop in production efficiency.

Walter P. Reuther, vice president of the CIO United Automobile Workers, in a statement to the committee, asserted there are in Detroit today "plants equipped to do super-critical war work which are not being fully utilized despite the availability of skilled workers."

Hit War Labor Board.

He said "the war labor board has blocked the efficient use of available labor by rigid rules which prevent the transfer of men to jobs requiring lower skill while maintaining the wage rate of the higher skilled jobs.

"Management's position is another factor blocking utilization of man power. Management has taken unfair advantage of the nonstrike pledge and has in too many instances refused to bargain collectively for the elimination of grievances."

Reuther charged management had resisted conversion of its facilities to war production before and after Pearl Harbor.

Denies Production Cut.

He termed Romney's statement that labor had caused a 25 to 50 per cent cut in productive efficiency "something pulled out of the air for propaganda purposes."

Denying that the UAW-CIO was attempting to take over management functions as charged by Romney, Reuther said:

"That is just a windmill set up by the companies to give them something to fight. The best proof that the CIO does not want any of the functions or prerogatives of management is that we have refused to accept foremen as members of our union because they are a part of management."

Matthew Smith, national secretary of the Mecanics Educational Society of America [Independent] told the committee in a night session that production in the Detroit area "had just about passed 60 per cent of its potential."

He said the main impediments to capacity output included "the apparent inability of government spokesmen to sell the war to the average worker and the uncertainty in the workers' minds regarding their draft status."

THRICE WOUNDED NAVY VET APPOINTED TO STATE POSITION

Richard Everett.

Springfield, Ill., March 10.—Richard Everett, recently appointed by Gov. Green as chief clerk of the state division of parks and memorials, is a battle scarred veteran of World War II. who holds six decorations for distinguished service in several fighting branches.

He was wounded in action three times. The first time was in 1937 when he was a sailor aboard the gunboat Panay, bombed by the Japanese off Nanking. Later he survived the sinking of the United States destroyer Reuben James in the Atlantic.

He served for a time in the marine corps, then was assigned to the U. S. S. Lexington, participating in seven big battles aboard the aircraft carrier and surviving its sinking.

He was wounded at Guadalcanal with Carlson's raiders. When fit for duty he returned to the air corps and was wounded again in November, 1942.

HUSBAND ASKS FOR $50,000 IN ALIENATION SUIT

A $50,000 alienation of affection suit was filed yesterday by Peter Gleiter, 40, of 1317 W. 73d pl., against Ernest Kellmeyer, 45, of 8222 Langley av., an interior decorator. Gleiter also filed a divorce suit against his wife, Mary Clara, charging adultery. He asked custody of his son, Hans Peter, 6, and full ownership of his house, which is held in joint tenancy with his wife.

Similar suits were filed last November but dismissed when the couple announced a reconciliation after a conference with Judge Michael Feinberg, in Circuit court. Both suits were filed by Gleiter's attorney, Sol R. Friedman.

In his suit Gleiter contends the reconciliation was of short duration. "Soon as we got home my wife announced, 'I'm thru being your wife. From now on I'm just the maid around here.'

"She meant what she said," Gleiter told his attorney.

'DON'T SCUTTLE G. O. P. FOREIGN POLICY': GREEN

Remember Mackinac, He Tells Frisco Envoys.

On the two points in the Mackinac charter for which Green may claim a large share of the authorship, that document said:

"In all these undertakings, we favor the widest consultation of the gallant men and women in our armed forces, who have a special right to speak with authority on behalf of the security and liberty for which they fight."

"Responsible Participation."

It called for: "Responsible participation by the United States in post-war coöperative organization among sovereign nations to prevent military aggression and to attain permanent peace with organized justice in a free world."

Another high point of the Mackinac statement believed to be endangered by the present course of G. O. P. internationalists was contained in the stress it placed upon "protecting all our own national interests."

If there should be a conflict between the vital interests of this nation and international developments, the Mackinac drafters declared:

"Then the United States of America should adhere to the policy which will preseve its constitutionalism as expressed in the Declaration of Independence, the Constitution itself, and the Bill of Rights, as administered thru our republican form of government."

Text of the Green letters to Vandenberg and Eaton:

"Your appointment as one of the representatives of the United States at the united nations conference to be held in San Francisco April 25 recalls with satisfaction our service together as members of the committee that drafted the Mackinac declaration of foreign policy in September, 1943.

"At that conference I was keenly interested that our men and women in the armed services be consulted in the formulation of our final foreign policy.

"As a result of our discussions we submitted a set of resolutions which were unanimously adopted by the Republican post-war advisory council on Sept. 7.

"With reference to the rights of those in the armed forces, it was stated:

"'In all these undertakings, we favor the widest consultation of the gallant men and women in our armed forces, who have a special right to speak with authority in behalf of the security and liberty for which they fight.'

"That statement conditions all other conditions made at that time. Without such consultation with those in the armed services any effort to carry out our declared purposes is a breach of faith with those who are now making the greatest sacrifices for the preservation of our country.

"That this pledge is a binding covenant is further shown when it is recalled that the Republican national convention in Chicago last summer incorporated these very words in its platform, and that the platform was approved by over 22,000,000 voters at the November election.

Party Bound to Principle.

"The Republican party is thus firmly committed to the principle of essential justice that: The millions who fight the war should have a voice in making the peace.

"I realize the obstacles inherent in the situation due to the difficulties or impossibility of taking a poll in the armies and the navy. Nevertheless, we have stated that all action in international affairs should follow the 'widest consultation' of those who fight.

"What has been done to give effect to this vital pledge? What is proposed to be done to obtain the widest consultation and then to effectuate its results?

Asks Voice for 10 Million.

"It seems to me that one of the most serious problems with which you must deal is to give a voice in these important affairs to the 10,000,000 who fight our battles and who, after the return of peace, will be the ones who will carry a large part of the burden, financial and military, to which we might now become committed.

"It is also my fervent hope that all the other basic principles expressed in the Mackinac declaration to which we are firmly committed may be championed by you. Possibly these matters are already receiving your attention, but my earnest desire to see these pledges fulfilled prompts me to address this letter to you."

Gov. Green, who started his second four year term this year, was an army aviator in World War I.

CHARGES BRITON BROKE PLEDGE TO SMALL NATIONS

BY JAMES SLOAN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, March 10.—Charging the restricted invitations to the united nations San Francisco conference are a disturbing sign of how small nations might fare there next month, Maj. Edward Spears, member of parliament and until recently British minister for Syria, today asked: "What confidence can the world have in this conference if flagrant injustice is done at its inception?"

The Conservative M. P. assailed exclusion of Syria and Lebanon from the meeting, while "states which have had nothing whatever to do with the war, such as Costa Rica, Haiti, and Liberia, were invited."

Service to Allies.

Syria and Lebanon, he declared, "have rendered the allied cause a real service since 1941, when we invaded their countries, then held against us by Vichy France."

He also pointed out the British ambassador in Cairo in 1941 promised them that if they supported and joined the allies the British government would provide them "all the advantages enjoyed by the free countries who are associated with them."

Altar of Appeasement.

"A great injustice is being done to please some one," Spears shouted. "Who? On what altar of appeasement are these two countries being sacrificed? It seems the great powers are to be beyond the law. We're to look forward to a world in which the small fry will be kept in order but in which the big boys, guided solely by high moral principles, are to be so kind and just to their weaker neighbors, and so wise and fair in their dealings with each break up the family party which, at the Yalta 'picnic,' celebrated the start of its idyllic journey down the peaceful centuries. Personally, I've more faith in policemen."

WPB LIFTS BANS ON MATERIALS IN FLOOD AREAS

Washington, D. C., March 10 (AP).—The war production board today declared a state of disaster emergency in three Ohio river flood area cities and empowered its regional directors to take "effective local action." The cities are Cincinnati, O.; Louisville, Ky., and Evansville, Ind.

The declaration authorizes WPB offices in these areas to obtain immediately materials or equipment "to prevent any interruption or damage to military or civilian production, distribution, transportation or communications.

"Steps also may be taken to prevent "any suffering, exposure, or unsanitary conditions which might otherwise result."

At Louisville today it was reported the crest of the flood had reached the Owensboro and Henderson, Ky., and Evansville, Ind., area without causing the major damage feared earlier.

'POLITICIANS IN CASSOCKS' HIT BY RED WRITER

Russian Attacks Clergy for 'Meddling.'

[By Wireless to The New York Times and The Chicago Tribune.]

MOSCOW, March 10. — Chiding certain Catholic clergymen as "politicians in cassocks," the official soviet newspaper Izvestia today published an article attacking the Roman church. It charged that some of the church's prominent members were striving to meddle in mundane matters beyond their jurisdiction to "mend their crumbling affairs by means of certain political combinations."

This accusation was made in a long article signed by B. Ilyin, well known writer on foreign affairs. In a sarcastic vein he asserts that when numerous Catholic functionaries in various countries blend their voices it is permissible to ask who their conductor is. He chose the archbishop of Westminster [the Right Rev. Bernard Griffin, Catholic primate of England] for special attack because of his advice to the Poles.

"Defended Hitlerites."

The Russian writer alleged that the Catholic press in the United States opposed the bombardment of Germany, calling it a concession to the soviet union, and said, "They defended the Hitlerites in attacking the U. S. S. R.

"Certain Vatican dukes claim the doubtful right of sticking their noses into other people's affairs," he continued.

Ilyin observed that a group of Scottish Catholic bishops had appealed to parliament to act against decisions of the Yalta conference, and added, "They say they have the right, as representatives of Christ on earth, to pass judgment on these matters."

He added that the members of parliament who voted against the government on the Crimea decisions "are closely connected with Catholic circles."

Hint Agreement Near.

LONDON, March 10 (AP).—The Rome radio, quoting what it said were Vatican City reports, said today that Vatican circles had authoritatively confirmed there have been American attempts to bring about a reapprochement between Russia and the Vatican. The broadcast said Vatican circles pointed out that it is possible an agreement between the Vatican and Russia may be reached. Later, Rome radio said, this agreement could be strengthened to a concordat between the Holy See and Russia.

ARMY PROVIDES EQUIPMENT FOR FLOOD VICTIMS

The army quartermaster depot in Chicago yesterday shipped tents and stoves to four towns in the southern Illinois flood area. Such supplies sufficient to provide for all those driven from their homes were sent by truck to Shawneetown, Mari, Ridgeway, and Carmi.

Army engineers here said in view of reports that the flood condition in the Ohio river valley is improved and weather reports are favorable, no immediate need for either troops or additional supplies there is anticipated.

Red Cross officials said requests for aid thus far have been handled thru chapters nearest the affected sections. They added that no supplies have been sent from Chicago to date.

American Support for Tito Linked to Reds in U. S. Army

BY WILLARD EDWARDS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Maj. Gen. Bissell.

Washington, D. C., March 10.—The undercover workings of pro-communist forces in the army more than 18 months ago were traced in evidence disclosed today.

A major shift in United States policy in the Balkans was attributed to the maneuvers of these groups which apparently acted without the knowledge of commanding officers.

Their success was evidenced in one notable instance by the allied desertion of Gen. Mihailovich's Chetniks in Yugoslavia and indorsement of Marshal Tito's soviet dominated partisans.

Exhaustive Questioning.

This development came as a house subcommittee on military affairs summoned Maj. Gen. Clayton Bissell, head of the army's intelligence corps, and Maj. Gen. William J. [Wild Bill] Donovan, director of the super-secret office of strategic services, for exhaustive questioning on communism in the army.

An open hearing will be held Tuesday at which Gen. Bissell, a subcommittee member said, may spend several hours in the witness chair. He will be asked to explain his statement to the subcommittee Feb. 27 that he knew of no Communist who had been commissioned in the army.

Since then, the subcommittee has received the names of a number of officers with known communist connections.

Positions of Trust.

Gen. Donovan will be quizzed about known Communists who occupy positions of trust in the OSS, which operates under the joint chiefs of staff and heads the list of hush-hush military agencies.

The subcommittee's inquiry was prompted by disclosure of a war department directive issued last Dec. 30 which removed previous distinctions between Communists and Americans of undivided loyalty.

Louis Adamic, born in Yugoslavia, a writer affiliated with more than 30 communist front organizations, was indicated in the new evidence as the undercover leader of the movement which brought about the change in policy toward the Chetniks, who were the first to battle the Nazi hordes which overran their country in October, 1941.

Friend of Mrs. F. D. R.

Adamic recently has been lecturing to overseas personnel of the united nations relief and rehabilitation administration at the University of Maryland. He is a friend of Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, wife of the President, and a White House visitor. In his own writings he has disclosed a wide acquaintance with state department officials, office of war information executives, and officers in the army.

Adamic has spoken of "sovietization—with all it implies" as perhaps "the simplest process." He wrote that the Russian revolution was necessary "from the standpoint not only of Russia but of the world at large."

Given U. S. Planes.

In June, 1941, Russia changed its attitude from one of friendliness to hostility toward Mihailovich's guerrillas and began a buildup of Tito. Adamic soon after began propagandizing for control of Yugoslavia by Russia. He assailed Mihailovich altho Gen. Eisenhower as late as Jan. 12, 1943, lauded the Chetnik leader for his resistance to the Nazis.

In October, 1943, President Roosevelt presented four Liberator bombers to the first Yugoslav air force combat unit. They were accepted in behalf of Yugoslavia by Ambassador Fotich. The gift was vigorously protested by Tito as an aid to his enemy, Mihailovich.

But at that very moment, it was learned, military supplies were being furnished Tito by a group of American officers in Cairo and Italy acting on their own initiative and without the knowledge of their superior officers.

Adamic's maneuvers in favor of Russia were partly revealed in his own publication last month of the periodical Today and Tomorrow, of which he is editor and publisher. In the review of a book, "Guns for Tito," by Maj. Louis Huot of the United States army, which he praised highly, he gave what he termed "a few notes" on the undercover assistance to Tito, based on his own "sources."

Without Specific Orders.

Adamic wrote that the furnishing of United States army supplies to Tito, who was warring with Mihailovich, was brought about by "a handful of American army officers" acting on their "own initiative." They were without "specific orders," he declared.

"Some of the higherups in the Mediterranean command, both Britishers and Americans, were deeply displeased by this aid to Tito," he wrote. "Their displeasure was so great that Maj. Huot was abruptly relieved as commanding officer of his group and ordered to Washington to give an account of himself. A while later the other intrepid American officers were also removed in semi-disgrace; one was held under arrest for weeks."

Presumably, however, these officers were later reinstated when the British and the United States yielded to soviet demands and deserted Mihailovich in favor of Tito.

Adamic quoted at length from a letter dated Dec. 7, 1944, "from a high ranking American army officer stationed in eastern Italy" which was strongly pro-soviet in tone. He told of interviewing numerous officials in Washington in the interests of Tito.

YOU CAN COOK THEM BETTER WITH GAS.

Iwo Jima was bombed for 70 consecutive days. For three days before the marines landed the American fleet subjected the island to what was described as the most intensive neutralization campaign of the Pacific war. In the first nine days of the operation ashore 105,000 tons of shells were dropped on the seven and a half square miles of Iwo by ships supporting the action. Land artillery also flailed the Jap lines.

And yet, from the fierceness of the opposition encountered by the marines, this terrific weight of bombs and shells apparently had left the Jap defenders substantially untouched. Holed up in caves and underground installations, they waited the bombardment out, then emerged to make the fight the most bloody in marine history. There were an estimated 20,000 Japanese to be killed.

All this gives point to the observation of Lynn Montross in his military history, "War Through the Ages." He says, "At this date it remained a tactical mystery of World War II. that no army had as yet made any extensive use of poison gas. Even women and children had been issued masks in 1939, and it is fairly certain that the Japanese tried gas on several occasions against defenseless Chinese guerrillas. Never in history has a proved weapon been discarded for ethical reasons, and it may be concluded that all armies dreaded a return to the immobility of 1917."

Brig. Gen. Alden H. Waitt of the chemical warfare service has pointed out in his recent book, "Gas Warfare," that the popular notion that the use of poison gas is horrible and inhumane is fallacious. "No form of warfare," he says, "is humane, for war is the negation of humanity. The reader, before he concludes that gas warfare is too horrible for a civilized people to tolerate, should compare gas casualties with the injuries resulting from high explosives, bullets, and bayonets." In the first World war, for instance, more than one-fourth of the 275,000 American casualties were caused by gas, but only 2 per cent of all gas casualties died, while nearly 25 per cent of the casualties caused by other weapons died.

Chemical warfare, indeed, seems to present a perfect illustration of the stubborn resistance invariably offered by the military mind to all novel weapons and tactics. Gas warfare has been practiced for 24 centuries, but at the end of that time its use is still resisted. The earliest recorded appearance was at the siege of Plataea, 428 B. C., where the Spartans used gas as an offensive weapon against the Athenians, burning wood saturated with pitch and sulphur under the city walls to create choking and noxious fumes to subdue the defenders. A rainstorm ruined the experiment, but it was repeated with complete success five years later at the siege of Delium.

Greek fire, the secret of which has been lost, saved the Byzantine empire from further domination by the Mohammedans. The mixture was invented by Kallinikos, described by some as a Syrian chemist and by others as a Greek architect who fled to Constantinople in 673 A. D. The fire was discharged from tubes in the bows of ships, suggesting the later tank-mounted flame thrower and even the rocket launcher.

Charles XII. of Sweden employed smoke produced by burning damp straw to cross the Dvina river against superior forces in 1701. During the siege of Sevastopol in 1855, Adm. Dundonald proposed to vaporize 500 tons of sulphur with 2,000 tons of coke and suffocate the garrison. The scruples of the English government prevented the plan from being placed in effect.

During our Civil war, a New Yorker, John W. Doughty, actually suggested the very same gas the Germans used so successfully at Ypres 50 years later. He pointed out the irritation caused by chlorine in the respiratory organs and the fact that the gas was heavier than air and therefore would remain close to the ground, incapacitating all enemy troops within its circle of influence. The letter was never even answered by Secretary Stanton. One military historian comments of the incident, "It is a wonder that Ericcson's ironclad or Lowe's balloons ever received a hearing."

The ingenious Gen. Benjamin F. Butler, who had a gift for novel military ideas, also contemplated the use of gas in his scheme for running the powder ship Louisiana ashore to destroy Fort Fisher on the Cape Fear river. With the explosion of 100 tons of powder, he said, "the effect that I expected was that the gases from the burning powder would so disturb the air as to render it impossible for men to breathe within 200 yards." The project resulted in a fiasco, for the ship was fired improperly and the explosion directed down into the water.

The effects of gas for many years afterward fascinated fiction writers, but made little impression upon professional military men. In three of Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes tales gas was employed as a lethal agency. In "The Greek Interpreter" it was charcoal fumes Doyle favored; in "The Adventure of the Devil's Foot," a noxious African root, unknown to science, which killed or drove its victims insane, and in "The Adventure of the Retired Colorman," plain illuminating gas. In "The Poison Belt" Doyle pictured a large part of the world as thinking that denizens of another planet were poisoning the earth's atmosphere with some subtle and deadly miasma.

In the Boer war the British tested a new high explosive, lyddite, at Ladysmith and the battle of the Modder river. The base of this explosive was picric acid, and it was supposed to suffocate or kill by shock. Gen. Joubert protested the use of lyddite as inhumane. It achieved little effect because the Boers usually selected defense positions where they were well protected.

When the British themselves were the victims of German poison gas in the first World war they accused the Germans of an atrocity. When the Germans made their first chlorine gas attack at Ypres on April 22, 1915, only the Germans' own skepticism saved the allies, for no reserves were on hand to exploit the four mile gap opened in the French and Canadian lines as the greenish-yellow gas clouds released from cylinders were borne forward on a favoring breeze. Once again the high command miscalculated because of its inherent incapacity to grasp the possibilities of a new method of warfare. Some observers have always held that the Germans could have won the war if they had had faith in gas and had not used it locally and prematurely.

As it was, the British complained with such fervor that the horrified peoples of neutral countries soon were willing to believe any story of "Hun atrocities." But the British protests had a reverse effect, for their own troops became terrified of gas and were not at their best in standing up to it. At Passchendaele in 1917, where Haig incurred 250,000 British casualties in a senseless attempt to seize the offensive, the ordeal was made worse by the German introduction of mustard gas, which burned and blistered and held in the soil for days.

Gas was never a decisive weapon in the first World war, but it was used with great effect by the Germans in March, 1918, after they had learned that there is a practical objection in its use for the attacker, in that he may have to cross ground he has himself gassed. During the Ludendorff offensive the Germans made a new tactical use of gas by employing it to neutralize many British batteries and strongpoints which had been located. They did not gas the intervening terrain and thus were not impeded in their own advance.

Indeed, the only valid reasons for this country at present to limit the use of gas are not humanitarian but practical. There is no commitment in international law prohibiting us from using it, for Japan and the United States both refused to ratify the Geneva protocol of 1925 which would have banned its use. Italy, which did sign the agreement, used highly toxic gas on a large scale 10 years later against the Ethiopians, while Japan was conclusively proved to have employed gas several years ago in the attack on Chinese forces at Ichang. American chemists made the determination by soil analysis after the battle.

As Gen. Waitt observes, the governing consideration in any employment of gas warfare by us must be merely that we do not use it to hinder our battle plan and interfere with us as well as the enemy. Jap dugout defenses of the type found on Iwo Jima would present an ideal testing ground to determine whether we could render the enemy impotent and materially reduce our own casualties. New weapons, such as the rocket, the aerial bomb, and the 4.2 inch mortar, all of which could launch gas with extreme accuracy against a holed up enemy, provide the means.

Gas lends itself to use in such special situations as confront our forces reducing a heavily defended and strongly fortified island of extremely broken terrain and relatively small dimensions. It is to be doubted that it could be employed in general offensives in open country, for it would hamper the user as much as the enemy. Thus the lesson of gas is special, not general, and tactical, not humanitarian. The charge that it is inhumane is both false and irrelevant. With the weapons now being used, almost none of the Japanese on Iwo will survive the attack. The use of gas might save the lives of many hundreds of Americans and of some of the Japanese as well.

TERMS TO THE BORROWER.

Mr. Henning reported the other day that our government is presently considering advancing something like 20 billion dollars of taxpayers' money in various loans for reconstruction in Europe. Presumably this sum includes, among other items, the 6 billions for the Bretton Woods program, another 6 billions for Russia, 4 billions for Britain, and more than 2 billions for France. All of this, of course, is in addition to the amounts already handed out or promised under lend-lease.

At the moment the question whether these post-war loans should or should not be made can be postponed. The present purpose is to suggest two conditions that should be attached to any loans that may be made.

Any nation that wants to borrow from us directly or thru the Bretton Woods agencies should be required to consent in advance to admit American reporters, let them travel freely, write without official hindrance, and send out their stories without benefit of censorship. Every civilized nation accords these rights as a matter of course in peace time, and the proposed condition would amount to nothing more than a formal recognition of a well established custom. Any nation which is found unwilling to let American correspondents report on personalities and events within its borders isn't a good credit risk.

There is no reason to pretend that this condition is not directed primarily against Russia. It is. Russia will emerge from this war the only remaining great nation in the world which will avowedly be run by a totalitarian dictatorship. It is not our business to tell the Russian people how their country should be run, but the lender is always within his rights in imposing terms intended, as these are, to safeguard his investment.

There is another condition that should be attached that will also apply chiefly to Russia. Russia has today a forced labor or slave population, composed chiefly of political prisoners. They number not less than 10 million, according to most estimates. If Stalin intends to continue this barbarous system he'll have to get along without American money.

HISTORY OF CANADA

[Following is an address delivered last night by Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of The Tribune, and broadcast on the Chicago Theater of the Air over W-G-N, WGNB, and the Mutual Broadcasting system.]

BY COL. ROBERT R. McCORMICK.

According to the Canadian Historian Skelton, British colonial policy was not changed by the American Revolution. It continued to be the exploitation of the colonies for the benefit of the kingdom. British statesmen felt that they had erred in being too liberal with the 13 lost colonies and, therefore, planned rigid control of the ones that remained.

A military dictatorship was maintained to govern the feudal colony of Quebec. The early governors preferred the disciplined French to their unruly British subjects. Gov. Murray called the latter "the most immoral collection of men I ever knew." And they replied that "he treated the traders with a rage and rudeness of language and behavior."

After the Revolutionary war, territory ceded to the United States by the treaty of Paris was retained and used to launch Indian attacks on settlers moving into the Northwest Territory. An unexpected consequence of this policy was that Americans, seeking unoccupied land, moved into Quebec in order to avoid the Indian attacks. Here they agitated for representative institutions and, in consequence, the British parliament in 1791 set up in Quebec two governments, divided by the Ottawa river and called Upper and Lower Canada—governments similar to those already existing in Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, consisting of an elective lower house and appointive council constituting an upper house and a royal governor with absolute veto upon legislation and complete executive authority.

To strengthen the upper house and bind it to the empire, large grants of land were set aside for government favorites. It was hoped that a colonial aristocracy could be established. Titles of nobility were not introduced until much later and never were welcomed in the new land.

The leaders of the would-be aristocratic party were United Empire Loyalists, the name assumed by Tories driven from the United States and settled in Canada at the expense of the British treasury. For a while they had everything their own way.

To protect their privileges and the colonial form of government, they obtained a court decision that no one who had left the United States after 1783 could hold or transmit title to property. In such a sparsely settled territory it was impractical to enforce a law which further irritated an element already offended at political discrimination. Large grants were made to the established Church of England, which alone of Protestant churches was authorized to perform marriages.

As the members of the nonelect and of unrecognized Protestant denominations increased, political friction arose. The unprivileged in Upper Canada called the crowd that monopolized the offices and most of the land the "family compact." In Lower Canada racial and religious consciousness came into play and the popular majority called the governing element the "chateau clique."

The political agitation began in Lower Canada when the French seigneurs began selling their property to Englishmen after the peace of 1783 demonstrated that Quebec was not to be rejoined to France. In Upper Canada, it did not begin until after the War of 1812, during which the invasions and counter-invasions brought to the attention of the underprivileged Canadians the republican doctrines that all men were created equal and that governments obtain their just powers from the consent of the governed.

After the war the governor of Montreal, alarmed at the spread of republican doctrines, ordered that the lands between Lake Champlain and Montreal remain unsettled and that all military roads be allowed to relapse into wilderness.

However, the ban on intercourse could not have been especially effective, for Fulton's steamboat line on the Hudson was soon duplicated by a Canadian line on the St. Lawrence. Clinton's canal to Lake Erie was copied by the Canadian canals around the St. Lawrence and Niagara falls. Conversely, Canadian plank roads were soon imitated in the United States.

Canada went so far as to emulate Hamilton's national bank in the Bank of Montreal. As we know, Hamilton's bank was extremely successful as a financial institution, but as it became so dominant as to threaten the independence of government itself it was abolished in the United States. In spite of severe financial catastrophes, not prevented by any subsequent banking laws, no suggestion has ever been made that it be revived.

In Canada the Hamilton system has been maintained. To what extent it has been retained because of Canadian political doctrines or to what extent Canadian political doctrines have been maintained because of the influence of the banking system, may be pondered. This is certain—during the whole history of Canada the Canadian banking system has been a bulwark of what may be termed extreme conservatism.

The course of political emancipation was long and hard. The governor, the judiciary, and the council were all royal appointees and the people were represented only in the assemblies. Therefore, the proponents of governmental reform had to work thru those bodies. Year by year the reformers, led by Robert Gourlay and William Lyon Mackenzie in Upper Canada, and Louis Joseph Papineau in Lower Canada, increased their hold in the assemblies and demanded a reform of the government based upon the American system. They formed a common campaign, on the platform, in the press, and by investigations and reports by parlimentary committees. The "family compact" and the "chateau clique" denounced their critics as traitors and as annexationists—methods to be introduced in this country 100 years later—and used their control of the courts to imprison and exile their opponents.

The provincial assemblies had recourse to the familiar tactics of refusing to vote supplies, which were only partly efficient because the government had certain revenues of its own, in which it resembled the government of Bismarck at a later period. When the Quebec assembly refused to vote a permanent appropriation for the royal office holders, the parliament in London passed a series of resolutions authorizing the governor to take from the treasury, without consent of the assembly, the funds needed for civil administration, thus violating the charter of 1791.

Nothing remained for the patriots but rebellion. These efforts were little more than riots and were suppressed with measures which, while mild compared with those in vogue in Europe, brought deep and lasting resentment in Canada, already far ahead of the home country in ideas of freedom and humanity. Mackenzie and Papineau, with prices on their heads, were forced to seek safety in the United States, where they enlarged their conceptions of freedom and self-government.

Easily as the insurrections had been put down, they indicated such a serious discontent that the British parliament turned to another expedient to retain its rule in Canada. It was to combine the governments of Lower and Upper Canada into one parliament in which Lower Canada, altho possessing much the larger population, should have only an equal voice.

The assembly of Lower Canada was not consulted. A measure passed by the council of that province and by the council and assembly of Upper Canada was adopted by the imperial parliament in 1841. With an elective assembly, an appointive council, and an appointive governor, possessing all executive authority and an absolute veto upon legislation, it was thought that Canada could continue to be ruled by the burocracy of the colonial office thru the governor. No greater miscalculation was ever made by a government.

How this union led to parliamentary self-government we will see next week.

THE ROLE OF MINERALS.

THE chief function of minerals is to act as "catalysts," bringing together and uniting groups of elements which otherwise would remain uncombined. In this fashion, useful products are manufactured. They apparently do not enter to any great extent into the chemistry of the tissues but they accelerate and make more perfect digestion and absorption.

Alphabetically, these substances include: Aluminum, chlorine, chromium, cobalt, copper, fluorine, iodine, iron, magnesium, mercury, nickel, phosphorus, potassium, radium, silicon, sodium, sulfur, zinc, etc. Scores of others are known and undoubtedly many more will be discovered as time goes by.

The calcium content of the body may be as much as two pounds, while only infinitesimal percentages of other minerals are present. Most of us receive all we need when we eat balanced meals. Nevertheless, deficiencies do occur—especially in calcium, iron, and iodine.

Every healthy adult requires daily the amount of calcium found in a pint of milk. Growing children and pregnant women demand more. This element influences the development of bones and teeth, the way our muscles answer messages sent to them via the nerves, and the clotting ability of the blood. In addition, it exercises a protective power in relation to the liver; should the heart appear feeble and unable to pump sufficient vital fluid, the preparation may offer support.

The secretions of the parathyroid glands have the power to withdraw lime from the bones, in order that the circulation may have its share. Whenever these structures are overly active, the skeleton may be affected. Nature apparently designed this machinery to work automatically, using the bones as depots for the release of calcium demanded by the blood and for its return thereto when a sufficient quota is available in the diet.

Iron acts as a "booster" in numerous chemical reactions involving the solution of food; it assists oxidation, which goes on within all the cells; and is an important ingredient of hemoglobin, the oxygen-carrying part of the vital fluid. Even tho the average daily requirement is only one-tenth of an ounce, life could not endure without it. The main storage bins are the liver and spleen altho a trace is found in every cell.

The necessity for iodine has been recognized for centuries. The thyroid gland cannot perform its duties unless it is present. Copper promotes the utilization of iron; magnesium influences the muscles and the nerves; phosphorus [with calcium] determines the state of the bones and teeth, with fluorine and silicon playing a minor role; the sodium-calcium combination maintains rhythmic beating of the heart.

Reinforcements may be called for in some instances, but the average individual need not make a daily assay. If he will include all basic foods in his diet, the chances are that well being will be preserved.

NERVOUS DISORDERS.

J. G. writes: Are narcolepsy and epilepsy similar conditions?

REPLY.

Narcolepsy is not a true epilepsy, but because of certain similarities, it is termed an "epileptic equivalent." Sufferers with this condition have an uncontrollable desire to sleep, but none of the convulsions and unconscious periods typical of the latter disease exists.

VISION DEFECT.

REPLY.

In the majority of cases, poor vision—chiefly farsightedness. In some individuals coördination or "teamwork" between the two eyes is not yet developed. The disorder may also follow a serious illness and accompany weakness or paralysis of an eye muscle.

BIG-HEARTED.

M. G. writes: What is meant by "fat around the heart?"

REPLY.

It means just exactly that. Fat may be deposited about any organ and the heart is no exception. This seldom causes symptoms or reduces the efficiency of the "pump."

PRESSURE MEASURE.

J. D. T. writes: How is normal blood pressure determined?

REPLY.

Blood pressure per se is determined with a sphygmomanometer. Normal values were obtained by averaging the readings of several thousand healthy individuals.

MAY HELP.

K. A. writes: I understand a warm climate is recommended for bronchiectasis. Will this cure the disease?

REPLY.

It may not cure but the patient's comfort and feeling of well being will be improved.

STIMULANT.

R. G. writes: Is there any nourishment in tea?

REPLY.

None whatsoever—unless you add sugar, cream, or lemon.

POSSIBLE.

R. S. writes: I would like to know if one can have a normal blood count and still be anemic.

REPLY.

Yes, if the iron content is low.

LIQUID MEASURE.

J. G. writes: How many cubic centimeters are there in one ounce?

REPLY.

There are approximately 30 cubic centimeters in one fluid ounce.

BAD LAWS IN GOOD CAUSES.

Chicago, March 5.—Gov. Dewey has joined the burocrats. His anti-discrimination bill presented to the legislature of New York is based upon the oriental philosophy of spy government. He seeks to saddle five super-spies on the taxpayers of his state at salaries of $10,000 a year and an unknown number of undersnoopers.

Instead of promoting freedom, legislation of this type promotes slavery. It is discrimination worse than the one it seeks to eliminate. It is discrimination against all the people of New York by their rulers.

If an evil exists, as the proponents of the legislation maintain, why not pass old type, time honored, American legislation based upon the common law principle of accusatory law. Name the offense and the penalty for the act. Let the aggrieved file a complaint before a court, where an open hearing can be had in the good old American way, a way which is fast disappearing.

The bill as proposed opens the way to blackmail, bribery, and oppression, political and otherwise. The fact that a mere human has been made a glorified public official does not make him sagacious, intelligent, or honest. Such a person is endowed with all the weaknesses and evils of those he seeks to direct and control. The aim of America should be for the least government possible. Under the principle of accusatory law, we maintained freedom and grew great. Remember that every city ordinance, state or federal law that is passed, every bureau or commission that is created, and every regulation which is imposed upon us clips away just so much human liberty. If this trend of oriental spy form of government continues, our whole system will break down and we will find ourselves in the hands of burocrats and officials who will be our ruthless rulers. Too many rely on the thought that as long as we can vote we have control. We have been speedily voting away that control. Government officials have been given and are usurping more and more power and the citizen has accordingly less and less. As these controls engulf him, we find his freedom of speech and action suppressed by degrees either by law or thru fear. We should turn back before it is too late.

FRED L. STEERS.

THE NEW ORDER.

Gary, Ind., March 5.—We are wondering if Mr. Roosevelt could not have said "yes" to all of Stalin's demands just as well from Washington as he did from Yalta. That would have saved a lot of gas and left room on our crowded transportation system for several more soldier boys [or dogs]. We cannot imagine how any one could have left Europe in a worse condition concerning democracy and the freedom of the small nations than this so-called meeting of the Big Three has done. [It has turned out to be one big one and two very small ones.]

Stalin has his foot on Latvia, Lithuania, and Estonia, and has a stranglehold on Finland, Poland, Yugoslavia, and several of the other small nationalities. But the end is not yet: he is to have a mandate over a large part of Germany, and any one who knows his methods can guess what that means. Then comes Dumbarton Oaks, which says that no power on earth can convict him of a crime, and if any one dares oppose him, our army and navy must be used to crush them and uphold him.

How many millions have already been executed or sent to Siberia by Stalin no one knows. Roosevelt is helping to enslave far more people in Europe than Lincoln set free in America. Are we to let this thing go on, or can America wake up and stop it? If any one has imagined that we are fighting for liberty and democracy, the present trend of affairs should open his eyes. We are driving straight toward a third World war which will mean the end of civilization and Christianity. Shall we sit idly by?

LICENSE DATE FORGOTTEN.

Chicago, March 3.—In applying for a photostatic copy of my marriage certificate from the county clerk, I find it [1] necessary to have the exact date the license was issued. I cannot remember the date, as it was necessary to delay the marriage and I failed to make a record of the date the license was issued. I understand that churches keep records only of the marriage date. 2. Can you suggest a way that I could find my record?

J. B.

1. We suggest that you try supplying the approximate date and the limits within which a search would need to be made.
2. It is largely a matter of following up clews in your possession.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

REPORT FROM SOUTHPORT.

SOUTHPORT, Lancashire, England, Feb. 16.—I am writing this letter to your paper chiefly because the general opinion over here is that yours is the most anti-British American newspaper and I believe in taking the bull by the horns.

It is meant in the first place to be a letter of appreciation to the American people from an ordinary working class Englishwoman. No doubt thousands of you over there have heard of our town from your boys and are wondering how they are behaving themselves over here in England. Well, I suppose they are behaving just like our own boys are doing in your and other countries. They are away from home with their first feeling of real freedom and sometimes their spirits run a little high which is only natural and what can be expected, but they don't overdo it.

Our town is really lovely. The main street, Lord st., is one of the most beautiful in England, our only recognizable competitor in this connection being Princess st., Edinburgh. It is a very long, wide street with verandaed shops on one side, bandstand and cinemas on the other. Huge trees on each side form an avenue as far as you can see which, pre-war, were lit up by thousands of colored electric lights. It is a holiday resort, situated about 40 miles from Manchester and 20 from Liverpool, a playground for Lancashire cotton mill workers during their summer holidays, cotton manufacture being the staple industry, altho, of course, most of the operatives today are on war work.

I have given you this little picture of our town to let you see what kind of a place your boys spend their vacations in. My Scottish friend, who is a voluntary worker at one of their Red Cross centers, and I have met hundreds of them during the last three years and without exception they are all very likable. Their natural easy going manner appeals to most of us over here and when they have left you have no idea how we miss them, more especially those who were stationed here for about six months and came into town regularly. We have had boys from all the states and, believe me, some of the younger ones have been very homesick. They like nothing better than talking to some of us older ones about their homes [their mothers invariably come first] and showing us photographs of their wives, relatives, and sweethearts. We realize they are a long way from home and require a little sympathy and friendly understanding when they come away from flying duties.

Don't you people over there believe it when you read about your boys being led away by some of our flighty girls. Give them credit for being able to sort the wheat from the chaff. We have our bad girls, I'll admit, like every other country and we ourselves dislike them just as much as you do, but they are only a minority and the chances are your boys won't meet them unless they go looking for them.

Well, the war is getting along nicely now and the end does not seem so far away as far as the Germans are concerned, and so I thought it better to write this letter now before it was too late. We are all hoping it won't take long to finish the Japs when they are the only ones to concentrate on. Earlier in the war, once or twice, I argued with some of your boys who appeared rather skeptical as to our aims regarding the Japs and have said I couldn't understand them, because we have lost quite a lot to the Japs, quite apart from the fact that we owe a great deal to your nation for the material help you gave us during the blitz period, and the women alone over here will never forget the food which was sent over here. It is quite truthful to say that when most of our food was destroyed by fire there was very little in our shops apart from American and Canadian tinned goods. This helped to keep us on our feet, and thank you all very much for it.

Let me assure you Americans we ordinary people dislike to hear disparaging remarks made about your boys by such big mouthed people as Noel Coward just as much as you do and we look upon him as a nonentity and a pain in the neck. We think it is a great pity our government hasn't anything better to do with our taxes than waste them on paying for him to prance around the battle fronts, throwing his weight about. His war effort is just about as good as some of our English artists who have stuck in the United States, out of the way for years, but don't think we do not appreciate some of our thorobreds such as Bee Lillie, Gertie Lawrence, and one or two more.

In conclusion I must say thank you very much, to all you ladies and gentlemen of the United States for the continuous help you have given us, I am sure this is how we all feel over here, and we sincerely hope a lasting friendship has been created between the two countries.

A CORRECTION.

In a letter printed Feb. 25 in the Voice of the People the parents of an officer killed in France reported that they had been informed after his death that he had withdrawn his authorization for pay deduction to meet premiums on his national service life insurance, which, in consequence, had lapsed before his death. They asserted that when an officer leaves for overseas duty the war department discontinues the deductions, unless the officer gives specific instructions to have them continued. The war department has informed the Washington bureau of The Tribune that this is not true. Insurance deductions are not discontinued unless the officer so directs. On the contrary, when officers are ready to leave the country they are asked if their insurance is in order and if they wish to increase it. This information is printed for the reassurance of any families of officers who may have been worried by the statements in the original letter.

THE OPA GOES IN CIRCLES.

Elmhurst, Ill., Feb. 27.—According to Chester Bowles, clothing prices have risen 11½ per cent. I could have told him that a long time ago. My only comment is that his figure is far too conservative. One cannot but wonder why, with the vast OPA setup, this condition has been allowed to occur.

On one hand, we taxpayers have been regimented into accepting this vast army of payrollers, while the unions have been allowed to demand higher and higher rates which, in turn, raise the prices which the OPA is supposed to curb.

What a glorious merry-go-round!

AUNTY RACQUETTE.

A GUIDE TO ALL MEN.

Chicago, March 5.—I read with interest the letter written by C. E. Dorrington to the Voice of the People with reference to the extinguishing of the flood lights lighting the steeple and cross of the Chicago Temple-First Methodist church in the loop. Surely, if the beacon on the Palmolive building is kept burning for the guidance of flyers, the beacon on this church should be allowed to burn as a guidance to all men. Thousands of people traveling on the Outer drive and riding thru the loop never look at this steeple without thinking of our Savior.

[Advice and assistance on draft and military questions, the problems of dependents of service men and veterans, is given here and by mail if a stamped envelope is sent. Personal advice and assistance are given veterans by appointment.]

S. B. J. writes: "I am being retired for disability. I am offered a choice of accepting 85 per cent disability pension from the veterans administration or retaining my retirement pay which amounts to $112 per month. What exactly is involved in the choice?"

About the only matter involved aside from the difference in cash received would be that income received as retirement pay is taxable for income tax purposes whereas the disability pension is not taxable.

J. L. writes: "I was released from the army Dec. 23, 1944, for war work and I am in the enlisted reserve corps. I received notice from the collector of internal revenue stating that I owe $127 taxes for 1943 which amount 'must be paid by March 15, 1945.' I would like to know if I am allowed an extended time for payment, or must I pay it in full?"

You do not give sufficient facts for a full answer, but the notice of payment you received is evidently based upon previous deferments. It is advisable that you obtain a deferment blank and fill it out if you are not able to pay.

Note: We have received a request for any and every type of fresh water fishing tackle from a marine corps rehabilitation center caring for over 3,000 veteran fighters of the Pacific. The center is located in an area where there is very fine lake and stream fishing. Baits, flies, rods, reels, and lines will all be very welcome. Fishing will provide relaxation and helpful exercise for these men who have lived thru so much. The address is available on request.

NOW SHOPPERS GET ALL EXCEPT SQUEAL OF PIGS

Further Decline Seen in Fresh Meat.

The truth of the old saying that the packers utilize everything of the pig but his squeal at last is being brought home to Chicagoans, a survey of meat dealers yesterday indicated.

Shoppers were going into stores looking for a pork roast and coming out carrying an armful of brains or kidneys. Persons who had never known that such odd meat products as pork lungs were considered a human food were being offered these, and even more extraordinary items, by their butchers.

Butcher Is Disapproving.

Allen Wagner, owner of Wagner's market, 2457 Pratt av., a man who likes nothing better than to wrap up a succulent rib roast or a brace of thick lamb chops for a shopper, listed disapprovingly some of the delicacies which he was offering [or, in some cases, refusing to offer] to his customers.

There were ox tips [the tips of the tongues]; pork, beef, and lamb lungs; tripe [from the stomach of beef]; a variety of cold meats; pork kidneys, and the brains of various food animals. Some of the brains Wagner refused to sell, saying they were "no good."

He declared that he had to take some of these undesirable types of meat in order to get fresh meats, but indicated that he weeded out and offered for sale only what he deemed best.

Even Pigs' Ears Show Up.

Wagner complained of the extreme difficulty of getting turkeys and suggested that a flow of this type of meat into the market would do much to compensate for the shortage of the more desirable types of beef, pork, and lamb.

From other sources it was learned that unusual quantities of hamburger and chili con carne meat and liver and hearts are finding their way to market. Some stores are displaying pigs' ears.

Beef products, which used to account for 30 per cent of the business of one major outlet, now constitute only 10 per cent. There has been a rebirth of interest in sausage among people who never used to see a sausage between one summr picnic and another.

Less Food Value.

Dr. Theodore R. Van Dellen, health editor of THE TRIBUNE, said that the odd items being offered contain, in general, fewer calories and less protein than standard meats. He pointed out that they must be eaten in larger quantities than standard meats or else supplemented with nonmeat proteins if food values are to be maintained at former levels.

Whereas a half pound of breast of lamb contains 43.9 grams of protein and 685 calories, the same weight of lamb brains offers only 21.8 grams of protein and 245 calories, Dr. Van Dellen said. The corresponding figures for tripe are 39.2 and 210, for beef brains 22.1 and 300, for beef lungs 35.6 and 210, for pigs' feet 33.2 and 370. These figures take no account of such factors as fat, carbohydrates, and vitamin content.

The Smithfield Foods store at 1557 Sherman av., Evanston, drew so many shoppers yesterday that the manager, Ted Jacks, closed it for a time to allow the clerks to catch up.

A spokesman for Armour & Co., refused to give any assurance that the meat shortage would be relieved quickly. He pointed to the lighter receipts of animals in the stock yards and to the enormous requirements of the uniformed services and predicted that there would be a reduction in the per capita civilian consumption of meat.

Heavy Duty Tire Allocation Reduced 50 Per Cent by ODT

A 50 per cent reduction in the number of heavy duty tires allocated to meet essential commercial motor vehicle requirements for the second quarter of 1945 was announced in Washington, D. C., yesterday by Col. J. Monroe Johnson, director of the office of defense transportation. Col. Johnson said the ODT requested 2,781,000 truck and bus tires for the April thru June period, but was allowed only 1,410,000, or 50.7 per cent, by the war production board.

Shortages of carbon black and other tire components have resulted in a temporary cessation of seven-day week tire production, he explained.

Reductions in retail prices of tire boots, patches, and reliners will become effective May 11, the office of price administration announced. Prices will be cut from 10 to 33⅓ per cent of the levels when tire sales were frozen in March, 1942. There was an "undue rise in the months before the ceilings went on," officials explained.

The OPA in Washington, D. C., ordered a cut in sugar, lard, and processed food allotments for nearly all industrial users. Effective April 1, the reduction was similar to one made several days ago to curtail the excess ration spending power of institutional users, such as restaurants and hotels.

Preservers and ice cream manufacturers were exempted from the sugar cut of 5 per cent below 1942 base period use. Allotments of lard, shortening, and cooking and salad oils will be reduced from 20 to 28 per cent below 1944 use, except in the case of bakery and cereal product manufacturers. Processed food allotments will be slashed 25 per cent under 1944.

All stocks of rationed food and ration currency in excess of what the OPA termed "adequate working inventories" will be taken from industrial users between March 16 and June 15. Users will be permitted to retain about 60 day supplies of sugar and processed foods. An average of a month's supply of red point foods will be allowed. However, they will be permitted only a 15 day inventory of meats and fats recently added to the ration list.

The OPA announced that it has authorized its field rationing officials to allot additional rationed foods, including meats and fats, sugar and processed foods, to floating craft on inland waters.

Food Officials to Speak on Shortages Wednesday

R. C. Pollock, general manager of the National Live Stock and Meat board; James H. Black, president of the Wholesale Grocers Association of Chicago, and Marion Isbell, metropolitan OPA director, will speak on present food supply problems at a mass meeting sponsored by the Food Retailers of Greater Chicago, Inc., in the grand ballroom of the Midland hotel, 172 Adams st., at 8:15 p. m. Wednesday.

Barrett Warns Motorists Lacking New Auto Tags

Springfield, Ill., March 10 [Special].—Secretary of State Barrett today issued his first warning to Illinois motorists who have not purchased 1945 license plates. He said he would request police to take direct action against auto license laggards after March 15. He pointed out that the motor vehicle law requires that motorists must register automobiles by Jan. 1 and that two months grace period had already been allowed.

12 SENT TO JAIL FOR DRINKING AFTER CURFEW

Other N. Y. Bar Patrons Leap from Windows.

New York, March 10 [Special].—Twelve persons, eight of them women, were sent to jail today for taking a drink after midnight. They were arrested in two of the numerous New York speakeasies that have been spawned by War Mobilizer Byrnes' midnight curfew edict.

The 12 were the first New Yorkers to lose their liberty since the Byrnes ban went into effect.

39 Escape with Fines.

In three early morning raids in Manhattan, 76 speakeasy customers and operators were seized by police. No furniture was chopped up by police in these raids, tho in a raid yesterday eight police ax men hacked a speakeasy to pieces. After that raid, the Bronx district attorney's office warned that such destruction was illegal.

Some of the patrons were dismissed when brought before Magistrate Anna M. Kross in week-end court, but 39 were fined $5 apiece on disorderly conduct charges and 12 others were given two day jail sentences because they could not pay the fines. The operators were held in $500 bail each.

The court used the testimony of police that the patrons had used "loud and boisterous language" as a basis for upholding the disorderly conduct charges.

Dimmed Lights, Heavy Curtains.

A plain clothes policeman testified that dimmed lights and heavy black curtains lent an inviting air to one of the raided speakeasies. When the raid was made, he said, several patrons jumped out of the windows and made their getaway. Forty-one others, however, including 17 women, were arrested. They were among those who were accused of talking "boisterously."

Whisky was reported being sold at 50 cents a drink and beer at 30 cents a glass.

Magistrate Kross, lamenting the fact that speakeasies are "popping up all over the place," called on the city council for local legislation that would make it possible to punish patrons caught in drinking places after midnight. She urged the council to decree that "Any one who violates the spirit of the law is guilty of disorderly conduct."

Burglars in Truck Take Gasoline and Oil Coupons

Burglars with a truck stole a safe containing coupons for 100,000 gallons of gasoline and 75,000 gallons of fuel oil from the main office of Bulk Service Stations, Inc., 2958 N. Ashland av., the manager, Louis Wine, reported to Sheffield av. police yesterday. He said another safe, empty, had been cracked and that a third safe had been battered but not opened.

ORDER TAVERNS TO POST LIQUOR CEILING PRICES

All eating and drinking establishments serving beer and alcoholic beverages for consumption on the premises will be required to post liquor price ceilings beginning April 16, James F. Riley Jr., acting area director of the office of price administration, announced yesterday.

Two official OPA posters will be provided, Riley said. One will be for beer, ale, porter, or stout sold by the bottle or glass, and the other for 14 types of alcoholic beverages: Rye whisky, rye highball, bourbon whisky, bourbon highball, Scotch whisky, Scotch highball, gin, martini cocktail, manhattan cocktail, old fashioned cocktail, rum cocktail, sherry, wine, white wine, and red wine.

Both posters, he added, must list the number of ounces of the drink or bottle.

WMC REVERSES 'BREAKS' GIVEN LATE BOWLERS

The confusion which has existed since the Byrnes curfew request became effective two weeks ago was aggravated yesterday when William H. Spencer, regional war man power director, was ordered by Washington, D. C., to reverse his statement of Friday which would have permitted league bowling teams to complete matches started by 10 p. m. even if they continued past midnight.

In a curt statement, Spencer once more clamped the curfew tightly on bowling alleys and warned that any remaining open after midnight would be "in willful violation of Byrnes' curfew request."

A short time later, after a meeting of WMC and city officials in Mayor Kelly's office, in which the curfew was discussed, Spencer issued another statement declaring that "the city of Chicago is coöperating with the WMC. . . . We are getting as good compliance as can be expected."

WMC Also Confused.

Mayor Kelly also reiterated a previous statement that "until I lose faith in Chicago, there will be no policing of the order." He said he believed Chicago was giving better coöperation than other cities.

That the flurry of orders and interpretations from the regional WMC office has confused its own personnel as much as the bowling alley operators was evidenced by Spencer's statement yesterday. One point in his announcement declared, "Operators of bowling alleys will be held strictly accountable for any activities past midnight, other than the time needed by patrons to change clothes and leave the premises."

An hour after the statement was released, newsmen were ordered to eliminate the last clause, indicating bowlers must be dressed and out of the establishment by midnight.

2d Reversal by Washington.

Yesterday's reversal was the second Washington order upsetting Spencer's liberal interpretations of the curfew. Last week the regional director ruled that restaurants might remain open after midnight providing no entertainment was offered and no liquor was sold or consumed. Within 24 hours, he was ordered to rescind his interpretation, and all establishments again were told to close at midnight except those operating on a 24 hour schedule.

The Chicago Restaurant Owners association, which plans a strong protest to Washington, disclosed yesterday that a representative committee would go to the capital not later than Wednesday to meet with WMC officials.

Donald F. Kiesau, executive vice president, said efforts will be made to prove that war workers are being harmed by the curfew and that it should be lifted for the sake of the nation's health.

BAD . . . AND GOOD NEWS FOR EVERY CAR OWNER

THE BAD NEWS

THE GOOD NEWS

Six months ago, we in the rubber industry believed we'd have new tires for most of you early in 1945. Today, we know we won't. The military is taking many more tires than anticipated.

The only honest answer we can give to the uestion "When will I get new tires?" is "We don't now—but it won't be soon."

If you're going to keep your car on the road in 1945, the chances are you'll have to do it with the tires you now have.

Recapping today can be done so well that it can give you thousands of miles of extra wear from your present tires.

BUT—you must have your tires recapped in time... before they get down to the fabric...

How to be sure of an A-1 recapping job

Goodyear dealers are the largest, most experienced group of tire service men in this country.

Through them, you can get Goodyear dependable Extra-Mileage Recapping—a Goodyear-developed method, using Goodyear materials and done by Goodyear-trained men.

In addition, many Goodyear dealers can give you 24-hour service. And most Goodyear dealers can lend you tires, if you need them, while yours are being recapped.

To keep your car rolling in 1945, let your Goodyear dealer take care of your tires—starting today.

'MERRY WIDOW' WEARS 40 YEARS LIGHTLY ON W-G-N

Tripping Melodies Heard on Air Theater.

BY EDWARD BARRY.

"The Merry Widow" wore its 40 years lightly last night as Chicago Theater of the Air musicians and actors gave it an able performance before an overflow audience in the W-G-N main studio.

The operetta's lovely waltz, which many a man and woman now gray used to swoon to back in the days of Stanley Steamers, retained all of its old magic as it fell from the lips or rose from the bows of last night's performers.

Charm Is Rediscovered.

Those in the audience who had forgotten what a delectable tune "Villa" was, or who had neglected it in favor of the more celebrated waltz, were brought up short by the charm which Henry Weber's musical forces rediscovered in it.

Jolly tripping melodies such as "Silly, Silly Cavalier," and a dialog far superior in quality to the operetta average, also conspired to make the production an outstanding one.

The Lehar operetta tells the story of the complications in the life of a light herated widow whose many charms [and whose 20 million dollars] draw numberless suitors to her side. True love triumphs and the 20 millions remain intact, altho in one moment of almost painful suspense it seems as if the girl is won but the money lost.

Dance Away the Night.

The whole pleasantly preposterous story is set against the backdrop of a pre-[first]war world in which people danced the night away at Maxim's and had no responsibilities aside from their love life.

Marion Claire and Penny Perry sang the lilting melodies assigned to the women of the cast and Gilbert Russell and Earle Wilkie those of the men. The W-G-N chorus and orchestra added immeasurably to the impact of some of the operetta's pleasantest music.

Important dramatic roles were taken by Sondra Gair, Laurette Fillbrandt, William Everett, and John Barclay. The production was the work of Jack La Frandre. The operetta was broadcast by W-G-N and the Mutual network.

HUNT FOR SLAIN WOMAN'S BODY SHIFTS TO PARK

Search for the remains of Mrs. Rose Michaelis, 58, of 6855 Clyde av., who disappeared Feb. 28, was extended yesterday to Jackson park in the belief that Joseph Nischt, who has confessed burning her body in the apartment house furnace, may have made a burial in the park. Capt. Edward Kelly of Woodlawn district ordered the new search.

Other policemen under Sgt. Emmett Murphy continued screening a pile of ashes gathered from the apartment house, for which Nischt was the janitor. After a week's work on the dump, on Wolf lake, there still was 10 tons to be worked over.

Altho Nischt has signed a statement that he struck Mrs. Michaelis on a drunken impulse and pushed her into the furnace, police have been unable to establish the corpus delicti.

West Side Baby Born with Two Front Teeth

When the six pound, five and a half ounce son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Sterk, 464 N. Austin blvd., was born Thursday night in St. Anne's hospital, 4900 Thomas st., he displayed two front teeth. His mother was amused, and her attending physician, Dr. Peter McLennon, said that teeth in new born infants are uncommon, but not rare.

Examine Papers

LAUD IDEALISM PUPILS SHOW IN TRIBUNE ESSAYS

Judges Pick Winning History Papers.

The idealism and consciousness of the values of representative government which were apparent in the papers submitted by high school students in THE TRIBUNE'S "Citizens of Tomorrow" American history essay contest won the warm praise of the judges who last week selected the seven top papers from among the 859 which were entered.

"There was an expression of idealism in virtually every paper," said Dr. William W. Sweet of the University of Chicago, chairman of the adjudication committee. "Also there was a consciousness of the religious influences in the history of our country."

Dr. Sweet criticized adversely other aspects of the papers. "There was an inadequate knowledge of facts in many cases," he declared. "I think we might reasonably have expected a greater degree of accuracy in the essays."

Finds Writers Put Over Points.

Harold Korey of the Senn High school faculty, another judge, was gratified at the ability of the writers to put over the points they were trying to make and by the awareness they displayed of the value of American history as a source of inspiration.

However, he said that some of the writers undertook a treatment of a subject more ambitious than either the training they had had or the time at their disposal would have justified. He said that in many cases interpretation of facts was faulty.

Robert W. Twyman, teacher of history at St. Ignatius High school, the third judge, was pleased with consciousness of democracy which he found in the papers, but he too noticed the lack of ability to interpret facts which was apparent in the work of some of the writers.

Unanimous on First Prize Essay.

After reading and weighing the papers, the judges unanimously agreed on the first prize essay. The winner will be announced on the "Citizens of Tomorrow" broadcast over W-G-N next Saturday at 10 a. m., and will be present in the studio to read the winning paper to the radio audience. A war bond of $500 maturity value, first prize in the contest, will be presented on the same program. This broadcast in the "Citizens of Tomorrow" series will be a salute to De La Salle High school.

SET AREA GOAL AT 10,000 TONS OF PAPER IN DAY

A goal of 10 thousand tons of waste paper to be collected in one day in Chicago and other cities within a radius of 75 miles has been set for April 28 by the Chicago waste paper salvage committee, John R. Robinson, general chairman, said yesterday.

"We want a bundle of waste paper in front of every home and building in the Chicago area," he said. "Even hotels and apartment buildings, which sell their paper direct to dealers, will be asked to put bales of paper on their sidewalks as a morale booster and as a substantial donation to the Red Cross."

Lloyd M. Johnson, commissioner of streets and electricity, and his assistant, Albert Konifes, will direct the use of 1,000 trucks in picking up paper from curbs in Chicago, and another 1,000 will be used in outlying communities. Six thousand workers, including Boy Scouts, will man the trucks.

The paper salvage committee will meet Tuesday noon in the Morrison hotel.

Mob in Ecuador Traps Constitution Delegates

QUITO, Ecuador, March 10 (AP).—Delegates to Ecuador's constitutional convention were virtually trapped in the assembly hall last night by a hostile crowd which gathered outside as political tension mounted in the city. Shots rang out inside the hall, but none was hurt, during discussion of an amnesty for political prisoners of the previous Ecuadorean regime.

NEW TYPE LOAN COMPETES WITH FHA INSURANCE

More Safeguards Offered at Lower Cost.

BY AL CHASE.

Direct, country-wide competition with federally insured mortgages is contemplated by several large life insurance companies, it was disclosed yesterday by the announcement that the plan already is being used successfully by one large organization. These privately insured mortgages will cost less than federal housing administration loans and offer more increased security to the borrower and his family than do either ordinary uninsured or FHA insured loans, it was said.

Frederick L. Gratiot, a Chicago representative of the Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States, sponsor of the initial lending program, outlined the advantages of private insurance as compared with governmental.

Combined with Life Policy.

The new "assured home ownership plan" provides cash direct from the insurance company to the borrower without the usual intermediary of a private banker, and is a combination of mortgage and life insurance. Unlike FHA government insurance which safeguards the mortgagee [the lender] at the expense of the mortgagor [the borrower] who pays the insurance premiums, privately financed mortgage insurance protects the home owner by preventing his family from losing its home if he dies.

On a 20 year $5,000 loan [during which time the mortgage is completely amortized or paid off] a 35 year old borrower would pay $531 less compared with a similar FHA loan, taking into account the $2,753.15 accumulated dividends and cash value of his insurance.

On maturity of the mortgage the home owner may continue his insurance if he wishes or close it out and take the $2,753.15 in cash, or income. On FHA loans only one dividend was paid to home owners who paid up their FHA loans during 1944. It ranged from $1.81 to $20 per $1,000 of mortgage.

How Program Works.

Here's how the new plan works. John Jones decides to build or buy a house costing $7,500. He goes to an agent of the insurance company who determines that Jones is a good risk financially and physically. If Jones cannot pass the medical test it will not affect his obtaining the loan; he just could not take advantage of the insurance offer.

So Jones gets a $5,000 mortgage payable with 4 per cent interest over 20 years in monthly payments [interest and principal] of $30.30. [The FHA interest rate is 4½ per cent and the monthly payment $31.65.]

His monthly insurance premium is $12.45 or a total of $2,988 for 20 years. He gets back at the end of the 20 years, however, $1,635 in guaranteed cash value and $1,118.15 in accumulated dividends, which makes the net cost of his insurance $234.85, compared with $294.70 in FHA insurance charges. The difference is more than the indicated $59.85, however, because Jones gets back $2,753.15 in cash value.

Some Features Unusual.

Gratiot termed several features of the Equitable plan unusual. One is that the insurance company pays appraisal and attorney fees and other expenses up to 1 per cent of the loan. For example, acquisition costs on a recent typical $5,000 loan were $47 and this was paid by the insurance company. If costs had been more than $50 the borrower would have had to pay the additional amount. Acquisition fees on a $5,000 FHA insured loan average are $154, which the borrower has to pay.

After about 15 years [or three-fourths of the loan period] the cash value of the insurance policy is available to pay up the entire mortgage if the borrower wishes. Several maturity plans are available. One provides for payment of 70 per cent of the mortgage in 20 years, at the end of which period the cash value of the policy will take care of the balance of the loan.

Plan Four Flat Buildings for War Workers

Plans for four flat buildings to cost $615,000 and contain a total of 102 living units were announced yesterday. All are on the south side and will be built to house Negro war workers whose names are on the WHC waiting list, said Leonard R. McDonald, director of war housing center.

The largest project will be built at 5130-48 Calumet av. by 5130 Calumet Building corporation, from plans by Charles Wheeler Nicol. It will be a three story fireproof walk-up building, containing 36 flats of 4½ rooms each. It will cost $210,000 and be financed with a $190,000 FHA mortgage negotiated thru Percy Wilson Mortgage and Finance corporation. William O. Burns was attorney for the owner.

At the northwest corner of Wabash av. and 61st st. a two story flat building to cost $185,000 will be built by Wabash Building corporation from plans by Carl J. Kastrup, architect. It will contain 32 four room suites and will be financed with a $165,000 FHA mortgage thru Dovenmuehle, Inc. Sanford & Co. was broker in the site purchase.

Across the street at the southwest corner a $160,000 flat building, also designed by Kastrup, will be erected by the S. W. Wabash corporation, and financed thru Dovenmuehle, Inc. with a $145,000 FHA loan. It will have 24 four room units.

A 10 flat building to cost $60,000 will be built at 4844 South Parkway, from plans by Nathaniel Koenigsberg, architect. Completion is set for Aug. 1.

South Side School Leases Floor in Loop Building

The International Accountants society, correspondence school of accounting and allied subjects, which has occupied its own building at 3411 Michigan av. since 1926, has leased the 12th floor of the McKinlock building, southwest corner of Wells and Jackson sts., for 10 years from April 1. Gerard E. Hausen was broker and Sudler & Co. represented the lessor. Founded in Detroit in 1903, the school was moved to Chicago in 1917. John T. Madden, dean of the school of commerce, accounts, and finance of New York university, is president.

CHICAGOANS RAP SENATE BILL TO LIMIT WORKERS

Labor, Business Leaders Oppose Compulsion.

The bill passed by the senate giving the war man power commission authority to dictate the number of workers to be employed in every business and industrial establishment in the country was the target yesterday of a barrage of criticism from Chicago labor and business leaders.

The measure was the senate's answer to the house "work or jail" bill which calls for drafting men 18 to 45 who quit their war jobs and which has been opposed in the senate.

"I'm against it 100 per cent," said Daniel D. Carmell, counsel for the Illinois State Federation of Labor and the Chicago Federation of Labor. A bill of that kind never will obtain the objectives wanted and the American people never will work under compulsion."

Soldier Opposition Seen.

He added that "our fighting men overseas are against a bill of that kind. They don't want to return to a country ruled by compulsion."

Joseph Mattson, district director of the United Auto Workers, Aircraft and Agricultural Implement Workers union [CIO], said he doesn't "favor any legislative control of labor, but the war man power commission is the proper agency to handle the problem."

He said he is convinced the senate proposal is better than the "work or fight" bill.

Confusion Is Predicted.

James L. Donnelly, executive vice president of the Illinois Manufacturers association, charged that the bill is unnecesary and unqualifiedly bad.

"If it is enacted," he said, "it will confuse and harass employers who have made and are now making a valiant and highly successful effort to fill the requests of our armed forces.

"Unless it is assumed," he continued, "that the WMC and its local agents have omnipotent wisdom, ability and facilities, it can be expected that all the machinery of production will be confused, muddled and most seriously jeopardized if this bill is enacted."

Cites Production Record.

He pointed out that it is significant that, under the voluntary man power-labor coöperative plan now in effect, not only the production requests of our military forces have been met, but also a substantial part of the military requests of our allies. "This so-called labor rationing program will definitely interfere with war production in Illinois plants and will retard the war effort," he added.

In the meanwhile the absence of any Illinois men in the Camp Ellis training center under the "work or fight" order issued last December by War Mobilization Director Byrnes was accounted for by the fact that there have been no violators in the state to date.

VOTE TO CALL RAIL HEADS IN PULLMAN PROBE

A state senate committee which is investigating black market operations in Pullman reservations voted yesterday to subpena traffic and passenger officials of three major railroads to testify at hearings. The action was taken at the first meeting of the special committee, held in the city council chamber.

Officials named by the committee include J. W. Switzer and A. W. Foellger of the New York Central; E. L. Pardee, H. C. Duvall, and N. A. Hersether of the Chicago and North Western, and T. B. Gallaher, J. R. Moriarty, and T. N. Thompson of the Santa Fe railroad.

"Railroads have signified they would be glad to assist the committee in stamping out any black market dealings in reservations," Sen. Libonati [D., Chicago] said. "With their help we will find out the facts and offer corrective suggestions."

PHONE RED BOOK SHOWS 32 PCT. DROP IN DOCTORS

Fewer Dentists Also Are Listed Now.

A decrease of 32.1 per cent in the number of physicians and surgeons in Chicago in the last four years is shown in the March classified telephone directory [The Red Book], which will be distributed to subscribers beginning tomorrow.

The new directory lists 4,015 physicians and surgeons, compared with 5,916 in March, 1941. There are 179 fewer doctors listed in the new book than in the September, 1944, directory, which listed 4,194.

Dentists Also Decrease.

There are 2,660 dentists listed in the new book, compared with 2,630 last September, and 3,475 in March, 1941. From March, 1941, to March, 1945, the number of drug store listings have decreased 12.4 per cent, from 2,016 to 1,766.

Gasoline filling stations decreased 23.3 per cent, from 2,051 to 1,573, and retail groceries dropped 17.3 per cent, from 4,296 to 3,551. The number of grocery stores increased 57 in the last six months.

3,000 Headings Listed.

Almost 3,000 different headings are listed in the Red Book directory, which is published twice a year. Officials of the Reuben H. Donnelley corporation, publishers, said "a flood of new products and services" at the end of the war is indicated by many recent requests for new classified headings.

In the last year entries have been increased under such classifications as diemakers, plastics and plastic products, machine tools, and industrial diamonds. Among new classifications are "Coatings Protective," "Air Freid," and "Air Raid Protection Equipment."

Ickes' Son Wounded in Fighting at Iwo

Washington, D. C., March 10 (AP).—Second Lt. Raymond Wilmarth Ickes, marine corps, son of Interior Secretary Ickes, was wounded in the chest at Iwo Island March 7, it was learned today. His wife, Miralotta L. Ickes, lives in Silver Spring, Md. He joined the marines May 27, 1943.

VICTIM'S HANDS OFFER CLEW TO HIS CRUCIFIERS

Search for three men who spiked Fred Walcher, messiah of a world peace order, to a cross early Friday was directed yesterday to those of his followers who had enough knowledge of anatomy to perform an expert crucifixion. After examination of Walcher's pierced palms, Dr. J. M. Houston, Bridewell physician, said that only a man with medical training could have known the small area of the hand in which a spike would miss bones and blood vessels.

From the start of their investigation, police believed the crucifixion was a prearranged rite by means of which Walcher hoped to win attention for his scheme for rule of the world by "middle class men."

Walcher, 46, an Austrian born lens grinder, smiled with pleasure yesterday when told his picture had been printed in the newspapers.

"I hope it will bring peace," he said. "I had rather be crucified than suffer bloodshed in war."

Police said Walcher probably will leave the hospital tomorrow.

Walcher lived in the basement of a tavern at 1638 N. Halsted st. This is only a block from the spot under the elevated structure, in the rear of 1627 Clybourn av., where he was found nailed and roped to the cross.

COLD GOT YOU ALL STUFFED-UP?

Do This Quick for Relief!
If you are sneezing and snuffling from a cold . . . all stuffed-up, with your nose and throat raw and sore—combat this distress, as thousands do, by gargling with new Pepsodent Antiseptic.

The reason it's recommended is this: Standard laboratory tests prove new Pepsodent Antiseptic kills millions of germs that go with colds. The very type of germs that many medical authorities say often heighten the misery and prolong the effects of a cold.

Isn't it only common sense then, to gargle with new Pepsodent Antiseptic at first sign of a cold! What better way to combat millions of germs that swarm on mouth and throat surfaces as far back as you can reach . . . back where illness often strikes first!

So treat a cold this sensible way: Get plenty of rest, avoid exposure, dress warmly, drink plenty of liquids . . . and gargle frequently with new Pepsodent Antiseptic. See if you don't relieve discomfort almost at once!

MICHIGAN RETAINS BIG TEN TRACK CROWN

NAME WILSON WESTERN CONFERENCE COMMISSIONER

MAJ. GRIFFITH'S SUCCESSOR TO START ON MAY 1

Added Power Seen for New Official.

BY EDWARD PRELL.

Kenneth L. [Tug] Wilson, director of athletics at Northwestern university since 1925, yesterday was confirmed as the new Western conference commissioner by the Big 10 faculty representatives. Wilson, who succeeds the late Maj. John L. Griffith, will take over the office on May 1 for a term of six years. Thus his tenure, under this agreement, will continue into 1951 over a period when a tremendous expansion is expected in post-war athletics.

At a meeting Thursday in the Sherman hotel, the Western conference athletic directors had unanimously agreed on the 49 year old sports leader for commissioner. On Friday the directors and faculty representatives met in joint session, but the expected confirmation by the faculty group failed to materialize when one of the members was absent. The faculty committee went into session yesterday morning at the University club and later summoned Wilson, who was at the Sherman. Shortly before noon, Prof. Frank Richart of Illinois, faculty committee secretary, came into the club's lobby with Wilson.

New Powers for Commission.

Members of the faculty group intimated that Wilson's appointment by the directors met with their unanimous approval. No statement was given on salary, but it had been reported that the figure will be raised from $10,000 to $15,000. Since the death of Maj. Griffith, the conference's pioneer commissioner last December, Wilson, along with H. O. [Fritz] Crisler, Michigan football coach and athletic director, and L. W. St. John, Ohio State athletic director, have been filling the breach.

Wilson said there will be no basic change in the conference setup and that he in no way will be a czar or dictator. His office will have more authority than in the past, tho, he said, especially as to enforcement of the rules in regard to proselyting and subsidization of athletes. Final decisions on this point, he said, will go over to the May meetings of the conference.

"At that time," he declared, "it is likely that the revised definitions of the commissioner's power and duties will be ready for adoption."

"Intercollegiate athletics are due for a great expansion," he said. "This will give me a tremendous opportunity in the peace years. There will be new problems to meet as we go along, converting from war to peace and the enlargement of programs which are sure to follow."

Issues Prepared Statement.

These comments followed his issuance of a prepared statement, which follows:

"It is with a feeling of deep regret that I leave Northwestern university. I have enjoyed my work there and the thought of leaving at this time is the only regret I have. We have had good and bad teams, but thru it all the alumni and administration have been loyal while maintaining a healthy viewpoint toward intercollegiate athletics.

"I am naturally gratified at the action of the faculty representatives in approving my selection by the athletic directors as conference commissioner. I intend to give the office my full time and attention and to build on the marvelous foundation left by Maj. Griffith."

"It should be pointed out that there is no basic chang in the conference setup. The commissioner still is the executive agent of both the athletic directors and the faculty representatives. He is in no sense a czar or a dictator and I certainly have no ideas of being one. The operating policies still are in the hands of the athletic directors and the determination of general conference policies, especially with reference to matters of eligibility, remain the function of the faculty representatives."

Plans Formal Resignation.

Wilson will formally submit his resignation as athletic director tomorrow or Tuesday. Northwestern's president, Dr. Franklyn Bliss Snyder, yesterday paid the one time Illinois farm boy this tribute:

"Northwestern university finds it extremely difficult to say good-by to Tug Wilson, who has served so long and ably as director of athletics. At the same time we are proud that the Western conference has paid him the high honor of selecting him as its athletic commissioner. It is a well merited recognition.

"Mr. Wilson has made many lasting contributions to Northwestern university athletics. We like him and will find it hard to get along without him. He will enter his new work with best wishes of Northwestern university's alumni, student body, and faculty."

He's an Illinois Native.

Wilson has a background of athletic competition, education, and sports management which insures the Western conference a spokesman capable of continuing the in-

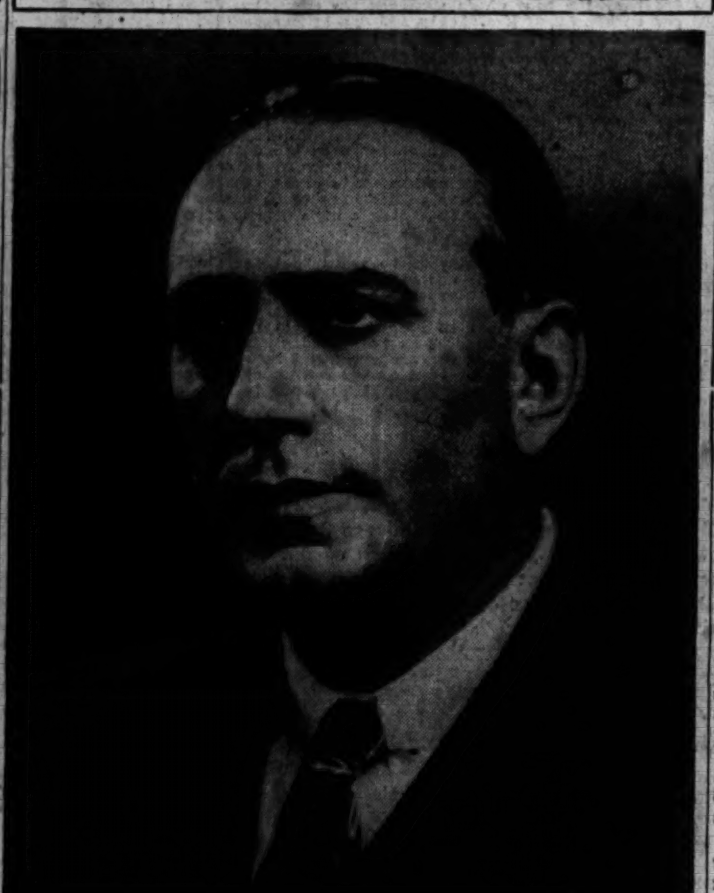
BIG 10 SPORTS CHIEF



Kenneth L. (Tug) Wilson, athletic director at Northwestern university since 1925, who yesterday was named commissioner of athletics of the Western conference to succeed the late Maj. John L. Griffith. He will take over his new office on May 1.

BIG 10 ACTS TO TIGHTEN RULES ON ELIGIBILITY

The Western conference yesterday made long strides toward returning to its peace time pattern of athletic eligibility standards, moving to curb length of competition and shifting of civilian students from one school to another. This action was taken at a meeting of the faculty representatives coincident with their confirmation of K. L. [Tug] Wilson as the new Big Ten athletic commissioner.

In tightening the eligibility waivers made in June, 1943, to keep the athletic programs alive by using men in service, the faculty, thru its spokesman and secretary, Prof. Frank Richart of the University of Illinois, said it now feels the need of getting back as rapidly toward normal rules and regulations.

Outline Eligibility Rules.

Effective July 1 of this year, no civilian student shall be eligible for any varsity athletic team who has already had as many as four varsity years' competition as a civilian student. It was added that the Big Ten considers, as it always has, that students at the West Point and Annapolis are civilians.

In tightening legislation on transfers or floating athletics, it was decreed that a civilian student who transfers to a member institution shall be ineligible for varsity competition one calendar year if at the time of his transfer he was ineligible to compete at the institution from which he transfers. Also ineligible for varsity teams is any civilian student who is a professional in any sport. There have been a smattering of professional players competing in the conference during the war. An example is Clarence Hermsen of Minnesota's basketball team.

Reinstate Rule 7.

Also reinstated was rule 7 governing outside competition. Athletes engaging in contests as representatives of any organization primarily athletic in character, as for example an athletic club, will lose their eligibility. It also makes ineligible any one engaging in an athletic contest during team time, other than the summer session or quarter, as a representative of any person or organization other than his college. An athlete may play occasional games on a strictly amateur team, but in the case of football and basketball such activities as are permitted must be in games where no admission is charged.

Because of the dislocation of school terms in the speeded up college programs the prospective student not yet registered for a summer term may play in the fall if he has convinced the faculty he will become a bonafide student. Summer football practice will be permitted this year, but a week must intervene before actual pre-season practice opens.

JUNIOR FIVES TO PLAY FOR TITLE ON WEDNESDAY

The Marshall and Tuley basketball teams will play for the junior championship of the City league on the Crane Tech floor Wednesday at 3:45 p. m., it was announced yesterday by August H. Pritzlaff, athletic director of the board of education.

Chicago Ready for New York Glove Kings

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

Out of the most sensational finals in Chicago Golden Gloves history emerged yesterday the team which will do battle with New York's best boxers and punchers in the 18th annual intercity bouts in Chicago Stadium on the night of April 4. This 1945 squad is powered with jabs, hooks, crosses, and K. O. ammunition which eminently qualify it to carry on the supremacy of our town in intercity competition, a proud record in which Chicago has licked New York 10 times while losing four and tying three.

The 32 young men and boys who were chosen yesterday for the perennial feud with the New Yorkers will report on March 21 to Head Coach Johnny Behr, long time Golden Gloves tutor, and Co-Coaches Issy Kline and Freddie Caserio, for a two week session of training.

Chicago Wins Team Title.

This year's team, in earning its coveted roles, kept a packed Stadium crowd of 21,645 cheering for 3½ hours in Friday evening's thrilling finals. The 16 semi-final bouts in themselves provided enough action, including seven knockouts, to make a crowded evening. They were closely pursued by eight stirring championship bouts, climaxed by the most dramatic battle for the team championship in the long history of the big show.

This latter struggle wasn't decided until the final fight of the program, when the giant Luke Baylark of the Savoy A. C. assured Chicago of its first team trophy by whipping Pvt. John Harding of Kansas City. Chicago scored 15 points to 14 for Los Angeles, 13 for Kansas City, and 11 for Fort Worth.

Boyd Leads the Roll.

HEAVYWEIGHTS—Luke Baylark, Chicago; Pvt. John Harding, Kansas City; Corp. William Zuke, Omaha; Paul Thomas, Milwaukee.

Quijano, Attra Bout the Climax.

The outstanding bout of the Friday finals couldn't have been more timely if a script had been written for it. This brief but exciting battle saw Corp. Quijano, the dynamite-gloved 23 year old from Los Angeles, batter down Corp. Attra, 1942 light heavyweight winner in 100 seconds of the first round of the 175 pound climax. Corp. Attra gave a brave demonstration after the feared Quijano right had tagged him, bouncing up to stagger Dolf with a left. This only inspired the Los Angeles star to come back and finish the job.

Chicago made one of the best showings in years, all three of its final candidates coming thru to win. In addition to Heavyweight Baylark, the local winners were Jackie Boyd, Madison A. C. flyweight, and Lightweight Bernie Paige, the clever southpaw who is a Savoy A. C. teammate of Baylark. Joe Plummer, Catholic Youth organization bantamweight, also was selected on the intercity squad.

SENN SENIORS CAPTURE CITY CROWN, 32-20

Wulf Paces Victory Over Von Steuben.

BY DAVID CONDON.

The Bulldogs from Senn High school long since have ceased to be surprising, so there was no element of mystery occasioned yesterday when the Senn five stepped out in Lane Tech gymnasium to defeat Von Steuben, 32 to 20, for the City league senior basketball championship.

Not even the school's most stanch supporters, who had waited 32 years for the event to happen, were surprised when Senn took the title, first in the school's athletic history. It was the Bulldogs' 21st consecutive victory and 25th in season play.

Senn had been more or less in the role of City league favorite after winning the holiday tournament at the University of Chicago. The prestige increased as Senn went undefeated in winning the north section championship of the league and advanced thru the play-offs.

David Directs Attack.

It was not expected that Senn would win as handily as it did, experiencing no trouble as Capt. Bob David watched the Von Steuben defense and adjusted the Senn attack accordingly. Von Steuben nearly upset Senn in regular north section play before losing, 35 to 33, for its lone defeat in the section.

Likewise, it was not expected that the Senn defense would bottle up Gene Schanbaum, Von Steuben sparkplug and one of the league's leading scorers, who, save for a brief spurt midway in the second half, was unable to adjust his sights on the goal.

Jack Wulf, Senn's lanky center who time and again took rebound shots off the backboard to break up Von Steuben threats, opened the scoring with a free shot. Frank Walters followed with another and Wulf counted with a field goal to make the score 4 to 0 before Schanbaum, making his only point in the first half, hit from the free throw line.

Finally Get Field Goal.

The period ended with Senn leading, 5 to 1, after 14 Von Steuben field goal attempts had been unsuccessful. In the second period, Von Steuben made 15 attempts from the floor, scoring on two, as Senn added nine points to take a 14 to 5 half time lead. The game was 12 minutes old before Dick Karzen, a forward, scored Von Steuben's first field goal.

Late in the third period, with the score 18 to 9, Schanbaum scored two consecutive baskets for Von Steuben but Senn collected six points to close the quarter at 24 to 13. As the fourth period opened, Schanbaum added a third straight basket, bringing his point total to seven and making the score 24 to 15. He left the game on fouls shortly thereafter.

Each team employed a man to man defense with Senn, using a well balanced and smooth working attack, handling the ball easily under the Von Steuben basket after Wulf started the plays by taking the rebound of unsuccessful Von Steuben scoring attempts. The balance of the Senn defense aided Wulf by frequently breaking up scoring plays as Von Steuben experienced difficulty in penetrating under the Senn basket.

Senn Average Better.

The frenzied play of the fourth quarter, with Von Steuben making last minute attempts to win, had the crowd of 2,000 in an uproar. Von Steuben was successful in only five of 55 attempts at field goals, while Senn scored 13 on 46 shots. Wulf led the scorers with 15 points.

Following the game, Senn officials began preparations for the state tournament which opens next Thursday in Champaign. Senn, as City league champion, will represent Chicago in the meet, and in the opening round will engage Moline. Moline has won 18 and lost five.

South Shore's Tars, which represented Chicago in the state meet last year, won third place honors. Senn, a greatly improved combination over the team that won the Chicago holiday tournament, will go to Champaign Wednesday, Coach Harry Leighton said. He indicated that Senn was taking the meet in stride.

Dave Nichols, Illinois star, demonstrates high hurdle form. The three shots were made on a single negative by a high speed camera, which stopped action at 5/1,000ths of a second. Nichols, who won the outdoor championship last year, finished second to a teammate, George Walker. [TRIBUNE Photos.]

TORONTO SCORES 9-2 TRIUMPH OVER BOSTON

TORONTO, Ont., March 10 (AP).—The Toronto Maple Leafs, taking command midway thru the second period of a cleanly played National Hockey league game, scored goals in clusters tonight to record a 9 to 2 victory over the Boston Bruins.

The Leafs broke into the scoring column at 11:51 of the second period after Paul Gladu had tallied the only goal of the first period for the Bruins on a play with Armand Gaudreault and Gino Rozzini.

After their first goal, scored by Walter [Babe] Pratt on a brilliant passing play with Dave Schriner and Lorne Carr, the Leafs quickly tallied four more second period goals and made victory decisive with four more in the last period.

The result left the Bruins still tied with the Chicago Blackhawks for the league prized fourth play-off spot and served to accent the importance of tomorrow night's meeting between the Hawks and the Bruins in Boston.

12 Cubs Work Outdoors; Big Stars Missing

BY EDWARD BURNS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

French Lick, Ind., March 10.—Manager Charley Grimm and Coaches Roy Johnson, Milt Stock, and Red Smith this afternoon paced an even dozen Cubs in a two hour drill on the knoll, a high area near the trainless depot, which is about a mile from the marine diamond. The marine plot is plainly visible and Trainer-Groundkeeper Andy Lotshaw promises to have it ready in a few days if the magnificent sun keeps blazing and some WPA alumni he has discovered will come forth with their rakes.

The WPA alumni previously had refused to impair their amateur standing by entering the picture on a work basis, but are said to have taken Lotshaw's plea under consideration.

Becker's Back Again.

Today's workout was the third. There were nine the first day, then Don Johnson and Dewey Williams came to town and there were 11. Today the total soared to an even dozen with the arrival of Heinz Becker who opened the National league season in 1943 as the Cubs' first baseman but soon returned to Milwaukee.

Two 20 year olds arrived this morning, sought out Manager Grimm and said they had driven in from their home in Greensboro, Pa. They said they had heard of the personnel jam Grimm is in and they had come to help him out. When they told Charley they were both deferred because of punctured ear drums the skipper became sympathetic, gave them uniforms and put them on the grocery list. Later it was discovered they are named Walter Watson and Glen Cox. Watson is an outfielder and Cox a lefty pitcher.

Regulars' Whereabouts Mystery.

However, the censorship imposed by Vice President James T. Gallagher was lifted a teeny bit today. The censor allowed Grimm to confirm an item that came out of Los Angeles a week ago: Peanuts Lowry, Ray Primm, Len Rice, and Dwight Adams have been given permission to train with the Los Angeles Angels at Anaheim, Cal., until the Pacific Coast league season opens April 1.

SOX TO BEGIN DRILL TOMORROW AT TERRE HAUTE

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

What will have to pass, at least for the time being, as James Dykes' 1945 White Sox will slip down to Terre Haute this evening for the purpose of taking up spring training chores tomorrow. Only seven assorted athletes will be in the party, others going direct to the camp and still others going no place in particular so far as is known.

After canvassing the field Vice President Harry Grabiner yesterday divulged his up to the minute scratch sheet on the men Dykes thinks may get him out of seventh place or at least keep him from annoying the present basement dwellers. Grabiner's report showed 28 had signed up—not a bad total for these uncertain times—and that 10 important members were unsigned, some threatening to stay away until the war ends.

Draft Board Sidetracks Castino.

Pitchers Orval Grove, Joe Haynes, and Ed Lopat, Outfielder Wally Moses, and Infielder Bill Nagel are among the unsigned but haven't officially voiced any threats to stay out of the company of the voluble Dykes for the season. The five who think they'll work elsewhere during the summer, hence haven't signed, are Hal Trosky, Mike Tresh, Tom Jordan, Johnny Humphries, and Bill Dietrich. Some of these undoubtedly would succumb quickly to a slight pay boost.

Altho 28 have signed some will be late reaching camp and some may drop out entirely. Vince Castino was scheduled to leave Chicago tonight, but changed plans when

The Wolverines had a one point margin, defeating Illinois, 55 1-10 to 54 1-10. Six other conference universities were badly outdistanced with Minnesota getting third place on 21½ points. Northwestern and Chicago did not score.

Wolverines Sweep Mile.

Michigan's most impressive showing was in the mile, in which the Wolverines took all five scoring places, the first time in conference history a shutout has been achieved. Illinois' assault was paced by the veteran Bob Kelley, who won the half mile, 440 yard dash, and anchored the Illini in their mile relay victory.

Kelley's double title mark was matched by his team mate, George Walker, who won the 70 yard low and the 70 yard high hurdles. Henry Aihara won the broad jump for Illinois and Bill Buster took the 60 yard dash. In addition to the relay victory, Bob Phelps of Illinois shared the pole vault title at 13 feet 9 inches with John Schmidt of Ohio State.

Ross Hume and his twin brother, Bob, won the mile run as they did last year and Ross later took the two mile, in which the Wolverines collected the first three places. Thus, 27 of Michigan's total was acquired in these two events.

The pole vault duel for first place was one of the most creditable performances of the night. Phelps' defeat did not effect the team victory, however, as he was credited with 4½ points. Undivided first place counted 5 points.

Humes Tie as Usual.

The Hume boys—Ross is Michigan's captain and Bob was captain last season—finished in a dead heat in the mile. Their time was 4 minutes and 25 seconds. Dick Barnard, Archie Parsons, and Bob Thomason of Michigan, also finished in a tie for third.

Tom White of Ohio State was the leader for six laps in the mile. He ran the first 880 yards in 2 minutes and 10 seconds and had a 30 yard lead over the Humes. White faltered before the stepped up pace and was passed at the judges' stand at the end of the sixth lap. Within the next half lap all of the Michigan runners had beaten White and no other athlete challenged.

Buster, Illinois freshman, won the 60 yard sprint by less than a foot from Julian Witherspoon of Michigan. Mark Brownstein, Minnesota's dash man who had taken the second semi-final, was third in the championship heat. Purdue got fourth and fifth on the running of Boris Dimancheff and Ben Harvey, respectively. Buster's time was :06.4.

It Was Easy for Bob.

Kelley had no difficulty in his events, in which he holds both conference outdoor titles. He came from fourth place on the back stretch of the quarter mile to beat Dick Forrestal of Michigan by a foot. Joe Johnson and Marce Gonzalez, who later ran on the Illinois relay team, were fourth and fifth in the quarter mile.

Kelley's half mile triumph was well planned. He was third at the end of the first lap and then took over second position. On the back stretch of the fourth and final lap, Kelley passed Barnard of Michigan, fluence long exercised by the Big Ten on national collegiate athletics.

BIG 10 SELECTS TUG WILSON AS COMMISSIONER

Northwestern Director to Take Office Monday.

A native Illinoisan, Wilson was reared on a farm near Atwood, Ill., and attended Atwood High school. Here he was one of nine boys in an enrollment of 33 and he automatically became one-ninth of the baseball team, played basketball, and was outstanding in track, qualifying for the state high school finals in the discus and hammer throws.

Wilson's ambition was to become a scientific farmer and in order to enter the state university, he taught at the Harshbarger country school near Atwood. In 1916 he matriculated at Illinois altho he had attended one summer session previously to qualify for his teaching contract.

Injury Ends Baseball Career.

Tug, as he was to be familiarly known later in life, pledged to Delta Upsilon fraternity and reported for the fall baseball team. Almost immediately, however, he was drafted by Ralph Jones for freshman football and later basketball. A broken wrist ended his baseball aspirations.

During his varsity competition at Illinois, Wilson competed in football, basketball, and track, playing on three championship track teams and captaining the basketball squad. His best performance was in javelin throwing, an event which led him to competition in the 1920 Olympic games and was to focus his interest in this sport ever since. In his senior year, Tug was president of the Union.

Meets Griffith at Illinois.

Upon Wilson's graduation he became one of the late George Huff's assistants at Illinois and there he met Maj. Griffith, who had returned from the war and joined the Illinois faculty. In 1922 Wilson, with recommendations from Huff and Maj. Griffith, was chosen as director of athletics at Drake university where he continued expansion of the famed Drake relays founded in 1910 by Maj. Griffith.

In 1925 Northwestern obtained Wilson's services. In the ensuing years under Tug's direction, Northwestern has tripled its sports and physical education staff, has erected Dyche stadium with a seating capacity of 48,000, has become a power in conference sports by winning football, basketball, and baseball titles, has a new physical education gymnasium, and plans to erect a field house after the war with a basketball seating capacity of 12,000.

Has a Varied Career.

For several years Wilson has been chairman of the track rules committee of the National Collegiate Athletic association and was elected secretary at the convention last month. He has served as advisor to the physical education department of the Chicago public schools, has been president of Kildeer country club, and president of the Evanston Rotary club. Since the war, he has been youth activities' director of the office of civilian defense in the Chicago metropolitan area. With establishment of navy V-12 training at Northwestern, Wilson and his staff have provided physical training for 1,000 men who form this unit.

Upon graduation Wilson married Dorothy Shade of Lexington, Ill., a University of Illinois student. They have two children, Nancy, 14, and Suzanne, 10.

CUBS BEGIN TRAINING ROUTINE

The Cubs, who last week opened spring training at their French Lick, Ind., camp, are able to sympathize with Mississippi and Ohio river flood victims as they trot around their inundated playing field. Left to right: Coach Milton Stock, Coach Roy Johnson, John Ostrowski, and Frank Secory.

N. U. TO START SEARCH FOR NEW ATHLETIC CHIEF

Dr. Franklyn Bliss Snyder, president of Northwestern university, yesterday said a successor to K. L. [Tug] Wilson as athletic director will be picked as quickly as possible. He did not mention any names, but it was believed a member now on the athletic staff will be elevated to the post. Wilson yesterday was named commissioner of the Western conference, succeeding the late Maj. John L. Griffith.

Inasmuch as Wilson will remain at the Evanston school until May 1, there may be no rush to announce the new director. At least three members of the coaching staff are regarded as possibilities. These are Ted Payseur, ticket manager, golf coach, and assistant basketball coach; Arthur [Dutch] Lonborg, basketball coach, and Lynn Waldorf, football coach. There was some talk that Ade Schumacher, who resigned last year as assistant athletic director at Northwestern, might be considered.

Snyder to Name Director.

Picking of a director actually is in the province of the university president, who selects heads of departments. It is likely that President Snyder shortly will confer with the faculty athletic committee, headed by Prof. Ward V. Evans.

Payseur, 43, a graduate of Drake university, where he played basketball and golf, came to Northwestern in 1927 as assistant basketball coach. His first coaching job was at Dubuque [Ia.] High school. For 10 years he has coached the Wildcat golf teams while continuing as Lonborg's assistant in basketball. Payseur has been ticket manager for five years.

Waldorf May Eliminate Self.

Lonborg, Northwestern's basketball coach for 18 years, is a graduate of the University of Kansas and came to the north shore school after coaching at McPherson and Washburn colleges in Kansas.

Waldorf has indicated a desire to continue only as football coach. He is a graduate of Syracuse university.

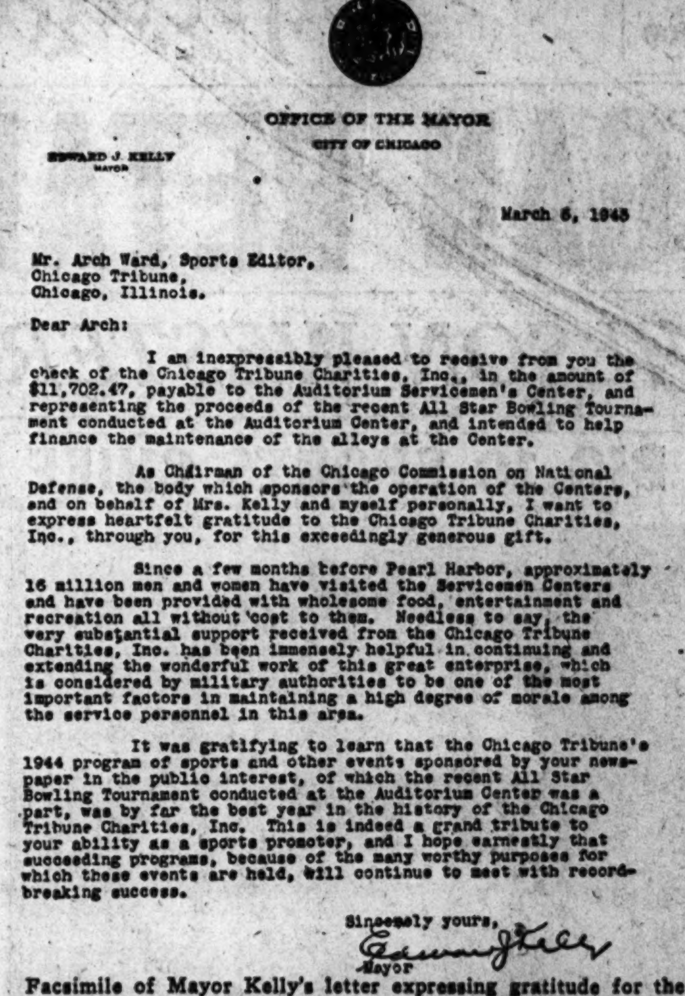
ITALIAN HOLDS STROKE LEAD IN ROME OPEN GOLF

ROME, March 10 (AP).—Fast greens sent scores soaring in the Rome Open golf tournament today, but Pvt. Tom Bolt of Abilene, Tex., and Naval Technician Al Zimmerman of Portland, Ore., maintained their respective second and third positions behind Pacesetter Ugo Grappasonni, two time Italian Open champion.

Grappasonni, Bolt and Zimmerman each posted four over par 75s on the second 18 as the field of 100 was whittled to the low 60 for tomorrow's two round stretch drive for the $800 prize money [for the pros] and three cups [for the amateurs].

The Italian player carded 147 for the 36 holes, one stroke better than Bolt and three ahead of Zimmerman.

WAR CHARITY SCORES



OFFICE OF THE MAYOR
CITY OF CHICAGO

EDWARD J. KELLY
MAYOR

March 6, 1945

Mr. Arch Ward, Sports Editor,
Chicago Tribune,
Chicago, Illinois.

Dear Arch:

I am inexpressibly pleased to receive from you the check of the Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc., in the amount of $11,702.47, payable to the Auditorium Servicemen's Center, and representing the proceeds of the recent All Star Bowling Tournament conducted at the Auditorium Center, and intended to help finance the maintenance of the alleys at the Center.

As Chairman of the Chicago Commission on National Defense, the body which sponsors the operation of the Centers, and on behalf of Mrs. Kelly and myself personally, I want to express heartfelt gratitude to the Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc., through you, for this exceedingly generous gift.

Since a few months before Pearl Harbor, approximately 16 million men and women have visited the Servicemen Centers and have been provided with wholesome food, entertainment and recreation all without cost to them. Needless to say, the very substantial support received from the Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc. has been immensely helpful in continuing and extending the wonderful work of this great enterprise, which is considered by military authorities to be one of the most important factors in maintaining a high degree of morale among the service personnel in this area.

It was gratifying to learn that the Chicago Tribune's 1944 program of sports and other events sponsored by your newspaper in the public interest, of which the recent All Star Bowling Tournament conducted at the Auditorium Center was a part, was by far the best year in the history of the Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc. This is indeed a grand tribute to your ability as a sports promoter, and I hope earnestly that succeeding programs, because of the many worthy purposes for which these events are held, will continue to meet with record-breaking success.

Sincerely yours,
Edward J Kelly
Mayor

Facsimile of Mayor Kelly's letter expressing gratitude for the $11,702.47 check given to the Chicago Service Men's center, proceeds of the All-Star bowling tournament conducted on its alleys last December. The event is sponsored annually by The Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc., in co-operation with the Bowling Proprietors' Association of America.

SPOTTING THE PINS

BY ROBERT BEACH.

THE headquarters of the Illinois Bowling association is an active place right now. With its 48th annual tournament opening on April 14, Secretary Roy Davis and his assistants are compiling figures, arranging schedules, answering inquiries, filling reservations, and, in general, embarking upon a temporary career of bookeeping of such proportions that all hands are kept well occupied from morning until night.

The reports from Davis' office are gratifying. At present, more than 1,200 entries have been received for the event, which will be held in Bensinger's Wabash av. house. There is little doubt that last year's mark of 1,565 will be surpassed. Were it not for the curtailments imposed by travel handicaps, the tourney might establish a new all-time participation record.

The I. B. A. office in Room 1706, 32 W. Randolph st., is kept open until 9:30 p. m. to handle late requests, of which there will probably be many, in that the entry deadline is Wednesday midnight.

Paul Young and Rose Bowl Enter Tournament Field.

CHATTER—Another new tenpin tournament has sprung into being with the announcement from Paul Young that his Rose Bowl, 11517 S. Michigan av., will be the scene of his first over-average tournament. It will run April 14-15 and 21-22, and is four games on eight drives with squad prizes added to the estimated $500 top. There's no handicap, of course, and the entry fee, including expenses, is $7. Entries close March 31. Another popular event coming up is the Grove Recreation's doubles sweeper, three games on six lanes with five classes in which to compete. It will open April 7 and run thru June 3, and includes men's, women's and mixed doubles with participants permitted to bowl as often as they wish, provided they don't bowl with the same partner twice, and pay the $3 entry fee, which includes all expenses, each time. . . . Ruth Schramm rolled the first women's 600 series in Hinsdale this season when she got a 603 in the Hinsdale Arcade Ladies league. She had a high game of 266 in which she had eight strikes in the first eight frames and spared out. . . . Frank Maruska topped the shooting in the Chicago Rapid Transit league with a 222-613. . . . Les Miller's 240, 225-579 led the Bowling Lanes Ladies Major. Right behind her were Nina Van Camp with 223-577, Margaret Frank with 215-567, and Henrietta Wilman with 220-564. . . . Entries close tonight for Jack Samuelson's 13th annual Century of Progress women's tournament. . . . And the deadline for Leo Krisch's Irving Park under-186 handicap event close April 1.

Samuelson's arcade will conduct a husband and wife tournament, four games on eight lanes with a $10 entry fee, to run April 14-15, 21-22, and 28-29. Entries will close March 25. . . . The pioneer junior tourney, four on eight, is approaching its deadline, too. It's March 25. . . . The boys in the North End Traveling league just can't seem to get that pennant race settled early. Thompson's restaurants are leading by one game over Keeleys, and each won three Monday. The latter won their third game by one stick, 1,103 to 1,102, and rolled a commendable 3,294 total. . . . The Chicago Bowling association has designated the period of March 25 thru 31 as Bowlers' Victory Legion Week and asks all to help swell the Chicago total by getting Legion Week and asks all to this period, at the latest. . . . The city champion Meister Braus will receive their medals and sponsor's trophy in a presentation by C. B. A. Secretary Davis Wednesday night when they compete in the Classic league matches in Craft recreation.

Pinneo, who doubled as coach of the basketball team, has been transferred to Camp Campbell, Ky.

SPORTS EVENTS ESSENTIAL, SAYS L. E. OSBORNE

Detroit, Mich., March 10 (AP).—Livingston E. Osborne, Illinois conservation director, declared tonight that "certain publicity hungry Washington burocrats" were "hunting out baseball and football players for induction in the armed forces as tho they were criminals and slackers."

In a prepared speech at the Detroit Sportsmen's congress, Osborne declared "this tirade which is being carried on against American sports by these publicity hounds must be stopped or American sport will be removed from the high pinnacle which it now occupies in the minds of the youth of our nation."

2 AMATEUR CUP SOCCER BATTLES LISTED TODAY

BY OFFSIDE.

National Amateur cup series soccer competition will be ushered in by Chicago teams today with the playing of two first round games. The strong Schwaben eleven is to meet Hansa in Winnemac park stadium, Foster av. and Leavitt st., and the Slovaks will battle the Chicago Sport club team in Sparta stadium, 21st st. and Kostner av. The kick-off in each game will be at 2:30 p. m.

With the first round of National Open cup competition concluded and the National league season not scheduled to open until April 15, National Amateur cup battling will hold the interest of Chicago soccer fans for the next few weeks.

Welcome for Matevich.

The Hansa eleven is expected to make a better showing against the Schwabens today than it did against the Hakoah-Centers last Sunday, when it weakened badly in the second period. This collapse was attributed largely to lack of condition, which only actual competition can provide, and the Schwabens are likely to find Hansa a vastly improved club.

A big crowd is expected at Sparta stadium to welcome back Pete Matevich, home on sick leave from the army. Pete is expected to play at least part of the game for the Slovaks, whose lineup includes such established stars as Charles Rugich, Louis Cipra, and Julius Stevak.

Tryout for Juniors.

The National league is to conduct a tryout for junior players at 11:30 a. m. in Sparta stadium. The players selected will represent Chicago against a St. Louis junior team in a game to be played in St. Louis on April 7.

Lafayette, Ind., March 10 [Special].—Riley High school of South Bend dominated play thruout tonight's game to rout Logansport, 43 to 21, and gain the final round of the Indiana State basketball tournament in Indianapolis next week.

A capacity crowd of 8,445 in the Purdue fieldhouse saw the Wildcats take a 32 to 11 half time lead and coast to victory. It marked the first time in almost 30 years a South Bend five has reached the State finals.

Riley entered the district finals by defeating Hammond, 37 to 25, in a semi-final encounter this afternoon, while Logansport defeated Oxford, 37 to 22.

Riley easily might have scored more points last night but chose to substitute freely after scoring 21 points in a second quarter barrage. The Wildcats, after Logansport took a 4 to 2 lead, unleashed an onslaught which gave them a 10 to 4 advantage by the end of the first quarter and continued to pyramid from then on.

1944 CHAMPIONS WIN

Bloomington, Ind., March 10 [Special].—Evansville Bosse, defending state high school basketball champion, tonight moved another step toward a successful defense of its title by routing Jasper, 55 to 32, in the district finals. Bosse ran up a 15 to 0 lead before Jasper was able to score.

The victory, which was regarded as a minor upset altho Bosse had edged out Jasper in regular season play, eliminated what was considered Bosse's most serious threat in title competition. Jasper had been ranked as the top team in the state.

HAGG RUNS 5TH TO RAFFERTY IN NEW YORK MILE

New York, March 10 (AP).—James Rafferty, putting on his usual bicycle sprint, won his seventh straight indoor mile tonight at the Knights of Columbus meet, shunting Gunder Hagg of Sweden to fifth place in a six man field. It was a wild affair with Hagg the only man who did not lead at one stage during the 11 lap journey around the Madison Square Garden pine oval. The time was 4:16.3.

Don Burnham and Rudy Simms shared the lead the first two laps with Burnham out in front as they loafed thru a 1:05.3 quarter. Then Forest Efaw of Oklahoma, and Ensign Tommy Quinn took over the pace setting duties.

Slowest Since 1936.

Hagg finished 35 yards behind Rafferty in 4:19.1 after staying with the leaders thru the first nine laps. It was the slowest time in the famed Columbian since the 1936 but the jockeying for position brought applause from the packed crowd of 14,166. A year ago Gil Dodds lowered the world indoor record to 4:07.3 in this race.

The meet opened on a farcical note when Pvt. Barney Ewell, Camp Kilmer, N. J. won the 60 yard invitational in a walkover. Coast Guardsman Herbert Thompson and Eulace Peacock were tossed out of the four man final for two false starts ater Ed Conwell, ineligible New York university athlete, scratched. In the semi-final William Mathis of Cardozo high of Washington, D. C., and coast guardsman Homer Gillis also were disqualified.

Lidman Second to Dugger.

Haakan Lindman, Sweden's national hurdle king, finished second in the 60 yard high hurdles to Edward Dugger, formerly of Tufts, in a :07.4 final. Lidman won his preliminary in :07.5 but bopped his left knee on the final barrier and limped thru the final.

Sgt. Milt Padway continued his domination in the pole vault, clearing 13 feet 6 inches, with second placer Howard Bailey of Tufts, stopping at 11 feet 6 inches. Ancient Charley Beetham of the North Carolina pre-flight school, stepped down from his customary half mile stint to beat a select field in the Casey 600 yard.

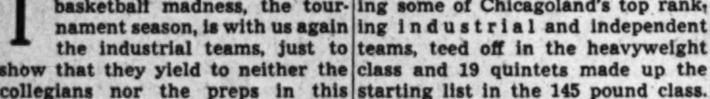
BASKET MEET AT WHITING.

Whiting, Ind., March 10 [Special].—The Amateur Athletic union's Calumet region basketball tournament will be held in the Community center gymnasium from March 22 thru March 29. The event is open to all Chicagoland teams, and entry blanks may be obtained by contacting John Sharp at the Whiting



BY WILLIAM BAYLISS.

THAT annual phenomenon of basketball madness, the tournament season, is with us again the industrial teams, just to show that they yield to neither the collegians nor the preps in this particular field, are at it hotter than ever. Some of the top quintets are booked solid with one or two tournaments a week until a person would think even the most enthusiastic player would get his fill of the sport. However, none of them seem to do it, for the boys always are ready for the next one to start.

As far as marathon competition is concerned, the 11 South End independent meet is a good example. It opened Wednesday at the 111th st. Y. M. C. A., 111th and State sts., and will run until March 21, when champions in two divisions, heavyweight and 145 pounds, will be crowned. Twenty-five entries, including some of Chicagoland's top ranking industrial and independent teams, teed off in the heavyweight class and 19 quintets made up the starting list in the 145 pound class.

Chicago Y Leagues Hold Title Tournament This Week.

Industrial teams from Chicago Y. M. C. A. leagues will hold their city championship basketball meet this week, with eight teams competing instead of the 17 which officials of the association's industrial basketball committee expected a week ago they'd have in competition. The reason for the falling off is for the most part a natural decision on the part of some of the quintets to pass up the rugged competition, tho there are some exceptions to this. The first round schedule:

WEDNESDAY at Division st.—Eugene Dietzgen Co., vs. Great Lakes Spring Corp.; Gits Molding vs. Teletype Corp.

WEDNESDAY at Lincoln-Belmont — Illinois Tool Works vs. United Air Lines; Thordarson Electric vs. Bell & Howell.

The semi-finals will be played Thursday at North av.-Larrabee and the championship and consolation contests are booked for Saturday at Lincoln-Belmont. All games will be played at night.

Just to provide a little variety, the North av.-Larrabee Industrial Basketball league, most of whose games this season have been decided by margins of very few points, presented three high scoring contests on Wednesday, with one team doing a heavy share of the point making in each game. Gits Molding beat the Seeburgs, 83 to 31; Illinois Tool rolled up a 60 to 17 victory over Utah Radio, and the Dietzgens beat Motorola Radio, 44 to 25.

Russell Quintet Fails to Respond to Vocal Support.

Thursday night a crowd of 300, mostly employes of the Russell Electric company, turned out for that company's homecoming night at the North Avenue Y. Despite the vocal support of this group, which included Lloyd Conway, plant superintendent, the Russell quintet lost a league game to Oak Manufacturing, 31 to 25.

Reports from Midland, Mich., say that the Dow Chemical corporation may be looking farther than the present season in its recent action in signing a couple of outstanding Western conference basketball stars to play on its industrial quintet. These two are Ray Patterson, forward and center, who was one of the outstanding performers in the conference for the last two seasons, and Bill Johnson, a rugged guard.

Leaders Listed in Original Industrial Bowling Meet.

Industrial plant bowlers yesterday resumed play in the second weekend of the 2d Original Industrial Bowling tournament at Congress recreation. The leaders in various divisions of the tournament after the first week-end of competition:

FIVE MAN—Class A: Riggers of E. I. du Pont, 2,654; Grants of Western Electric, 2,648. Class B: Inspectors of Haber Screw Machine Products, 2,605; Stanavos of Standard Oil, 2,576.

DOUBLES—Class A: J. Kovarik-J. Miskovich of Chrysler Corporation, 1,176; E. Tanner-O. Svestka of Western Electric, 1,163. Class B: H. Redelsperger-D. Bachert of National Aluminum, 1,131.

Tho his total 423 pins will not win him any share in the tournament prize list, L. Bednarik of Johnson & Johnson well may claim the title as the most consistent bowler in the tournament. His game scores were 141, 141, and 141.

When the smoke had cleared away after last Thursday's shooting, Railway Express Agency was back into a tie with Thompson Elevator and Electric for first place in the Chicago Association of Commerce Industrial Bowling league. Illinois Bell Telephone, Savoy Drug and Chemical, and Pyott Foundry and Machine are tied for third place, four games behind the leaders.

Sox to Drill Tomorrow at Terre Haute

notified to report for a draft reëxamination on Wednesday. Ogden Wise, a kid pitcher, signed up but admitted he might not be able to get away from his defense job. Victor Austin, a semi-pro infielder also signed but with regrets. He'll move into army clothes this week.

Others to Report Tomorrow.

Mr. Dykes' little band ready for the short leap to Terre Haute this evening will be made up of Outfielder Oris Hockett, obtained from the Indians in a trade, Rookie John Nadvornik who doubles at catching and fly chasing, Pitcher Frank Papish, Second Baseman Leroy Schalk, Outfielder Johnny Dickshot, Bob Dalrymple, an amateur second baseman, and Joe Orengo, taken from the Tigers in a winter trade. The remainder of the signed men, with a few exceptions, are supposed to be on hand to listen to Dykes tomorrow morning.

Six players have been given permission to report late. These are Infielder Tony Cuccinello, who will be delayed until Thursday because of illness in his family; Outfielder Guy Curtright, who will leave his Missouri school teaching post in time to arrive on March 22; Pitcher George Gray, 17, who will be three days late after winding up his high school work in Great Falls, Mont.; Earl Caldwell, 39 year old pitcher who makes it a custom to work out near his McAllen, Tex., home until April 1; Thornton Lee, veteran southpaw who is to check in Friday from Phoenix, Ariz., and Floyd Baker, second baseman obtained from the St. Louis Browns, who will show up next Sunday.

New Relief Man Needed.

The team's leading pitcher of 1944, Gordon Maltzberger, recently was drafted, making it necessary that Dykes and his aids develop a new relief man. Maltzberger won 10 and lost 5, but suffered from a sore arm after a spectacular start. Lopat was the only other plus .500 pitcher, with 11 victories and 10 defeats. Grove won 14 and lost 15, Dietrich 16 and 17, Humphries 8 and 10, Haynes 5 and 6, and Ross 2 and 7. This was a startling fade-out for Ross, who in 1943 won 11 and lost 7 with a 3.20 earned run average as compared to last year's 5.20.

Hoppe to Meet Cochran in Three Cushion Title Match

New York, March 10 (AP).—Willie Hoppe of New York will seek to dethrone Welker Cochran of San Francisco in a series of challange three cushion billiard matches which get under way here Monday.

SPORTS SHOW OPENS 9 DAY COLISEUM RUN

BY BEN MARKLAND.

The Chicagoland outdoor fan, the fellow who works for 50 weeks every year so he can go fishing for two weeks in the summer, got his preview of 1945 vacationland yesterday at the opening of the 7th annual International Sportsmen's show in the Coliseum.

The sportsmen's show, threatened by the ODT ban of trade expositions, opened on schedule and will operate for its entire nine day run. The ODT permitted the opening of the show after F. W. Kahler, manager, canceled several out of state exhibits.

Archer Thrills Crowd.

All outdoor sports, including hunting, fishing, camping, canine retrieving, and archery, have a place in the exhibits as well as the floor show which is staged twice a day. In addition, this year's event devotes time and space to such extra features as a style show of outdoor clothing, trained dog acts, log rolling, canoe tilting, and a strong arm act by "Little Samson," billed as the world's strongest small man.

A new feature in this year's show is the exhibition of trick archery by Frank Hogan, the Barrington boy who was one of the country's outstanding trainers of hunting dogs before he entered the army air corps. Now discharged from service, he provided one of the sensations of yesterday's opening with his arrow artistry.

Casting Meet Draws 300.

Watson Peck, the Ontario woodsman recognized as one of the continent's greatest burlers, won yesterday's log rolling event over three opponents. Peck has been out of the show for the last three years, during which time he served as a gunner in the royal Canadian air force.

The Tribune casting tournament, which annually draws the largest entry of any indoor casting event in the country, got under way last night when 27 local fishermen competed in the first preliminary event.

In the fishermen's casting event Lyman Caliban, 10701 Avenue F, beat William Bizek, 17, of 5401 Le Moyne av., 95 to 93, on a point basis in a shoot-off. Before the shoot-off the two were tied with 96 points apiece. It was Caliban's third annual attempt in The Tribune event and his first victory. Bizek had not competed before. Kenneth Anderson, also 17, of Evergreen Park, placed third. He had competed three times before in the junior event.

Capt. Merton Church of Michigan, winner of the 50 yard free style and the 100 yard free style, led the Wolverines to their 15th victory in the last 18 Western conference championships, in the Patten pool at Northwestern last night. Michigan totaled 55 points.

Drake	35	Miami	14
Iowa Pre-Flight	32	Michigan State	12 3-5
Marquette	32	Western Mich	7 1-5
Notre Dame	25 3-5	Wheaton	3 3-5

East Lansing, Mich., March 10 [Special].—Five iron runners representing Drake university tonight turned in one of the major upsets of the indoor track season. By a margin of three points the Drake "five" won the 18th annual Central Collegiate conference track meet held in Jenison fieldhouse.

Drake finished the meet with a total of 35 points while pre-meet favorites, the Seahawks and Marquette, tied for runner-up honors with 32 points. Notre Dame, the defending champion placed fourth with 25 3/5 points.

Feiler Wins One, Two Mile.

In winning the meet for the first time Drake captured four firsts, three seconds, a fourth, and a fifth. The five contestants were Fred Feiler, Lee Hofacre, Paul Ware, Glenn Wehrmann, and Harry Williams.

Feiler captured both the one mile and two mile runs with comparative ease. Williams won the 440 yard dash. Ware placed second in both the 440 yard dash and the 75 yard dash. Hofacre surprised the crowd by winning the 440 and placing second in the 75 yard low hurdles. Wehrmann picked up two points for the Bulldogs by placing fourth in the 75 yard high hurdles.

Sets Pole Vault Record.

Michigan State's undefeated one mile relay team kept its record clear by turning in the best time for the event. Marquette had a chance to win the team title but could not overcome the four point margin that Drake held going into the final event.

Only one new fieldhouse and meet record was established and another was tied. William Moore, former Drake pole vaulter, who is now a navy V-12 member at Western Michigan, set a new mark of 13 feet 6½ inches to wipe out a fieldhouse record that had stood for four years and a meet record that had been on the books for 10 years. MICHIGAN SWIM TEAM RETAINS BIG 9 CROWN

The maize and blue of Michigan continues to dominate the Big Ten swimming scene as the Wolverines captured the 35th annual meet in Northwestern university's Patten pool last night with a total of 55 points.

For the second straight year, Matt Mann, Michigan's veteran coach, was tossed into Patten pool by his victorious charges in the traditional climax to the event. These dousings have become almost commonplace to the Englishman whose Michigan teams have won 15 out of the last 18 conference championships.

Ohio State Finishes Second.

Ohio State, which broke a four year Michigan winning streak in 1943, scored 42 to take runner-up honors while Indiana was third with 19 points. The remaining teams scored as follows: Northwestern, 15; Minnesota, 15; Purdue, 11; Illinois, 6; Iowa, 4; Wisconsin, 3.

Michigan won four first places and scored heavily in runner-up spots to amass its winning total which was considerably below the 72 points the Wolverines collected in winning last year's meet. The maize and blue scored in eight of the 10 events. They had no entries in the fancy diving and 440 yard free style.

Church Leads Wolverines.

Capt. Merton Church paced the Wolverines by successfully defending his 50 yard free style title and also winning the 100 yard free style. In capturing the latter event, he displaced a teammate, Chuck Fries, 1944 winner, who finished second last night. In addition to Church's victories, the Wolverines also won both the 300 yard medley and 400 yard free style relays.

Keo Nakama of Ohio State tied Church for scoring honors by capturing the 220 and 440 yard free style events. The double victory gave the little Hawaiian a grand slam as he won both events in 1943 and 1944. He set conference records in the two races as a sophomore. Summaries:

Notre Dame, Ind., March 10 [Special].—Hugh Devore, Notre Dame's new football coach, announced today that spring football practice for the Irish would start on Tuesday, March 20. Devore plans to keep the squad indoors in the fieldhouse for a few days undergoing a conditioning program before taking them outdoors. Workouts will continue for four weeks.

Baseball Coach C. J. [Jake] Kline issued his first call for Notre Dame baseball candidates today and more than 100 prospective Irish players turned out. Included in the group were three monogram winners from last year's team, Pitcher Jack Barrett, Center Fielder Frank Gilhooley, and Third Baseman Frank Cixezon. The latter a Chicago boy, is expected to be inducted before the season opens, however.

WAR RIPS MYTH OF NEW DEAL'S RESOURCE PLAN

Free Industry Lifts Natural Wealth.

BY THOMAS FURLONG.

War experience has turned a searchlight on the shadowy arguments that would justify the federal government's expanding economic activities as "conservation of resources."

Conservation was the cloak for many of the New Deal's adventures in the economic field before the war. With the war's severe drain on the resources of the United States, the exponents of "conservation" foresee a still larger role for the federal government in the economic field after the war.

When the full story of the vast production achievement of the United States is told, however, these arguments will be exploded, insist the men who have been most closely associated with the production effort.

Science Expands Resources.

Technological developments, fostered by the free play of competitive forces, prepared the United States for war far more effectively than could a planning board sitting in Washington, D. C., figuring out how to allocate dwindling natural resources. Processes and developments of a free industry multiplied the resources that the country needed when war came.

Speaking of the apprehension frequently expressed that the United States faces exhaustion of its oil resources, Dr. Robert E. Wilson, a scientist and recently elected chairman of Standard Oil company [Ind.], said:

"The most serious and imminent danger to the future of our industry lies in any threat to the future of research and technology, which is the indispensable multiplier of our natural resources. The only thing that can prevent our country from having abundant liquid fuel for many generations at reasonable prices, certainly much lower than those which prevailed 25 years ago, is interference with the free play of technology and competitive enterprise."

Defends Patent System.

Dr. Wilson singled out the attacks that are being made on the patent system as an example of what foolish and shortsighted "reform" may lead to.

"I can think of no better way to 'super-sabotage' America's future than to destroy our patent system," he said. "If we permit impractical theorists and faddists to hypnotize our nation into this act of national hara-kiri all of us will suffer. Both the hope and the danger of America lie in the field of the mind, rather than matter."

No better example exists of the value of high technical skill than the United States' performance in producing oil not only for her own war activities, but those of her allies, he said.

"Naturally," he said, "one of the most, if not the most effective weapon we had at the beginning of this war was a healthy, active petroleum industry. Our nation was on wheels; our civilian population was a consumer of tremendous quantities of petroleum products. Storage tanks above ground, or any other types of reservoirs, are poor and unsatisfactory substitutes for an active production and refining domestic petroleum industry."

Why Output Was Possible.

It was the technology, developed under the economic conditions that existed in this country that made possible the war time production achievement, he emphasized.

"Today technology is making big advances which tend to augment our oil supplies, stretch them out, and permit them to be used more efficiently, and many other factors will also make them last longer," he said, "One of the reasons that our reserves keep going up is that we are getting more out of old fields by better and better technology every year."

In this connection, Dr. Wilson pointed out that altho the United States has only about 15 per cent of its land area favorable for oil accumulation, and only 30 per cent of the known oil reserves, it is producing 65 per cent of the world's oil.

CORPORATE FEES GAIN.

Since Jan. 1 the Illinois secretary of state's office has issued 371 domestic and 66 foreign for profit charters and 177 not for profit charters. Fees were $102,812, about $39,500 more than for the corresponding 1944 period.

'Fringe' Issue Held Peril to Stabilization

Washington, D. C., March 10 (AP).—Industry members of the national war labor board asserted today that so-called fringe wage issues were "threatening the flanks" of the Little Steel formula. They said the attack may destroy the entire wage stabilization line unless brought under control. CIO members of the board, meanwhile, called on President Roosevelt to revise the formula upward.

The two divergent views were expressed in statements on a wage report to the President Feb. 20, in which public members of the board recommended that no change be made now in the formula, but that wage controls be removed after the war. The AFL board members disagreed a week ago, demanding a general 11 per cent pay hike.

Ask Fixed Fringe Standards.

Asserting that permissible "cost of living" general increases under the Little Steel formula [15 per cent above Jan. 1, 1941, levels] largely have been granted, industry members termed demands for fringe increases "the weakest segment of our line" and called for their control under fixed standards. Such standards just have been set up for four of the more common types. Fringe issues involve such side issues as vacation pay, shift differentials, and provision of tools and safety equipment.

Tho agreeing with public members on maintaining the Little Steel formula, industry representatives took issue on four "unsound reconversion policies" recommended. They said certain types of war time wage increases were "wholly abnormal" and opposed the suggestion that war innovations be made postwar norms to help maintain high level production. They contended many of the adjustments of wage rate inequities between plants had been "only a peg upon which to hang a concealed general wage increase."

Flexible Wage Rates Urged.

Opposing a proposal by public members to peg certain wage rates in key industries, they said this "would bring only endless disputes." They called for flexible wage rates, free to adjust in accord with economic, not political, factors. "Real wages, not dollars, are the important thing," they said.

The CIO statement termed the public members' report "an empty exercise in statistical jugglery," asserting they "concede" the cost of living has increased 30 per cent while wages have risen 20 per cent, the CIO report said the "conclusion is inescapable" that a 10 per cent wage rate increase should be granted retroactive to the date when the inequity developed.

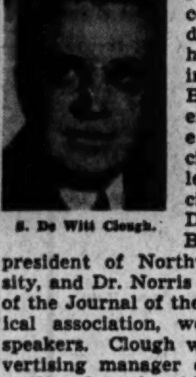
Public members, the CIO said, were seeking to change the foundation of wage stabilization from wage rates, or hourly labor prices, to total earnings, thereby replacing "a foundation of stone with one of sand."

NLRB TO REJECT NO STRIKE VOTE PLEA OF MINES

Washington, D. C., March 10 (AP).—The national labor relations board will reject on Monday the plea of southern coal producers that plans for a strike vote March 28 among the miners be dropped, an informed source said tonight. The decision was unanimous and was reached after consultation with the labor department and the war labor board.

Edward E. Burke, spokesman for the Southern Coal Producers' association, when formally notified of the board's rejection of the petition, will ask the federal District court to enjoin the NLRB from going ahead with the strike vote, it was learned.

People and Events



S. De Witt Clough.

To mark the 40th year S. DeWitt Clough, president, has been associated with Abbott Laboratories, directors of the company held a dinner in his honor last night in the Edgewater Beach hotel. Several hundred veteran employes, civic and medical leaders, and associates attended. Dr. Franklyn Bliss Snyder, president of Northwestern university, and Dr. Norris Fishbein, editor of the Journal of the American Medical association, were among the speakers. Clough was the first advertising manager of the company and has been its chief executive for 12 years.

Five Chicago men have been elected members or associates of the American Institute of Accountants. Elected to full membership were Joseph Adelman, 160 N. La Salle st.; Renick H. Buckels of Arthur Anderson & Co., and Clarence W. Smith of the Chicago office of Lybrank, Ross Brothers & Montgomery. Joseph Crabtree, assistant secretary and assistant treasurer of the Pyle-National company, and Lt. Joseph A. Kincaid, U. S. N. R., formerly with Hall, Penny, Jackson & Co., became associates.

Corliss D. Anderson announced the formation of Corliss D. Anderson & Co. which will provide industrial security analysis for institutional investors. Anderson has been associated with the treasurer's office of the University of Chicago for 14 years.

The Chicago Packaging club has been organized for the discussion of inter-related packaging problems in the Chicago area. Meetings will be held the second and fourth Mondays of each month at the Builders club.

SEEK TO BREAK EASTERN HOLD ON COAL TRADE

Midwest Operators Look to ODT Rule.

Despite war time action by the government to localize purchases of coal to relieve shortages and conserve shipping, midwestern coal operators have been unable to dent the important railroad and industrial market along the west shore of Lake Michigan which still is chiefly supplied by eastern operators, midwestern coal representatives said yesterday.

Several factors have entered into the situation, including shipping rates, loading and unloading facilities, quality of coal, design of locomotives for the use of certain types of coal, and education of consumers in the use of midwestern coal.

Predict Post-War Opening.

Railroads are reported to be obtaining midwestern coal for use in the east, and at the same time eastern coal is shipped west by lake to hold the midwestern market.

The midwestern operators, however, still believe they can take over a substantial part of the Lake Michigan market from the easterners. If the recently stated policy of the solid fuels administration is carried out, a big step toward this goal would have been accomplished, they said.

This policy statement, issued Feb. 5, said in part:

"It will be part of the program of the SFAW to prohibit on and after April 1, 1945, any bituminous coal produced in districts 1 to 8 [eastern districts] inclusive from moving via the Great Lakes for use as rail locomotive fuel."

Policy May Be Revised.

These railroads thus would purchase their coal from midwestern operators. The operators explained, however, that by the time the final policy is announced, it may be much changed from the original announcement after objections from the railroads and other interested parties have been heard.

Because of Illinois' vital interest in the application of the ODT policy, Gov. Green was reported to be taking an active interest in the situation. Middle west coal interests were concerned that the policy enunciated by ODT may be circumvented by the competitive eastern interests who are reluctant to give up any of their Great Lakes market.

Shipping rates have been a big factor in enabling the eastern coal operators to build up their midwestern market, the coal men said. Until the midwestern operators obtained, thru the interstate commerce commission, a special "lake" rate about five years ago, they could not compete with the eastern operators who have had such a rate for many years.

Obtain Dock Facilities.

Another disadvantage was the lack of dock facilities at the end of their rail haul to Chicago. They have obtained these facilities in the Chicago dock of the Rail to Water Transfer, which can handle 4 million tons of coal in the shipping season. Total needs of the railroads along the west shore were estimated at 3½ million tons yearly.

The coal men explained the apparent incongruity of the shorter distance from the southern Illinois and Indiana coal fields to the west lake shore market and the previously higher rates. This was because of the longer rail haul necessary in comparison with the length of the rail haul of eastern operators to their lake ports.

One of the toughest nuts for the midwestern coal men to crack will be to get the railroads and industrial consumers in the Lake Michigan area to change from the eastern bituminous coal, to which they have long been accustomed, to the midwestern coal. The big eastern coal operators and eastern railroad interests are closely allied.

15,000 Truck Drivers Given 15% Pay Hike

Increases in hourly wage rates and overtime allowances for 15,000 Chicago truck drivers—which will raise their pay 15 to 21 per cent a week—have been approved by the trucking commission of the war labor board in Washington, D. C., William B. Crawford, attorney for the Cartage Exchange of Chicago, said yesterday.

The drivers will receive a blanket increase of 8 cents an hour. They have been earning from 82 cents to $1.01 an hour, the variance depending upon truck size. Under the new order, they will be paid time and one-half for work over 48 hours a week, instead of over 51 hours as they have been getting. Overtime rates also will be paid for work before 8 a. m. or after 5 p. m., instead of the former hours of 7:45 a. m. and 5:15 p. m.

Crawford was notified of the WLB wage increase order by telephone. He said it has not been put in the form of a written directive, but will be retroactive to Jan. 1, when the union contracts with the operators' associations expired.

Truck drivers are working far in excess of 51 hours a week in most cases, and Crawford said wages will be increased from 15 to 21 per cent a week on the basis of the new overtime rules.

To Urge Control Relaxation.

The drivers are members of the Chicago Truck Drivers' union, which is independent, and local 705 of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters [AFL]. They are employed by members of the Cartage exchange, the Illinois Motor Truck Operators, and the Central Motor Freight association.

Representatives of the operators will go to Washington, D. C., this week to ask the office of price administration for relief from freight rate controls to permit them to meet the wage increases.

WPB CANCELS CIVILIAN STEEL, COPPER QUOTAS

Washington, D. C., March 10 (AP).—The WPB has canceled all allotments of both steel and copper for "spot" civilian goods manufacture in April, May, and June, officials said today. The action, taken yesterday, will permit completion of "very little" of the 195 million dollars of spot civilian production approved for the next quarter.

WPB previously had announced that steel mills which are behind schedule, beset by floods, and apprehensive of a coal mine shutdown, would be able to fill only a small part of low priority civilian orders.

Aluminum is not covered by the clampdown. About 25 million pounds are available for civilian use under the spot program, and only about 15,400,000 pounds have been allotted. For steel and copper, however, civilian manufacturers must depend on such idle and surplus supplies as can be found, or such stocks in warehouses as they are permitted to buy.

SLAUGHTER OF COWS AND HEIFERS HEAVY, LESS MEAT PRODUCED

Slaughter of cows and heifers is the largest in history as a result of a government campaign to offset the rapid shrinkage in pork supplies by encouraging farmers to trim their cattle herds, but the tonnage of beef obtained from the big cattle kill has not been enough to compensate for the decrease in pork and lard, stockyards interests said yesterday.

The department of agriculture disclosed yesterday that the slaughter of cattle under federal inspection during the three months ended Jan. 31, latest official classification of figures, consisted of 63 per cent cows and heifers against 54 per cent during the corresponding 1944 period. The percentage was the largest in a winter season on the department records.

Because of the selling of cows and heifers and ceiling prices which discourage heavy grain feeding to finish cattle, packers obtain far less beef per animal than usual. The department of agriculture reported that packers dressed out 484 pounds of beef per animal during January, only 2 pounds above the lowest yield on record for the month. The January, 1944, yield was 513 pounds and in 1943 it was 527.

G. I. BUSINESS VENTURES.

Service men who now confront coolly the war's perils and sacrifices will face a new and different set of risks when they return to civilian life, particularly if they plan to embark in business on their own account. Along with the apparent dangers of loss, however, there will exist many attractive opportunities to establish themselves in useful and presumably profitable undertakings.

Correct choice and timing rank among the first essentials for a happy outcome. Foremost among the dangers are possible loss of savings in unsound ventures or in activities to which the veteran is ill adapted. Recognizing these risks, the Chicago Better Business bureau and other organizations of the same kind are distributing a booklet entitled "Facts Veterans Should Know Before Starting a Business."

It asserts that because of the decline in number of business enterprises in the United States, from 3,400,000 in 1941 to 2,900,000 in 1943, and other reasons, it is reasonable to conclude that there will be many opportunities to start a business after the war. Increased activity is foreseen in construction, manufacture of durable consumer goods, in paper, lumber, and service industries, and in retail trade. The booklet warns, however, that mortality rates of businesses in their early years are high.

Moreover, it predicts that veterans will be high on the list of prospective victims of the swindling fraternity. The returning service men, many of them without business experience, will have ready cash in mustering out pay, savings, or war bonds. Besides, there is the government offer to guarantee one-half—not to exceed $2,000—of a loan to a veteran for the purchase of business or farm property, or for the purchase or construction of a home.

The treatise lists many speculative "opportunities" which it says veterans should avoid. Some are offers of land in distant states on a coöperative arrangement to raise nuts and fruits; "buy back" contracts; job offers at better than average salary accompanied by a requirement to invest in the business; home employment offers in which the promoter's only purpose is to sell work equipment; certain fur farm schemes.

The public is more carefully guarded than formerly against domestic stock swindles, but it appears there are still many ways to lose money. And engaging in business for one's self, tho it has attractive features, often means a hard competitive struggle.

GRAINS DECLINE THEN RALLY ON SHORT COVERING

Grain futures rallied in late trading yesterday on the Chicago Board of Trade after an early decline. Short covering and strength in securities influenced the upturn. May wheat was up ¾ cent at one time to $1.70, or 2¾ cents above its low Thursday, and closed ¼ cent higher. Other deliveries were unchanged to ⅜ cent higher.

Corn was ⅛ cent lower to ⅛ cent higher. Oats closed unchanged to ⅛ cent higher. Rye rose ⅜ to ⅝ cent and barley was ⅛ cent higher to ¼ cent lower.

WRIGLEY'S NET PROFIT DIPS TO $3.21 A SHARE

Level of Production Held Satisfactory.

William Wrigley Jr. company yesterday reported 1944 net earnings were $6,307,423, or $3.21 a share, compared with 1943 profit of $6,768,731, or $3.44 a share. Net income included $531,542 in dividends from foreign subsidiaries.

Production was at "a satisfactory level" despite help shortages and difficulty in procuring materials and supplies, said J. C. Cox, president. The military branches last year took an increasing proportion of total output, but domestic markets were supplied with limited quantities of a substitute brand of chewing gum. Wrigley's production of its regular brands was discontinued last month.

Minneapolis-Honeywell Gains.

Minneapolis-Honeywell Regulator company sales last year rose to a record of $89,306,433 from $68,340,590 in 1943, said Harold W. Sweatt, president. Net earnings rose to $3,239,676, or $2.36 a share, from $2,908,852, or $2.15 a share.

Ordnance comprised the largest portion of output last year, said Sweatt. The company continued to produce temperature control and heat regulating devices on a restricted basis. Its order backlog on Dec. 31 was sufficient to keep all plants operating at capacity thruout 1945.

Inventories on Dec. 31 were $19,519,380, compared with $20,917,435 a year earlier. Present large inventories lend emphasis to the problems that may arise when large scale termination of war contracts occurs, Sweatt said.

Stocks Rally Widely After Recent Break

New York, March 10 (AP).—The stock market today rallied from its two day break, the most severe in nearly a year and a half. Prices stiffened at the opening and widespread gains of fractions to 2 points were made. Top marks were reduced in many instances before the close.

Some customers reinstated accounts on the belief the market had been oversold, calling for at least a technical rebound. Earnings and dividends were helpful. Reconversion apprehension still stemmed from the good war news and a possible goverment anti-speculation campaign again made buyers cautious.

The Associated Press 60 stock composite rose 0.4 to 60.7, but for the week showed a drop of 1.3. Of 838 issues registering, 516 rose, 163 declined, and 159 were unchanged. Transfers of 750,000 shares, compared with 680,000 a week ago.

RAIL BONDS LEAD RALLY.

New York, March 10 (AP).—Sections of the bond market that lost most in the recent selling wave recovered generally today with gains of fractions to about 2 points. Rails led the upturn and showed the largest volume.

Prominent in the rising group were loans of the Milwaukee and Missouri Pacific roads. Individual gainers included Rock Island refunding 4s of '34, Atlantic Coast Line 4½s, Central of New Jersey 5s, Big Four 4½s, Denver and Rio Grande 4s of '36, and Lehigh Valley 4½s. Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron 6s of '64 added 5 points to a recent rise.

Utility and industrial issues were generally steady.

CHICAGO PRICES MIXED.

Prices were irregular in turnover of 27,000 shares yesterday on the Chicago Stock exchange. Volume leaders included Chicago corporation common, up ⅛; Central and South West Utilities, up ¼; Peabody Coal, unchanged; Admiral corporation, down ⅛, and Standard Oil [Indiana], down ⅛.

FRENCH MONEY TO RETURN THIS WEEK IN ALSACE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, March 10.—The switch back from German to French monetary and economic systems is scheduled to take place thruout Alsace next week. Its keystone will be conversion of German currency held by the Alsatians into French money at the advantageous rate of 15 francs for one mark. The official rate is five francs to the mark in allied occupied Germany.

The new arbitrarily fixed exchange rates will permit the French to do in occupied Germany just what the Germans did during the four years they occupied France under their rate of 20 francs to one mark—buy as much of whatever they wish at low prices.

To prevent speculation, suffering among the Alsatians, and any profits by Germans, French safeguards to ease the transition limit to 500 marks the German funds one family can convert into francs. Additional holdings in marks will be blocked until a thoro checkup is made.

N. Y. CENTRAL'S NEW POWERFUL ENGINE IS BUILT

Schenectady, N. Y., March 10 (AP).—Gov. Dewey inspected the largest, most powerful coal fired steam locomotive ever constructed for high speed service on the New York Central railroad as it rolled out of the American Locomotive company shop today. Gustav Metzman, president of the railroad, and Duncan W. Fraser, head of the locomotive company, also inspected the giant engine, known as the Niagara.

It is as high and wide as clearance on the Central lines will permit. It will develop more than 6,000 horse power and is designed for handling both freight and passenger trains.

MARKET 'LEAK' CHARGE BRINGS BROAD DENIALS

Asserts Taber Gets Ideas from Trends.

Rep. Taber.

Charges made in the house Friday that advance leaks of news of prospective government commodity purchases have enabled grain and egg speculators to make millions of dollars brought widespread discussion and denials among Chicago commodity interests yesterday.

"Any dissemination of such information is contrary to the fixed policies of the Chicago Mercantile exchange and is handled with disciplinary measures if discovered," said Maurice Mandeville, president of the exchange. Answering an assertion by Rep. Taber [R., N. Y.] that advance information apparently had been obtained from the war food administration of forthcoming sales of eggs last year, Mandeville admitted, "There are grapevines we don't know about sometimes."

"Drew Conclusions from Market."

Taber probably was drawing general conclusions from the condition of the market, Mandeville said.

"When WFA has large egg supplies, traders are influenced by that knowledge," he said. "If such a condition exists, the natural supposition is that WFA will sell some of its holdings, and traders act accordingly."

Any large drop in prices may or may not result from grapevine information, but probably would be caused only by the apprehension of traders over what they expect to happen, he said, and added: "I'd like to have Washington prove these charges."

Taber made the allegations during house debate on a bill to extend for two years the life of the Commodity Credit corporation. He charged that Chicago grain speculators had received tipoffs from the CCC. He recalled that on Sept. 25, 1944, the government announced it would pay the full parity price on May 1, 1945, for all loan wheat that remained unredeemed. He said that altho the announcement was a "surprise," wheat prices had risen 14 1-5 cents a bushel in the preceding 16 days. TRIBUNE records show that December futures rose 6½, May 7⅝, and July 7⅛ cents in that period. Immediately after the announcement each rose the 5 cents permitted for one day.

No Infractions Reported.

Board of Trade officials have said that rules of the exchange prohibit such irregular practices as the dissemination of advance information and infractions are dealt with according to the rules. They refused further comment and said "No infractions have been reported to us."

Taber also charged that, under CCC supervision, virtually all the rye in Chicago "belongs to one concern," which, he said, had made a "huge profit" out of its holdings as a result of a wide advance in price.

Daniel F. Rice & Co., reported to have large rye holdings, much of it for the account of General Foods corporation, denied all knowledge of speculation on the grain market. Joseph Rice, resident partner, said the first he had heard of it "was in the story from Washington."

Sears Higher Wage Plan Is Disapproved by WLB

Sears, Roebuck & Co. has been refused approval of a plan for hiring new employes at wage rates above classification minimums, Edgar L. Warren, regional war labor board, said yesterday. The plan would have affected individuals whose background and ability are above average.

RED CROSS GIVEN A FOURTH OF ITS $11,300,000 QUOTA

Martin H. Kennelly, chairman of the Chicago district of the Red Cross war fund campaign, said yesterday that receipts already have reached 25 per cent of the $11,300,000 quota for the drive, which will end March 31. Substantial contributions from communities in Cook county outside Chicago, in Du Page county, and in the southern half of Lake county helped to swell receipts in the latter part of the week, he said.

Returns are coming in earlier this year from the various groups of the business division, Kennelly said. There are 66 units in the division with a combined goal of $8,788,000.

Kennelly said that American Red Cross expenses in 1945 will be more than 50 million dollars in excess of those of last year because of the increased tempo of the war. The current year's national budget calls for expenditures of 232 million.

EDITOR BOTKER IS DEAD; FOUGHT DUEL WITH RIVAL

Services for Christian Botker, 79, Danish newspaper editor who was a principal in a duel with a rival editor in 1914, will be held at 2 p. m. tomorrow in the chapel at 3301 Fullerton av. He is survived by his widow, Agnes. Mr. Botker died Friday in Illinois Masonic hospital.

The duel, which occurred early on an April morning, occurred because of articles in Mr. Botker's paper, Revyen, about a talk which another Danish editor, the late Edward Peterson, made before a Danish singing society. The traditional rites were performed and the principals fired. No one was hurt and second shots failed to go off. The duelists left the field arm in arm, to learn later that the pistols were loaded with blanks.

Mr. Botker came to this country in 1891 and founded Revyen in 1891. In 1921 he founded the Danish Times.

RIVER FOREST MANOR
Building sites owned by the Fort Dearborn Mortgage Co. can now for the first time be purchased by the general public. Located 8 blocks west of Harlem-av. and along North-av. This community is the desirable place to build your home and raise your family. It has the "must" qualifications: Schools, transportation, all improvements, including concrete streets and alleys, and is conveniently close to the Oak Park shopping center. Highly restricted, it has become a community of fine homes and neighbors. No development in the Chicago area has the assured future that this community has. Choose one of our wooded building sites now. Remember that land values have not yet materially increased. Rather than buy a home at a foolishly high price perhaps it would be better to "live in a tent" for a while and build your modern home after the war. Start today—be ready when the ceiling on your rent is removed.

Admiral Fitch

NAVY'S FIGHTING BOSS OF THE AIR

By WALTER TROHAN

Washington, D. C.

AT FIRST GLANCE there is nothing prepossessing about Vice Adm. Aubrey Wray Fitch, deputy chief of naval operations (air), except for a rainbow splash of ribbons on his chest. He is of medium height, stocky build, pleasant face, and balding head. He looks like a penguin rather than an eagle, until close study reveals that his eyes—piercing, daring, and yet friendly—and his voice—commanding yet warm—give him wings, and then everything about him becomes the fighter.

Admiral Fitch has the reputation of being ready to fight anything that comes along. He won the job of bossing navy aviation by making that reputation good in the South Pacific. He shot down more Jap planes, sank more Jap ships, and killed more Japs than any other commander of shore-based aircraft in the American services.

In the first 11 months of his command as commander of air forces, South Pacific, his "angels of destruction," shore-based army, navy, marine, and New Zealand flyers, shot down 798 Jap fighters, 256 bombers, 165 float planes, 6 flying boats, and 83 miscellaneous flying craft. And that was not all; they sank 1 battleship, 3 heavy cruisers, 2 light cruisers, 1 destroyer leader, 1 light cruiser or destroyer leader, 1 light cruiser or gunboat, 13 destroyers, 1 corvette, 1 sub chaser, 4 cargo ships, 21 cargo ships or transports, 1 oiler, and 1 seaplane tender.

For this record no less an authority on fighting than Adm. William E. Halsey Jr., the scrapping admiral, declared that "Jakey," his nickname thruout the navy, was a prime battler. Fitch doesn't wait for a fight to come to him; he goes out looking for something to tie into, usually finds it, and comes out on top.

When the Japs struck treacherously at Pearl Harbor on Dec. 7, 1941, Fitch, with the rank of rear admiral, was in command of carrier division No. 1, on the west coast. He was ashore at Coronado, Cal., when word of the naval disaster reached him. Instead of giving way to groans of despair the admiral strode to a golf course where he knew some of his officers were making up a number of foursomes. He gathered them up and went to sea—without orders.

As he started out in the aircraft carrier Saratoga under forced draft, he sent a message to his superior. He didn't wait for an answer; the message didn't require one. It read simply, "Unless otherwise directed, Admiral Fitch and his staff will bring the Sara out, starting tomorrow."

With a destroyer escort, which he rounded up without orders, he went scurrying out in search of Japs. He carried his search well into Jap waters, beyond Midway and Wake, but couldn't find a Jap ship of any description. Later he met more success, demonstrating his fighting prowess.

He found his first Japs in the Coral sea. As commander of an air task force, he was aboard the carrier Lexington. His command soundly trounced two Jap air forces. In this operation the Lexington was fatally wounded. The death of this proud queen, one of the most dramatic stories of the war, is told by Stanley Johnston, Tribune correspondent, in his book, "Queen of the Flat-Tops."

"About 5 o'clock," Johnston wrote, "I was standing on the bridge when I saw Admiral Fitch lean over his upper balcony and call down to Captain Sherman (Frederick C. Sherman, then captain, now rear admiral):

"'Well, Ted, let's get the men off.'

As the Lexington settled the admiral naturally wanted to hold to the tradition of the sea and be the last to leave the vessel. He was ready to leave, had one hand on a line leading overside, when his marine orderly, Brandle, came racing down the deck bearing the admiral's white uniform neatly folded over his arm.

"You go first, sir," the marine said.

"No," quietly said the admiral, "you go first."

"You're older, sir," the marine held back. "I'd rather go after you."

The orderly went.

Later, aboard the cruiser Augusta, the admiral found his dress whites neatly laid out on his bunk. Brandle had taken them overside and across the stretch of ocean without disturbing a crease or picking up a smudge.

Admiral Fitch took up flying at the age of 46, when he started training at Pensacola in 1929. In this he is like Vice Adm. John S. McCain, his immediate predecessor both as commander of the air forces, South Pacific, and deputy chief of naval operations (air). McCain took up flying at the age of 51 in 1935.

Fitch had an established surface career when he switched to air. He won his wings as a naval aviator in 1930. He then took command of the U. S. S. Langley, our first carrier. This was followed by tours of shore duty at air stations.

In 1935 he commanded the Saratoga and in 1936 the Lexington. In 1938 he completed a course at the naval war college and then became commandant of the naval air station at Pensacola. In 1940 he returned to flying and on Nov. 1, 1940, he reassumed command of the Saratoga and in 1942 of the Lexington. Since 1929 he has flown 2,000 hours and some 240,000 miles.

OUR PART IN EUROPE'S WAR

AN AMERICAN WHITE PAPER

This is the second of two articles outlining in the form of an American White Paper just what this nation has contributed to the war against Germany and Japan. Last Sunday the author described our activities in the Pacific since Pearl Harbor.

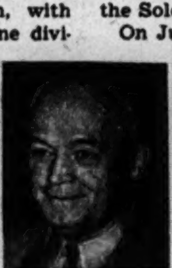
AMERICA'S war in the west against Germany and Italy, the subject of this continuation of an American White Paper on the accomplishments of our nation and our arms, was conducted under vastly more difficult conditions than the war of 1917-'18. Then we had France as a bridgehead on the continent; Italy was an ally, and France and England had armies in the line which were as large or larger than our own. In 13 months, after 13 major actions, Germany was defeated and our task was finished.

This time we faced a foe who held the entire coast line of Europe from northern Finland to the Dardanelles with the exception of neutral Spain and Portugal and the British base at Gibraltar; who was installed in many of the islands of the Mediterranean; whose vast U-boat fleet was at the start an even more dangerous threat than in the first World war, and who had sprawled into Africa, where his armies and the forces of satellite France denied us any landing place on the west coast north of the bulge at Dakar or along the entire North African coast west of the Egyptian border.

But, despite such forbidding circumstances, we had in a little more than three years of war crossed 3,500 miles of ocean, cleared the axis from all of Africa, knocked almost all of Italy south of the Po river valley out of the war, established complete control of the Mediterranean, liberated all of France and Belgium and part of Holland, and had punched thru the Siegfried line on Germany's western border. The U-boat scourge had been held in check for many months, and our war industries were not only supplying our own armies but providing 35.4 billion dollars' worth of munitions, food, and supplies to Britain, Russia, and other allies. This assistance was at least in part responsible for their own victories.

The main strength of our army, which now stands at 8,100,000 men, was from the beginning directed against Germany and Italy. Of the nine armies we have organized, four—the 1st, 3d, 7th, and 9th—are in France. The 5th is in Italy, and the 6th and 8th, now in the Philippines, have so far carried the burden against Japan, with the assistance of five marine divisions which so far have been in action. Our 2d and 4th armies are still training in this country.



General Arnold

Our war with Germany and Italy began Dec. 11, 1941, four days after the Japanese declaration of war, when the western partners of the axis declared that a state of hostilities existed under the commitments of the pact of Berlin, signed Sept. 27, 1940. For many months previously, however, an undeclared war was in fact being prosecuted. We had acquired and were in process of garrisoning eight Atlantic and Caribbean bases leased from the British; we had placed a garrison in Greenland April 9, 1941, and had relieved some of the British troops in Iceland on July 7; and we had attacked and on at least four occasions had been attacked by German submarines.

During January, 1942, hostile submarines began appearing off our eastern seaboard. Almost 650 ships went down in the western Atlantic before the undersea warfare was checked. By August, 1942, the submarines were brought under control off the coast, and in the next 10 months not a single vessel was sunk on our eastern sea frontier. Only three ships were sunk between May and October, 1943. To date more than 500 enemy submarines have been sunk by the United States and its allies. While our navy was principally occupied in anti-submarine warfare and in convoying merchant shipping, the American carrier Wasp in May, 1942, shared in the hazardous work of replenishing supplies and material for the British island of Malta in the face of heavy German air attacks from Sicily. Four months later it was sunk by the Japs in the Solomon Islands.

On July 4, 1942, American bombers made their first raid on western Europe from British bases. Since then the 8th and 15th air forces alone have dropped more than 700,000 tons of bombs on enemy targets and destroyed more than 16,000 enemy planes, more than 13,000 of them in the air, at a cost of more than 5,000 American bombers and 2,500 fighters. The casualties among our air crews were in excess of 50,000 men.

On Feb. 26 General Arnold, chief of the army air forces, announced that from Dec. 7, 1941, thru Dec. 31, 1944, our army flyers had flown 6½ million missions over enemy lines in all parts of the world, destroying an estimated 50,658 axis planes at a cost of 17,830 American planes. At least 35,000 German planes were destroyed, while nearly 15,000 of our own planes were lost in the war against Germany.

Our ground forces made their first small scale attack upon the enemy-held continent July 18, when a contingent of Rangers participated in a raid across the channel against Dieppe.

The first major American offensive was in North Africa, where, on Nov. 8, 1942, our forces landed near the Mediterranean ports of Oran and Algiers and at three points near Casablanca, in French Morocco. The naval support at Casablanca was entirely American; at Oran and Algiers the naval units were mostly British. The convoy of more than 500 troop and supply ships, escorted by more than 350 warships, was the greatest ever assembled for a single operation up to that time. Some American air-borne troops were flown 1,400 miles from Britain.

The total strength and composition of the American, British, and Canadian forces which invaded North Africa have never been detailed. Early reports indicated that perhaps 150,000 men had participated in the landings, and two-thirds of these probably were American. The British 1st army, which landed under command of Lt. Gen. K. A. N. Anderson, is thought to have consisted of perhaps three British divisions and one Canadian. It was strengthened in April, 1943, by the transfer of three divisions from the British 8th army, which had been fighting in Egypt and Libya and consisted of some 10 or 12 divisions under command of General Montgomery. Americans also fought for a time with General Anderson.

On Feb. 11, 1943, Prime Minister Churchill disclosed that there were almost 800,000 allied troops in Africa. It is probable that about half of these were Americans. Admiral Darlan, who proclaimed himself French commissioner for North Africa shortly after the landings, brought over about 50,000 French troops, the most effective of which were the fierce native Goumiers. These French fought as the 19th corps. The Americans were organized in two corps and the 9th and 12th air forces also participated in the campaign.

North Africa was in our hands within four days, for Admiral Darlan ordered all French resistance to cease Nov. 11. Later that month allied advanced elements reached points within 10 miles of the city of Tunis after Anderson's 1st army had landed at Philippeville and Bone, but axis reënforcements under command of General von Arnim were rushed from Italy and stabilized the western Tunisia front at year's end on the general line from Sedjenane thru Medjez el Bab and Bou Arada to the mountainous region of the Grand Dorsal. Meanwhile, on Dec. 8, Dakar was opened for the use of the allies, but on Dec. 24 Darlan was assassinated.

Feb. 14, 1943, the Germans inflicted a serious reverse on the Americans near Faid pass and rapidly drove us out of Gafsa. They then routed us at Kasserine pass on Feb. 20 and were within 30 miles of the American base of Tebessa, but were driven out of the pass five days later. In March we began an offensive which again threatened the lines of communication between Tunisia and Marshal Rommel's Afrika korps, fighting the British 8th army to the east. On April 7 patrols of the American 2d corps made contact with 8th army patrols east of El Guettar.

The advance of Montgomery's 8th army into Tunisia marked the approaching end of a campaign of 28 months, during which British fortunes had seesawed from one extreme to the other. The last enemy offensive had driven the British almost to the fleet base at Alexandria before a defense line was established between El Alamein and the Qattara depression.

From here the British, greatly reënforced with lend-lease tanks, planes, and trucks, began their own third offensive. In combination with the American and British push into Tunisia from the west, this drive finally threw the axis out of Africa. The 8th army offensive started Oct. 23, 1942, and took Tripoli on Jan. 23, 1943. Rommel retreated to the old French Mareth line in southern Tunisia, which the New Zealanders flanked on March 26. By March 30 Montgomery's offensive could be coördinated with our own.

On April 16 the American 2d corps, now commanded by Gen. Omar Bradley, after moving northward 150 miles in secret, went into action in the Beja sector. On April 26 it attacked along the road from Beja to Mateur. The British 1st army, reënforced by three of Montgomery's divisions, launched an attack April 16 and advanced on the north side of the Medjerda valley, capturing the commanding heights of Dejebel Ang and Long Stop hill by the 25th.

On May 3 Bradley took Mateur and the Americans and French closed to within 13 miles of Bizerte, bringing Ferryville and Bizerte under fire of American 155s. The British 1st army to the south then launched a heavy assault on the axis center before Tunis. On May 7 the axis positions on the entire front west and south of Tunis collapsed. Tunis was entered by the British that afternoon; an hour later Ferryville was cleared by the American 2d corps; Bizerte was entered by forward elements, American and French; and the British 8th army and Giraud's French occupied Pont du Fahs.

The Tunisian campaign came to a finish May 15—six months, less one day, after the first landings in North Africa. General von Arnim and 13 other German and four Italian generals were captured, and between March 21, 1943, and the capitulation German and Italian casualties totaled 323,000—30,000 killed, 27,000 wounded, and 266,000 captured. American casualties from Nov. 8, 1942, had been 18,738, of whom 2,754 were killed, 9,437 wounded, 1,620 missing, and 5,107 prisoners. Since Jan. 30, 1943, casualties of the British 1st army totaled 23,500 and of the British 8th army 11,500.

On July 10 the American 7th army and the British 8th army, both under command of General Eisenhower, who had been named allied supreme commander on Feb. 11, landed on the south and east coasts of Sicily. Probably at least six American divisions and an equal number of British, with one Canadian division, made the landings. They had been preceded the night before by parachutists and glider-borne troops who disrupted enemy communications. The American landings were made at Scoglitti, Gela, and Licata, and in 13 days our forces had driven to Palermo, on the north coast of the island. Marsala and Trapani were captured July 24 by the 7th army, which in two weeks had taken 50,000 prisoners in the area south and west of Palermo.

This series of disasters was too much for Mussolini and fascism to withstand. The dictator was deposed July 26. Marshal Badoglio, appointed premier, said, "The war goes on." Driving along the north coast of Sicily, the Americans took Cefalu July 28 and on Aug. 3 cracked the axis Mount Etna line. Troina fell three days later and American amphibious troops, in landings behind the axis lines near Terrenova on Aug. 7 and east of Cape Orlando on Aug. 10, readied the enemy for the knockout. The remnants of the German and Italian armies were crowded into the northeast tip of Sicily and by Aug. 11, when the Americans made contact northwest of Bronte with the British 8th army, which had been driving up the east coast, were attempting to flee across the Straits of Messina. When Messina fell and the battle for Sicily ended Aug. 18, after a 38 day campaign, more than 125,000 prisoners had been captured.

The fourth and final article in a series by Alex Small, Tribune foreign correspondent, giving his personal analysis of American magazines, will appear in next Sunday's Graphic Section.

On Sept. 9 Gen. Mark Clark's 5th army took the war to the European mainland with landings at Salerno. Italy's surrender had been announced by General Eisenhower the previous day, but the Germans had announced their intention to defend the peninsula and Montgomery's 8th army had already invaded the toe of Italy on Sept. 3.

Our landing force consisted of about nine divisions—the 3d, 34th, 36th, 45th, 85th, and 87th infantry, the 1st armored, the 82d air-borne, and Rangers and special troops amounting to about one more division. The British 8th army had no more divisions than this, and may have had less, for some of Montgomery's forces were soon returned to England in anticipation of the forthcoming invasion of France. The Canadians at first had one division in Italy. They now have two there.

Originally it had been planned to capture Rome with paratroops a few hours before the Americans landed at Salerno, but the venture was called off just as the first troop carriers were taxiing down the runways. It was learned at the last minute that earlier information that the Germans had only a small force around Rome, which would have made possible operations against the city by one American air-borne division, was subject to correction. The Nazis had moved in 48,000 men, 270 tanks, and 100 big guns.

On Sept. 10 the Germans seized Rome and two days later announced their parachutists had freed Mussolini. The port of Salerno was in our hands a day after the landing and on Oct. 1 we took Naples. On Oct. 13 King Victor Emmanuel and Premier Badoglio escaped to the allied lines and declared Italy to be at war with Germany. The following day the Americans crossed the Volturno river, but winter and difficult terrain slowed the advance.

In an effort to outflank the German defense line an American beachhead was seized at Anzio, 20 miles south of Rome, on Jan. 22, 1944, but the Germans immediately brought it under heavy shelling and vicious counter-attacks. With great resolution our troops held their perimeter. The main body of our troops, stalled before Cassino, leveled the monastery and town with a huge scale air bombardment March 15, but failed to dislodge the Germans. On May 11 our 5th army and the British 8th launched a great attack between Cassino and the Tyrrhenian sea, cracking the German line and taking Cassino a week later.

The Anzio forces broke out of the beachhead May 23 with a great assault of their own and the following day cut the Appian way. On May 25 all elements in Italy were merged in a single front moving on Rome, which fell to us June 4 after the Germans decided to save it from becoming a battleground.

Two days later we invaded France, landing in Normandy from a huge fleet of transports supported by all kinds of assault craft from rocket carriers to battleships. A quarter of a million troops were put ashore in the first few days. It is probable that 70 per cent of the men landed were Americans, and the remainder British, Canadians, Poles, Belgians, Dutch, and Czechs under British command.

Three landings were made south of Le Havre. One of these, by the American 1st division, was made against a defended beach and was successful despite high losses. An American division and a British division, which made the initial landings at the two other beaches, encountered virtually no opposition. We soon were advancing inland, while supplies poured ashore, and in five days had cut one-third of the way across the Norman peninsula on a 50 mile front. Little headway was made toward Le Havre, but on June 27 we stormed Cherbourg, where 25,000 Germans were killed or captured.

By July 9 the British and Canadians had taken Caen, but had run up against German defenses in great strength guarding the mouth of the Seine. Two days later the Americans began a great battle which lasted eight days and ended with the capture of St. Lo July 18, making possible a break-thru on a huge scale at the south end of the Norman peninsula. Passing Avranches on Aug. 1, we rolled down the French coast and burst into Brittany at four points. All of St. Lo except the citadel fell on Aug. 9, and on the same day General Patton's American 3d army, which had driven inland, reached Le Mans.

While the German west front was in a state of dissolution, General Patch's American 7th army invaded south France Aug. 15, landing on the Riviera between Nice and Marseilles. For the next month the main body of Patch's force pursued the Germans north, while other contingents, with French irregulars, stormed bypassed strongholds in the south of France. These troops on the Mediterranean coast reduced Brignoles, the gateway to Marseilles, on Aug. 21; Marseilles on Aug. 23, and the fleet base of Toulon Aug. 28. Patch's main force, after capturing Lyon on Sept. 3, made contact Sept. 12 with the right flank of the 3d army.

Meanwhile our force from Nor-

THAT HITCHCOCK TOUCH!

LOOKING AT HOLLYWOOD WITH HEDDA HOPPER

(Copyright: 1945: The Chicago Tribune.)

Hollywood.

"LET'S GO IN and watch him work." That's what Ingrid Bergman said to me one day outside the sound stage at Selznick's studio while Alfred Hitchcock was filming "Spellbound."

The actors in his pictures will always tell you that Hitch gives the best performance of any one on the set, just like Lubitsch. And the "Hitchcock touch" or the "Lubitsch touch" has made their pictures a "must see" with millions. Hitchie's quips and drolleries make smart dinner conversation for Hollywood's duller souls.

And yet he told me the other day there was nothing extraordinary about the suspense-packed pictures he makes. What passed for inspiration with him was observation—watching what actually happens, filming only what could happen.

We were in the living room of his Bel-Air home, looking thru the window at golfers passing on the course a hundred yards distant. I'd gone up to welcome him back from England. I wanted to hear how the Hitchcock technique had been applied to propaganda pictures he directed over there.

He started right off by saying that one of these pictures wasn't propaganda at all. "'Bon Voyage,'" he explained, "was just a way of saying thanks to the French people and the underground for all they'd risked in helping so many of our boys escape during the occupation. It's a three reel feature that tells the true story of the escape of an English flyer and assistance given him."

"You see," he continued, "there is nothing unusual or extraordinary in this. All the things that happened to this flyer happened hundreds of times to others during the occupation of France."

It was on the tip of my tongue to ask, "How were the reviews?" but movie critics don't review propaganda pictures.

"'Bon Voyage,'" he said pridefully, "was well received." Then he called my attention to a pair of golfers. These were peering ahead to see where their ball had landed.

"Hedda," he continued, "it was sneak-previewed in Cinema Radio Bastille in liberated France." He walked across the immense living room to the book-lined alcove in which a desk was placed.

"My study," he grinned, opening a desk drawer. "This is a modern house. Communal living. We all just pig it here together."

ALFRED HITCHCOCK

He handed me the report without comment. I read:

"The young Englishman who takes the part of the escaper received immediate sympathy. . . . Those taking part in the 'Resistance' held your interest completely. They tried to guess who would help the escaper. . . . They are worked up and do not hide their feelings. . . . Finally when Holberg [a Nazi] is taken by the 'Resistance' and is a prisoner in his hotel room, the public applauds."

Boy! What material for a Hitchcock suspense picture—a true story of a flyer's escape! And what a chase this must be! The English government did a mighty intelligent thing getting this "master of suspense" over to direct it.

I wanted to say we'd like to see it over here, too. But Hitch wasn't after praise. He pretended to be absorbed in another golfer searching the green for his ball.

"I think I'll take up golf," he chuckled. "Sociological golf."

He waited for my guffaw. He knew I knew the only exercise he was built for was mental. I waited for the pay-off.

"Yep," he said, "when the rich golfers lose their balls I'll run out and pick them up. I'll hide them until they're gone, then I'll give the balls to the poor golfers."

Hitch's new picture is the much-talked-of "Spellbound," with Gregory Peck making love to Ingrid Bergman, mystery, suspense, psychiatry, fantastic sets by Salvador Dali, and music by the symphony composer and conductor Miklos Rozsa.

Hitch has his own theory about music. He puts music in pictures so he can stop it.

He gets a celebrated composer to write music for him just so he can stop it. (Come to think of it, a lot of weary husbands who get dragged to concerts are going to cheer him for this.) But just why, sir, do you get all that expensive music just to stop it?

"You've seen people in danger?" asks Hitch. "People at some high point of tension? Let's do a scene: We're sitting in this room talking, when bang! just like that, a burglar enters and points a gun at us.

"We freeze. We don't move or breathe. Certainly we don't talk. At any dramatic moment like this there comes hush. When the danger is over everybody starts jabbering. It's a release to talk. They talk louder, laugh louder.

"So in a psychological mystery there are appropriate intervals at which I want the music dramatically stopped—with a hush! Well, if we didn't have the music in the picture in the first place, we couldn't stop it. Which is to say that we put the music there so we can stop it.

"Only 'Spellbound' isn't just a mystery story. It's a love story, too. Everything happens because a woman loves a man, or vice versa. Maybe that's mysterious, too. It always has been to me."

He rubbed the side of his nose and his gaze strayed out the window to the golf course again. "There's nothing unusual about it. It's based on truth. Psychiatric truth. There's nothing in it that hasn't happened or couldn't happen."

"Maybe," I said. "But what about 'Foreign Correspondent' and 'Lifeboat'?"

"Same thing. In 'Foreign Correspondent' it was a man hammering away at events, and the woman didn't help things. There isn't anything in there that couldn't happen. 'Lifeboat' is the same way."

"After 'Spellbound,' what?" I wanted to know.

"'Notorious,'" he said. "Just finished working on the script with Ben Hecht."

Then he goes on to tell what a great guy Ben is. Says they collaborate so well that dialog becomes a kind of verbal shorthand, almost mental telepathy. One never says to the other, "O, I thought you meant so and so." Lots of writing teams will be surprised to hear this, 'cause most of those I'm acquainted with tell me how they struggle—except Wilder and Brackett. They don't struggle. They just give in, and along come the boys with the straitjackets, and the picture's ready to begin.

Hitch feels his pictures are finished the day shooting begins. He says from then on it's a matter of interpreting what has been created, and it's possible only to get into the finished film only about 75 per cent of what the mind has pictured.

He was interrupted by a photographer come to get a picture for his magazine. The photographer suggested Mr. Hitchcock pose by the door.

"Sure," said Hitch, opening the door. "You can get me saying hello to Harvey."

In a world where six foot invisible rabbits can star in Broadway shows and in which the true story of an English flyer's escape from occupied France furnishes material for a Hitchcock chiller I can believe that there is nothing unusual in a Hitchcock picture—nothing, that is, except the flair of the man who makes 'em.

But that isn't going to make my spine tingle any less the next time I sit watching one unreel on the screen. He's got that satanic touch you love to watch. That, in one line, is my description of Alfred Hitchcock.

VOICE OF THE MOVIE FAN

Letters published in this department should be written on one side of the paper. If you wish a personal reply please inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Dear Mae: I recently saw the picture "Winged Victory" and was much impressed by the actor who played the part of Pinky. If you could would you please print a picture of him and tell us a little about his life? JACKIE.

Corp. Don Taylor

Here's your picture, Jackie. The lad's name is Don Taylor. He played in the New York stage run of the play and was spotted for the screen version. Now a corporal in the army, he was formerly a barber in a small Ohio town.

Dear Miss Tinée: I'd appreciate a little information about Bing Crosby. I've heard his real name is Harry Lillis Crosby. Is Lillis his second name, his mother's name, or what? I'll look forward to your reply. Thank you.

J. LILLIS.

You're right about Mr. Crosby's second name, but that's all I can tell you. None of the material on him seems to give his mother's maiden name.

Dear Miss Tinée: I have just seen the picture "Music in Manhattan" and would like to know who played the role of Capt. John Pemberton. And please tell me something of his life. Good luck to your column. DARLENE.

The man you mention is Phillip Terry. He was born in San Francisco, attended Stanford university, studied theatricals, and did occasional work in the oil fields. Studied drama at the Royal academy in London, then played stock and repertory in England. First work in the United States was on the radio. Six feet tall, weighs 165, brown hair and eyes. Married to Joan Crawford.

Discovery by Noted Veterinarian

STOPS DOG-ITCH

For years, veterinarians were baffled by a common skin disease that caused untold agony to dogs and cats. Starting as a burning itch, it soon develops dandruff-like scales and brownish edged sores with a mouldy odor in ears, on paws, under-body, back or around tail. Treatments for mange, fleas, allergy or faulty diet result only in costly care or actual loss. Now, noted veterinarian, Dr. A. C. Merrick, has positively identified this disease as a fungus infection comparable to "Athlete's Foot." He has named it "Fungitch" and has also developed SULFADENE, a treatment proved amazingly effective in thousands of clinical cases. Applied externally, Dr. Merrick's SULFADENE stops the itch in a few minutes—scales and sores vanish in a few days. You Didn't Plan It THAT Way!

By SHEILA JOHN DALY

EVEN the best laid plans of mice and men get off the beam occasionally. And here is a collection of king-sized plans that didn't turn out the way the guys and gals thought they should, and the number one problem gives out this way:

"I am a very bashful girl, altho in the last three years I have outgrown some of it. But I still have too much for comfort. It isn't that I am unfriendly, but when I am introduced to some one I try very hard and yet never can find the right thing to say. I am so ill at ease that the other person cannot do much either, because he has to carry on the whole conversation while I just answer yes or no.

"I am getting over this handicap a little and can get along quite well with some girls, but I never have dates at all. I know I am not a pretty girl, but I didn't think that mattered so much. I find I can get along quite well in groups, boys and girls, but when I happen to meet some fellow when I am alone I can barely manage to say hello.

"When I walk into a room I feel as if every one is looking at me because I look stupid or because I am doing something wrong. I would like to be confident and have fun like other girls."

Are you sure that all the other girls are "confident and having fun"? There is hardly a gal in the world who doesn't go thru that worried, "how am I doing?" stage somewhere between 12 and 21. Once a gal is old enough to realize that she's on her own, that it's up to her to make friends and influence datable fellows if she wants to have fun — that's when the worry begins.

It takes practice to be poised and charming, and it takes practice to be a good conversationalist. Take advantage of all the practice you can get and week by week you'll find yourself gaining confidence. One important thing to remember — shyness often may be mistaken for snobbishness, so take your nose out of the air. You just let a friend go by!

Pride and self-respect may be old fashioned words, but it's sharp to think about them once in a while.

"We are two typical 17-year-old high school girls who need advice. We started work after school in a factory and met a grand crowd of fellows. There were two fellows in particular who attracted us. We didn't see much of them till a few weeks ago. Then one of the fellows in the crowd got his draft notice and we had a going-away party. In the course of the evening we got together with these two boys. We danced and were together most of the evening. They also kissed us good night.

"The next day at work they acted as if nothing had happened, altho they did speak to us just as they always had. Then we drifted away from liking them — seeing they didn't like us. But a short while ago there was another party, and history repeated itself — except that they were more serious. But the next day at work they were just as casual. It seems that they want us around just for the moment; they seem now to like us, but we don't seem to get very far with them."

A few more parties and you will get as far as it's smart for any two young gals to go. Pride and self-respect may be old fashioned words, but it's sharp to think about them once in a while. These particular Joes have you marked as a couple of able Grables, strictly party bait. Come, now, you're smarter than that, aren't you?

"About two months ago I walked over to the bus stop as usual to catch the bus to go to school. I was waiting when a nice looking, mannerly boy came up, waiting for the bus, too. We stood in silence for a minute, and then he asked if the bus was late or if he was early, and naturally I answered him and we got to talking.

"Well, that kept up for several weeks—we'd talk till the bus came, then get on. I'd usually have a girl friend waiting for me on the bus, so I'd sit with her, but often we'd go to the back of the bus where all three of us could sit together. He'd sit with us till he got to his stop—then I'd wait patiently for the next day. Please don't misunderstand me; I'm not the type of gal who goes about picking up fellows on street corners, but this fellow is different. We go to different schools, but it happens that he works sometimes in the same office as my mother, and she thinks he is a fine young fellow. Nice boys these days are hard to find, and I'd like to see more of him. Would I be foolish to ask him to a party at my house?"

Just to prove to him that you're "not the type of gal who goes about picking up fellows on street corners," a party at your own home would be just right. Conventions have a changed a bit and a girl no longer has to be introduced to a boy flanked by two chaperons and a complete family history. You think he's slightly wonderful, your mother approves—you've hit the stuff that dreams are made on!

RECORDially yours Will Davidson

LOUIS PRIMA HUFFS and PUFFS SOME HOT TUNES

Louis Prima . . . his best is "Beloved."

NEW ORLEANS gave Louis Prima to the music world, and he's still blowing that trumpet with the old abandon, the same old drive and feeling for exuberant expression of his musical thoughts. HIT is featuring Louis strongly and within recent weeks has issued at least 10 sides. The best of the bunch far and away is "Beloved," with that shrill trumpet under good control. Lily Ann Carol does well with the vocal, and Louis and the brass section give her a good background. The side is backed by another of Prima's best—"Dance with a Dolly." His gravelly voice takes a repressed scat vocal, there's a good beat, and the deep-toned background is well mannered and interesting.

For a fast novelty you'll probably like Prima's "Angelina." This slightly silly saga of the waitress at the Pizzeria is primarily a vocal, with some acceptable trumpet licks. It has Lily Ann's vocal of "Oh, Marie" on the back. There's a nice sax break in "A Little on the Lonely Side," and the backer-upper of this one is a slow and easy "Let's Take the Long Way Home." Prima demonstrates his facile if sometimes inexact trumpet technique to advantage in "Confessin'," in which he does the vocal, too. It is good in a playful way. "This Heart of Mine," on the B side, is slow and standard. "I Wonder"—"I Want to Go to Tokyo" haven't a lot to commend them.

Response to my bid for opinions on great drummers amazes me. Krupa fans (of whom I'm the most vocal) resent my even mentioning Sid Catlett as great, too. Gene wouldn't.—W. D.

While I'm on the HIT parade I want to mention Cootie Williams' superb "Somebody's Gotta Go." It is remarkable for a number of things, especially Eddie Vinson's superior blues singing with a quiet piano and trumpet background, followed by a wonderful sax solo. The B side is "Round Midnight," a tour de force for Cootie, with a slow, moody trumpet talking to itself. The Cootie is doing some splendid work.

Thanks to James A. Miles for catching an error. On Feb. 25 I inadvertently said Lionel Hampton, when I meant Red Norvo, played vibes in Goodman's quintet. Also, "Fiesta in Blue" was a band release, not a sextet.

American White Paper

mandy was engaged in a headlong rush across France. The American 1st army swung around the German left flank and nearly surrounded the entire force in western France, but the Germans managed to extricate substantial numbers of troops.

The Americans pursued, and the Germans were again intercepted, this time on Aug. 20 at the Seine river. The following day Patton's columns were on both sides of Paris and crossed the Seine at one point. When his tanks reached Versailles, just outside the city, the Parisians rose up and began battling the German garrison, which was overcome Aug. 25. On Aug. 22 Patton had made a second crossing of the Seine southeast of Paris, turning the flank of the German 15th army retreating from the channel coast. Large numbers of Germans were taken prisoner, but again a large part of the Nazi force escaped.

While Patton cut toward Metz, Nancy, and Verdun, the 1st army headed for the Argonne forest and Sedan, taking the first World war battlefields of Soissons and Chateau Thierry with hardly a shot being fired. Within 10 miles of Sedan, the 1st changed direction, making a 90 degree swing to the north, toward Belgium, which was entered Sept. 2. The retreating Germans now were turning east between Maubeuge, France, and Mons, Belgium, and on Sept. 3 ran head-on into the Americans. In the three day battle of the Mons pocket we killed 5,000 Germans and took 25,000 prisoners.

Before the pocket was cleared up, Maj. Gen. Joseph Collins' 7th corps turned east and started for Germany, pushing back over the 1940 German road to conquest thru Charleroi, Liege, Namur, and Verviers. The 19th corps on the left flank of the 7th entered Holland, while the 5th corps on the right flank fought into the forests of Luxemburg. The 1st infantry and 3d armored divisions of the 7th corps were the first to cross into Germany, reaching the border Sept. 12. On Sept. 13 — the 100th day since the Normandy landing — our line stretched from north of Roermond, Holland, all the way south along the borders of western Germany and eastern Luxemburg, thence south along the Moselle river from Thionville thru Metz and Nancy, and south to Epinal.

Many of the American leaders felt that if our supplies had been sufficient we could have cracked the German west wall then, but the line from the beachheads, 250 miles in the rear, was overstretched and a halt had to be called. When we were ready to resume the attack, the German fortifications, which had been lightly held, were found to be fully manned. An attempt by air-borne units to flank the West Wall's northern extremity at Arnhem, Holland, where the Rhine has three branches, was made on Sept. 21, but, altho the two lower branches were seized and held by the American 82d and 101st air-borne divisions, the British 1st air-borne division on the farther side of the third branch was practically annihilated when General Dempsey's British 2d army failed to drive up from the south in time.

On Oct. 20, after a 19 day siege, American troops captured Aachen, the first major German city to come into our hands. On Nov. 16 General Eisenhower opened a grinding offensive into the Rhineland. French and 7th army troops to the south took Strasbourg on the 24th, while the 1st army drove thru the Hurtgen forest the following day. On the 28th the 3d army penetrated the Saar basin, but the fighting settled down into a battle of attrition and on Dec. 16 Marshal Von Rundstedt opened his counter-attack thru the lightly held front at the Ardennes forest.

General Eisenhower

The Tribune shortly will publish a special article by its war correspondent, John Thompson, on this "battle of the bulge." Suffice it to say that in a month of bitter fighting the Americans beat back the threat and by Jan. 15, 1945, the Germans were in full retreat from the bulge.

By the end of January, Eisenhower had regrouped his armies along a 200 mile front for a new push with the announced objective of clearing the entire area west of the Rhine. The main offensive was mounted by the American 1st and 9th armies on a 35 mile front along the Roer river, 25 miles west of Cologne. For months the Americans had been held back by knowledge of the German defensive plan of blowing the floodgates of the huge Urft and Schwammenauel dams, impounding more than 145 million tons of water.

The 1st army, fighting obstinately, reached the west ends of both dams, but at the point of capture the Nazis opened the Schwammenauel spillways Feb. 10. The Roer waters rose and raced down the valley, but the flood never reached the proportions calculated by the Nazis, and on Feb. 23, when Eisenhower opened his main attack, the Roer was bridged. Tanks and heavy equipment crossed the river, and General Hodges' troops, after capturing the stronghold of Dueren, poured into the Cologne plain and in three days were within 10 miles of the great Rhineland city of Cologne.

General Simpson's 9th army, holding the left flank in the Roer river drive, pushed forward simultaneously, bridging the stream and seizing the fortress towns of Linnich and Juelich. At Erkelenz and Katzen, reached by Simpson's forces Feb. 26, the Americans were within 20 miles of the industrial city of Duesseldorf on the Rhine. The great Ruhr and Rhineland arsenals lay directly ahead. With the loss of these, following the Russian seizure of the Silesian industries, Germany's capacity for carrying on the war would be seriously impaired.

Meanwhile four other allied armies were pushing rapidly forward along the front. The French 1st army on the extreme south, with the assistance of at least four American divisions, broke into the important communications center of Colmar on Feb. 10 and eight days later faced nothing but disorganized enemy elements in all of Alsace west of the Rhine and south of the Moder river, 10 miles north of Strasbourg. On the extreme north the Canadian 1st army rammed thru the main Siegfried defenses in the Reichswald near Kleve Feb. 12 and pivoted south, with the British 2d army joining in the drive.

General Patton's American 3d army crossed the Pruem river and seized the strong point of Pruem Feb. 12, while to the south other elements of Patton's group forced crossings of the Saar near its junction with the Moselle and captured the strongly held town of Saarburg. Trier was outflanked Feb. 26 as Patton pursued the evident plan of driving up the Moselle river valley toward Coblenz. Between Patton's forces and the French 1st army General Patch's 7th army invaded the Saar, German coal and iron mining region, battering at Saarbruecken, the largest city in the Saar basin.

In western Europe the United States has provided most of the men and has done most of the fighting. Already identified on that front are 31 American infantry divisions, nine of our armored divisions, and four of our air-borne divisions. Six French, 11 British, and three Canadian divisions; one Polish division, one Polish air-borne brigade, and three brigades of Czechs, Dutch, and Belgians provide the allied representation. From D-day to Feb. 5, 869,000 Germans were taken prisoner—about 60 per cent of them by American forces — and 400,000 more were killed or had become long term casualties.

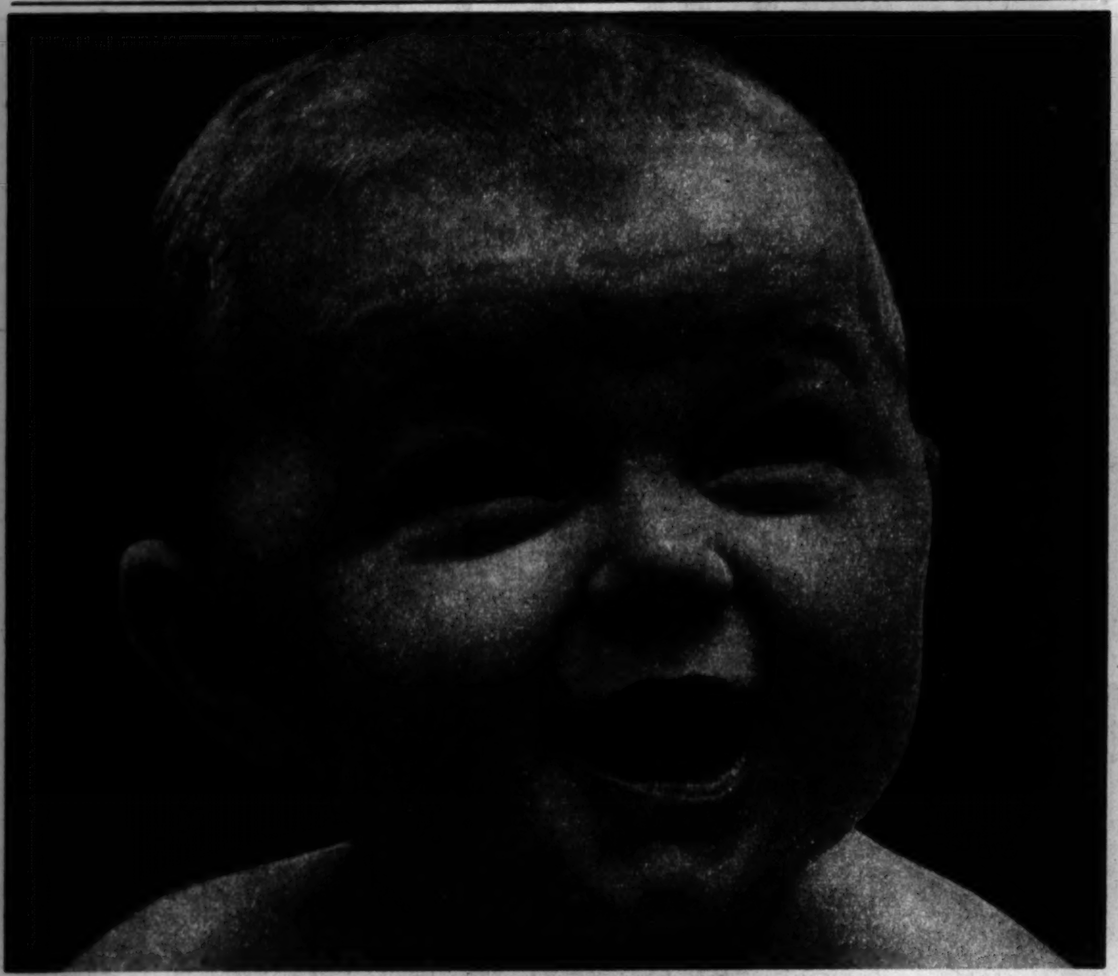
In Italy a mixed army of Americans and allies under command of General Clark pushed on from Rome to capture Grosseto June 16, 1944; Arezza, July 16; the port of Ancona, which fell to the American 5th army, July 19; Leghorn, the same day; Florence, Aug. 10; Pisa, Sept. 3, and Ravenna, Dec. 5. Our armies are now stalled by the winter and the Apennine mountains on a winding line running from Massa on the west coast thru the mountains to 12 miles south of Bologna in the center of the peninsula and on to a point north of Ravenna on the Adriatic. Recently there have been rumors that the Germans intended to withdraw from all of north Italy.

The allied forces now fighting in Italy constitute one of the most polyglot armies in history, with Americans fighting beside British, Canadians, New Zealanders, Poles, Indians, Italians, Goumiers, Senegalese, and Brazilians. Altho this army never was allotted quite sufficient forces to push the Germans back into the Alps, it has pinned down 27 divisions Hitler badly needs.

Thus 15 months after we set foot on the European continent in Italy, and nine months after our return to France, the dictators were in a state of confusion, harried on every side. The end could not be much farther off, and the decision would be greatly owing to the might of the United States. No other nation in the world could have fought a victorious war at one end of the earth and still have cast its weight decisively in a conflict of even greater magnitude and difficulty on the other side of the globe. This record of accomplishment is unsurpassed in any war. It will be a marvel in history, and it should be a marvel to us.



"My dad's calling me up tonight"

"I haven't seen him for some time.

"If you are not in the service, would you mind going easy on Long Distance between 7 and 10 tonight so his call can get through quicker?

"Pop and I will be mighty grateful."

YOUTH ON THE CAMPUS

By ELEANOR NANGLE

WHAT'S a winter sports week-end made of? Mundelein college girls know. Their annual frolic, held recently at Delavan lake, Wisconsin, was tailor made to the college girl tastes in such excursions, with just the right proportions of warmth and of cold, of violent exercise and lovely laziness, plus the oceans of coke and the juke box without which leisure is incomplete.

Shepherded by two obliging mothers, who were chaperons, and Miss Eileen Scanlan, the college physical education director, about 50 Mundelein students, all members of the school's athletic association, took off from Chicago after Friday classes for Lake Lawn, a spacious and beautifully equipped resort which was almost exclusively theirs until Sunday night. Senior Maura Roche, president of the W. A. A., and Sophomore Marianna Peterson, winter sports week-end manager, were students in charge—but perhaps the greatest charm of the expedition was the fact that it was programless. For two whole days each group or girl might, within the well defined limits of the decorum on which Mundelein college insists, move as the spirit dictated.

The weather was wonderful, with sufficient snow and clear skies. There was skating on the solidly frozen lake all day and far into the night—and skating to music, which is especially attractive. There was skiing, on small slopes for the timid or on steep runs for the expert. There was tobogganing, and even a bit of iceboating, tho a recent snow confined it to a glassy cleared rink on the big blue lake.

One could take these conventional winter sports as and when she pleased, and in between times there were always the spontaneous things like snowball fights or sudden spurts of tree climbing or sliding down steep, snowy hills.

Indoor activity had the same delicious—to a school girl—quality of lack of regimentation. A huge fire burned by night and by day in the lounge. Here, as the whim inspired, one girl or a group might toast marshmallows, play cards, or sit silently, painting very private pictures in the dancing flames. There was music; some made their own on the piano or a small organ. Others, by pushing a button, could listen to Bing's plaintive plea against being fenced in. There was pingpong at the table set near the huge view window—and always there was eating, in just the right collegiate combination of sensible meals supplemented by weird spreads.

In other words, there was everything the college girl off on a week-end excursion finds fun. There was no dressing up except for church on Sunday, and there were no class bells to obey.

RELAXATION KEY TO GRACE

By ANTOINETTE DONNELLY

(Copyright: 1945: By News Syndicate Co., Inc.)

WHEN you want to learn about art you visit museums and seek out recognized authorities. So when we personally wished to learn about grace we sought out one who is the epitome of grace, whose every move and gesture is a poetic dream of motion. Her name? Vera Zorina, currently giving to her role of Ariel in "The Tempest" a quality of beauty so hauntingly lovely.

True, her ballet training, her stage career, have been schools in the enviable art of projecting herself with superb movement. But, argues Zorina, a maximum of grace may be adopted without such training. The one great secret of grace, we learned, is found in complete relaxation. Whether it's the hand gesture, the walk, the sitting posture, making a grand entrance, the voice — and Zorina definitely includes the voice as an agent of grace—the beauty trick lies in the relaxed state of nerve, muscle, and being.

Says Zorina: "You walk around your room at home among friends. You're relaxed, natural, and graceful. But you make an entrance thru a strange doorway, descend upon the assembled gathering, and with every step add constriction and more constriction, aided and abetted by a self-consciousness born absolutely of mind on self, and you have awkwardness. You have it wherever and whenever muscles and nerves and person get tied in knots, little knots or big knots."

The trick with hands, then, and one of Zorina's own habitual ones, is to shake hands loose, shake arms loose, and think one's self relaxed from head to toe. Study baby hands, the most precious demonstrators of hand beauty and usage. There's no tightening nor constriction of muscle there. Excess pointing, excess gesticulating, spreading them all over the place, are "awful," in Zorina's opinion.

Yes, the voice is a thing of grace, but only when untensed, well modulated, and low-keyed; also when it carries well chosen words devoid of what our authority chooses to call wild expressions and cheap colloquialisms.

Zorina waxes highly indignant over the common spectacle of hem lines barely covering knees, or not covering them at all, when a woman sits. No legs or knees, however symmetrically constructed, withstand this assault.

Skin-fitting clothes usually lack gracefulness, in Miss Zorina's opinion. There's no grace, charm, or anything nice where the frock is so tight. A little mystery should dictate the let-out seam, fold, or plait.

VERA ZORINA

"Attack and Attack!"

These words, uttered by Gen. George S. Patton before the American invasion of North Africa, appear today for the first time in the upper right corner of page one of the main news section of The Tribune. They will appear there several weeks as a slogan for patriotic Americans.

WHEN American troops stormed ashore on the coast of French Morocco, North Africa, on Nov. 7 and 8, 1942, they were in a fighting mood.

One of the reasons for this lay in the fact that the soldiers, and the sailors as well, who assisted them in the landings, had received by way of their officers a personal fighting slogan from Maj. Gen. George S. Patton, the tank specialist who directed the campaign.

General Patton, it was made public after the Moroccan shores had been secured, had called army and navy officers together upon a pier of an eastern United States seaport, from which the expedition sailed, and had said to them:

"We shall attack and attack until we are exhausted, and then we shall attack again!"

Morocco was taken, and Algeria also, and then the victorious Yanks pushed on, after hard fighting, into Tunisia. There Patton was placed in command of the American 2d corps after it had been mauled by the Germans. With the help of the British, the Americans finally cornered the German and Italian troops in Tunisia, inflicted a decisive defeat upon them, and won all North Africa for the allies.

Patton, elevated to lieutenant general in March, 1943, was one of the allied leaders responsible for the victory in Tunisia. As the commander of the American 7th army he invaded Sicily, which was conquered in 38 days, owing in a large measure to his driving force.

In March, 1944, it was announced from Naples that Patton had been removed from his command of the 7th army to lead an army in the invasion of France. Today he is at the head of the United States 3d army, which is smashing the Germans on the western European front. His secret of success now, as in 1942, is based upon his belief that wars are won by:

—"Love Lyrics," James Whitcomb Riley

✻ Are your hands "O Rarely Soft," or Really Rough as a January Nor'easter?

Don't let Winter make your hands look OLD

"DROWSY zephyrs," did you say, Sir Poet? Wake up!—Mr. Riley—this is January. And a brutally workaday world. Don't you think there sort of ought to be a footnote to your lovely lyric to lovely hands? Something like..."If you want 'em, use Pacquins—quick!"

Because work and weather chap, roughen, redden, ruin a woman's hands... often make them look older than her actual years.

And Pacquins Hand Cream says a fast and scornful "pooh" to work and weather—hands keep their smooth, white, youthful-looking loveliness. Snowy-white, non-greasy, daintily perfumed. As delightful to use as the results are to see. Get Pacquins now!

While the Show Goes On

1 If you want to see what goes on backstage during the playing of Agatha Christie's popular mystery, "Ten Little Indians," you'll have to get by Henry McDonald, stage door man. Mac, who hasn't seen a show for 20 years, used to be an advance agent, loves to talk of old plays, famous stars he knows.

2 In a star dressing room you'll find Robert Warwick, veteran star and the hanging judge of the play, touching up his sideburns.

4 The show is on, and Ben Jones of the sound effects crew rolls buckshot over plywood to get the sound of waves washing against a cliff.

9 And don't be surprised if suddenly Philip Tonge opens a door, looks thru at you from onstage, and exclaims, "What a lovely view!" It's all part of the make-believe you're seeing from backstage.

2 Called into a private session, Alexei finds that its purpose is not to discuss military affairs, but romantic.

3 Next morning Alexei is promoted to colonel and finds himself in difficulties with his fiancee, Anna (Anne Baxter), the empress' lady in waiting.

4 When the empress, discovering the situation, tries to get her to go to the country for a rest, Anna refuses.

5 At left: Alexei has met a group of generals plotting to dethrone Catherine, and joins them. As a start he tosses Catherine into a wastebasket.

6 But the wily chancellor (Charles Coburn) thwarts the rebellion and moves to save both Alexei and Anna from Catherine's wrath.

7 At right: He introduces the new French ambassador, and from the look in his eye Catherine decides that, Alexei or no, she has not lost her romantic appeal.

NO TWO CHILDREN ARE ALIKE

Even Twins Have Different Personalities and Require Different Training

While to outward appearances many children look alike, and twins are often spoken of as "identical," it is a fact that they do have distinctly different mental and emotional characteristics.

"MY BOOK HOUSE" Plan Helps You to Fit Child Training to the INDIVIDUAL NEEDS OF YOUR CHILD

When even those who have made a special study of child training find their ingenuity sorely taxed to determine what is best for each individual child, it is little wonder that a parent who is less experienced finds it so extremely difficult to know what to do for her own child.

"My Book House" is indispensable to parents seeking practical assistance with their child training problems. It is no "cut and dried" formula. The Plan is so complete, so broad in scope that it can be adapted to any child. Beginning preferably in early babyhood it keeps pace with the child's mental and emotional growth. It is a constant source of pleasure for the child . . . a great time-saver for the busy mother. An added feature especially for mothers is the guide book "In Your Hands"—it shows how to make the wisest daily use of the material in the Plan.

For More Than Twenty-five Years Parents Have Successfully Raised Their Children by This Practical, Easy-to-Use Plan of Child Training

You will find that "My Book House" will enable you to bring out the best in your child. Over the years, step by step, you will see your efforts in child training revealed in the development of stronger, finer, traits of character. Your child will be a happier, more alert, better balanced individual, and he will be ready to accept his share of responsibilities as he grows from childhood to boyhood to manhood.

It is far too important to your child to delay his training. Every day you wait is important time lost. Pre-school years constitute the most critical period of life for personality and character building. Learn what "My Book House" Plan of Child Training will do for you and your child. Fill out and return the coupon now or mail your request by penny post-card.

NOW WE'RE PRAISING BRAISING

By MARY MEADE

MEAT is scarcer than it has been at any time since the war began. Choice at the market is limited and many homemakers find themselves carrying home unfamiliar cuts of meat, having not the least idea how to cook them.

If it's an unfamiliar cut you're pretty safe in braising it. Most of the low point cuts of meat are best cooked by braising, which is done by first browning the meat in a little hot fat, then covering closely and cooking at low temperature until tender. A small amount of liquid usually is added.

Braised short ribs with Yorkshire pudding baked in muffin pans and plenty of rich brown gravy are good enough for Sunday dinner, and the meat costs but a red point a pound.

BRAISED SHORT RIBS WITH YORKSHIRE PUDDING

(Serves six)

3 pounds beef short ribs
Flour, salt, pepper
2 tablespoons lard
1 cup water
BATTER:
1 cup flour
½ teaspoon salt
2 eggs
1 cup milk
Hot beef drippings

Cut short ribs into individual squares. Dredge with flour, season, and brown slowly on all sides in hot fat. Drain off ¼ cup hot meat drippings to save for pudding. Add water to short ribs, cover, and simmer 2 to 2½ hours, or until tender, adding more water as needed. To make batter, stir well beaten eggs into sifted flour and salt. Add milk and beat with rotary beater until smooth. Pour hot drippings into six muffin tins. Heat tins in oven and add batter while hot. Bake at 400 degrees for 30 to 40 minutes. Pudding should puff and become crusty. Serve with gravy made from drippings left in pan after meat has cooked.

Quick-frozen baked beans can replace meat in the menu now and then. They're a wonderful help to the working wife who hasn't the time to bake beans from the start. The frozen beans were baked before freezing, with pork and molasses, in the old fashioned way. They need only to be heated thru for serving. Add 2 tablespoons water to the beans and heat gently 25 minutes if frozen, 10 minutes if thawed, stirring several times. Or place in a baking dish and bake in a moderate oven, 375 degrees, for 1 hour if frozen, 30 minutes if thawed. Stir gently several times during baking. Bacon strips may be placed over the beans during the last 15 minutes in the oven, or sliced frankfurters or vienna sausage may be added. Some cooks add a tablespoon of molasses before heating or vary the flavor by adding 2 tablespoons brown sugar mixed with a teaspoon of dry mustard. But the flavor is very good as it comes.

TURN IN WASTE FATS FOR POINTS AND PENNIES

Braised short ribs with brown gravy and muffin-baked Yorkshire pudding are fine enough fare for an Easter dinner.

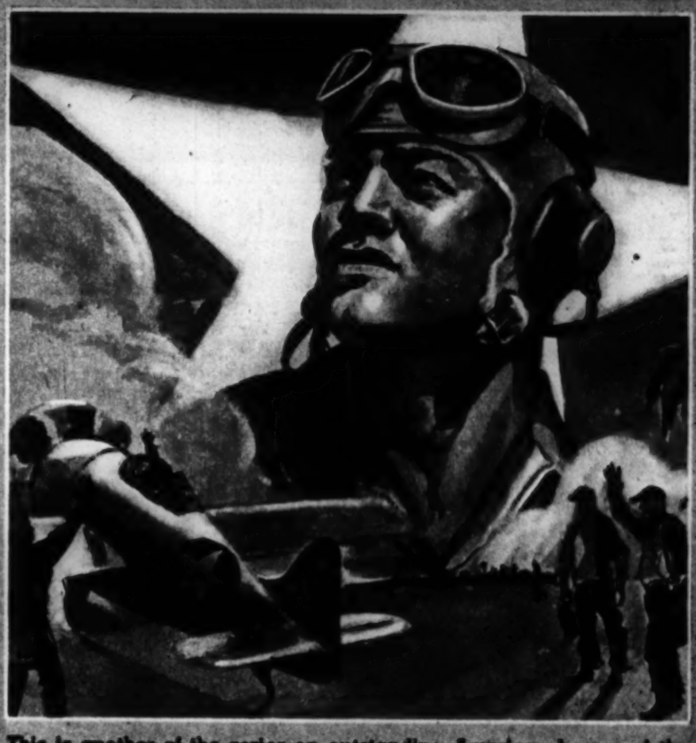
AMERICAN HEROES OF WORLD WAR II.



This is another of the series on outstanding American heroes of the present war. Subjects for the series are chosen from among heroes who have been decorated for valor. Illustrations are by Clara Fargo Thomas and Alexander Vernek.

By JOHN A. MENAUGH

Members of his squadron saw him swoop down on the enemy craft and spray it with bullets. Then they saw the Zero plunge downward, a mass of flames. This 26th victim for Boyington, 31 years old and called Pappy by his comrades because of his "extreme age," tied the record of enemy planes shot down by Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker in the first World war.

If Boyington could have gone on flying, doubtless by this time he would have had more Japanese planes to his credit, but after bagging his 26th victim he disappeared. Just what happened to him is a mystery. There have been rumors that he still is alive. An American scout pilot, some weeks after his disappearance, thought he saw Boyington signaling from the shore of a Japanese-held island. Officially he is "missing in action," but his friends still remember his promise:

"I may disappear with 30 Zekes on my tail, but remember: I'll meet you guys in a San Diego bar six months after the war."

On April 12, 1944, it was announced in Washington that the missing flyer had been awarded the medal of honor (congressional medal), his first decoration.

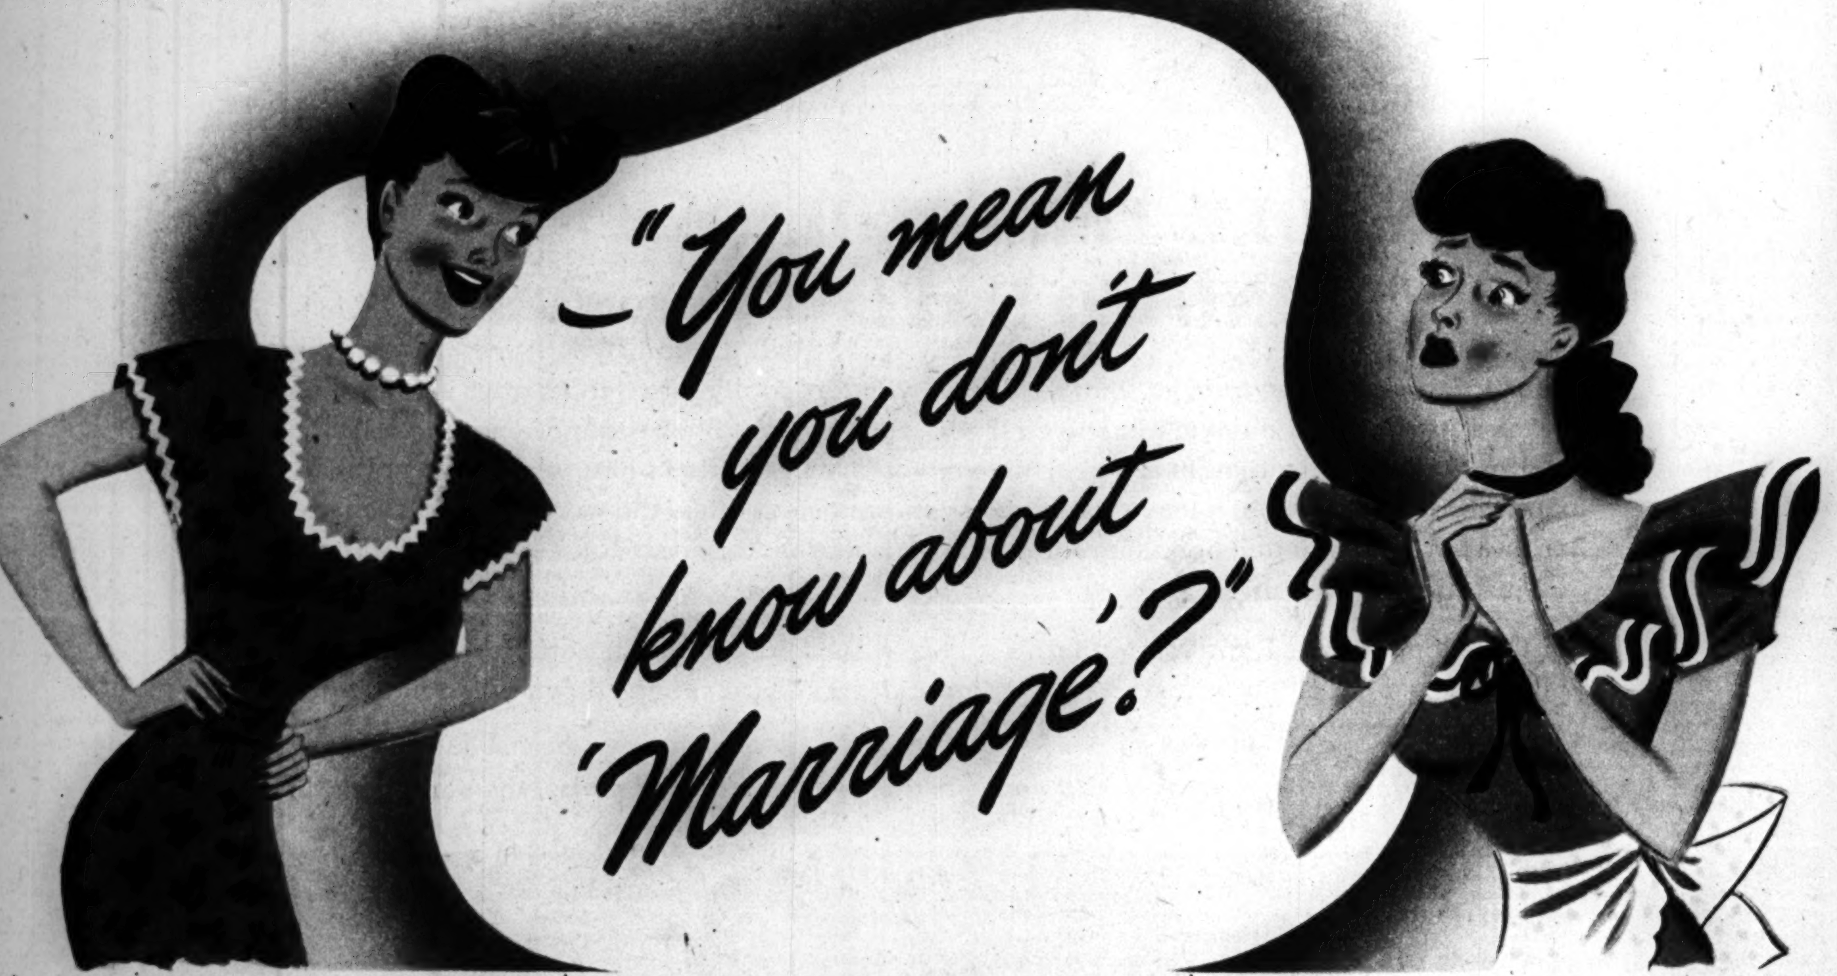
Boyington joined the marine corps in 1935 and resigned in 1941 to go to China as a volunteer with the famous Flying Tigers. In China he shot down six Japanese bombers. He rejoined the marines in November, 1942, and in his first engagement with the Japanese in the Pacific, Sept. 16, 1943, he knocked down five Zeros in eight minutes. This was over the enemy Ballale air field near Bougainville.

Once, while flying over Kahili on Bougainville, Boyington was greeted over his radio by a Japanese speaking English—a Japanese who had hit upon the American flyers' wave length.

"Major Boyington, why don't you come down?" The Japanese asked.

Boyington did descend, thru heavy anti-aircraft fire. He strafed two gun positions and a couple of Zeros on the ground. Then he replied to the inquisitive Japanese:

"All right, you ———! I was down. Now, how about you coming up?"



"You mean you don't know about 'Marriage'?"

The Ladd They Sigh For

SINCE ALAN LADD was given his honorable discharge from the army his studio has been giving him as stiff a routine as any drill sergeant ever did. Already finished and released are "And Now Tomorrow" and "Two Years Before the Mast." Ready for release is "Salty O'Rourke," a race track story. And next on the program is "The Blue Dahlia," by Raymond Chandler.

There is good reason for this rush of work. Mr. Ladd is a very valuable asset. Ever since he made such a romantically sinister success of his role as the Raven in "This Gun for Hire," with Veronica Lake, he has been the sort of hero-villain the gals sigh over. That wasn't his first movie part. He had struggled along in minor bits for a long time until Sue Carol, actress turned agent, heard his radio work and got him a movie role. Sue now is Mrs. Ladd.

Admiral Fitch, now one of the top strategists of the navy, learned to become a naval officer the hard way. He flunked his entrance examinations for Annapolis on his first try. He made the grade by a hair's breadth the next try. Thruout his career he was an eyelash from being dropped for scholarship, altho he was active in sports and was widely admired by his fellow midshipmen.

When his class was graduated he was "anchor man," the last to receive his diploma. He has since leaped over the heads of his class to win the coveted rank of vice admiral and the esteem of the entire navy.

Admiral Fitch on duty in Pacific.

Altho the admiral insists on every man doing his duty, he is no martinet. He insists on a smooth-running organization, and gets it. He is aggressive in seeing that every officer and enlisted man under him receives fair treatment and gets as many comforts as circumstances will allow.

The admiral has a quiet humor and can enjoy a joke on himself, which is uncommon among men who wear the thick gold band on their sleeves. After one hectic night on Guadalcanal, the admiral remarked with some asperity to his mess attendant that the coffee tasted as tho it was made with a dish rag. And the mess attendant, the admiral delights in recounting, replied, "It was."

On another occasion the admiral was embarrassed by his own generosity. After being forced to spend the night on an island, due to weather conditions, as the guest of a native chieftain, he attempted to reward the chief's hospitality by making a gift of his raincoat to the chief's wife. It was found, however, that the raincoat was anything but a fit, because a little chieftain was expected. It lacked something of a fit for the chief. The admiral hastily made his adieu and left the coat. He feels that some day the little chief may grow into it.

Admiral Fitch was born at St. Ignace, Mich., on June 11, 1883. He attended public schools at St. Ignace and St. John's Military academy at Delafield, Wis., before he entered the naval academy in 1902.

He played football and boxed all four years and was on the crew and track team one year. He was commissioned an ensign in 1908, after the two years of service at sea required upon graduation in those days.

At the outbreak of the World war he was a lieutenant. During the war he reached the temporary rank of commander. After the war he returned to his regular grade and did not become a commander until 1921.

On April 6, 1917, he was commanding officer of the U. S. S. Yankton, tender of the fleet flagship. He became aide and fleet athletic officer on the staff of the commander in chief of the Atlantic fleet. From Sept. 28, 1917, to Jan. 4, 1919, he served as gunnery officer aboard the battleship Wyoming, which operated with the 6th battle squadron, British grand fleet.

For his service in the battle of the Coral sea he was awarded the distinguished service medal. The citation reads:

"For exceptionally meritorious and distinguished service to the government of the United States in a position of great responsibility, as commander of the air task group of a task force in the battle of the Coral sea on May 7 and 8, 1942. In distinctive engagements of this battle the skill and outstanding leadership of Rear Admiral Fitch, and the courageous devotion to duty of the units under his command, resulted in the sinking of one enemy carrier, thereby contributing immeasurably to the ultimate success of our forces in these notable engagements."

He was awarded the distinguished flying cross for his work as commander of the air units in the South Pacific and also received a gold star in lieu of a second distinguished service medal for that work.

Fitch was made a captain in 1931. In 1940 he was promoted to rear admiral. On Dec. 30, 1943, the senate confirmed his appointment to the grade of vice admiral to rank from Dec. 28, 1942, when he was designated head of the South Pacific air forces.

The balding, white-haired admiral is now 61 and insists he has still plenty of fight in him. Some of this fight he has passed on to his three sons, all of whom are in the navy. They are Aubrey Wray Jr., a lieutenant (j. g.); Omar Conger, a lieutenant, and John, also a lieutenant. All have seen service in the South Pacific.

MOSTLY ABOUT DOGS

By BOB BECKER

THE GERMAN SHEPHERD is a loyal, understanding, and courageous breed that has been developed from the old herding and farm dogs. It's a versatile breed, equally at home guiding the blind, herding cattle, guarding a war plant, or serving as a messenger or scout dog on a battlefield. For years it's been recognized as such a brilliant breed and so adaptable to guard work that trained specimens have been used by both the military and police forces for different types of work.

First, last, and all the time a real working dog, always enjoying his association with man and eager to work for him, the German shepherd has a firmer place in the world of dogs than ever before in its history. It has earned that place by its splendid services to man.

If the German shepherd did nothing else in this world except act as the guide, companion, and protector of the blind it would have a just claim to fame and the admiration of all of us dog owners. To serve as a leader or guide is spectacular work. To do the job successfully takes a high order of intelligence as well as keen observation of traffic and situations, watchfulness, patience, and even, to a certain degree, judgment. This exercise of judgment comes when a shepherd alone decides it's safe to start his blind owner across a street.

It's no exaggeration to say that few real dog lovers can be exposed to the lovable qualities of the German shepherd and resist them. They are qualities that reveal the dog's loyal heart and the keenness of his mind. He doesn't give affection lightly to form easy friendships. But once his friendship is given, it's for life.

But this magnificent breed is not for the casual owner of dogs. It's one that deserves attention and education, and it's also a breed that needs and thrives on obedience training, which brings out its best qualities as a companion and guard dog.

Known for its work as a guide dog for the blind and as a reliable guard and protector, the German shepherd is today writing a new record of service to man on many battle fronts. This beautiful head study of a shepherd is from a water color by Arthur Floyd Jr., 717 South blvd., Oak Park, Ill.

You can see why
Bayer Aspirin so swiftly
eases ordinary headaches,
neuritic, neuralgic pain!

WHY 2-SECOND
DISINTEGRATING ACTION
MEANS QUICK PAIN RELIEF!

3 STEPS INSTEAD OF ONE

give Bayer Aspirin its astonishing 2-second
disintegrating action!

Although aspirin powder can be purchased ready-made from outside suppliers, every grain of aspirin that goes into a Bayer tablet is made in Bayer's own laboratories. And, although normal size tablets could be made from aspirin powder in its original state, critical Bayer scientists take three steps instead of only one:

1. Bayer makes its own aspirin powder, tests it, compresses it into giant tablets (like the one above) 18 times larger than normal.
2. These "giants" are crushed—reduced again to powder—which is passed through an extremely fine screen.
3. After the "binder" is added the familiar Bayer tablets bearing the famous cross are made.

This painstaking 3-way operation is responsible for Bayer Aspirin's astonishingly fast disintegrating action—an action so swift Bayer Aspirin starts working almost the instant you take it!

There's no discounting the importance of swift relief when you're suffering from a headache—or the pains of neuritis or neuralgia. When you use Bayer Aspirin, you can see how amazingly fast it starts going to work by dropping one in a glass of water. Within two seconds it will begin to disintegrate. It does the same in your stomach—and that's why you get relief in such a remarkable hurry.

Also important is reliable relief. And Bayer Aspirin's unmatched record—over 40 years of successful use by millions of people—gives you plenty of assurance on that score. So buy wisely—always be sure to ask for genuine Bayer Aspirin—not just for "aspirin" alone.

Always ask for Genuine

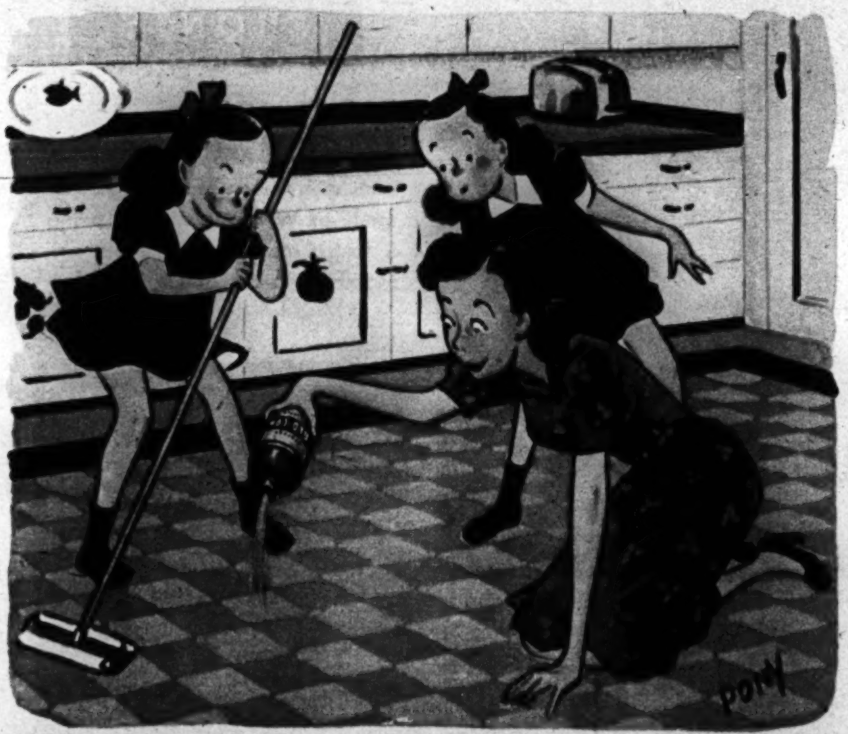
Magical, isn't it, the way some floors look so new all the time? And the secret? Why, Johnson's Self-Polishing Glo-Coat! It keeps the lovely colors of linoleum as bright and fresh as new! Also grand for rubber tile, asphalt, painted or varnished wood floors. Glo-Coat is such wonderful protection, floors just last and last! Actual wear tests show that regular care with Glo-Coat makes linoleum wear 6 to 10 times longer.



Apply—let dry! That's all there is to it! You just pour Johnson's Self-Polishing Glo-Coat on the clean floor, spread it around, and walk away! Come back in 20 minutes and see what a lovely shining floor you have . . . without rubbing or buffing!

And then—oh my! Glo-Coat makes floors stay gleaming, too! Spilled things wipe up in jiffy time . . . without leaving a trace on the shining surface. Glo-Coat saves you work, money and time . . . time you can use for helpful war work.

New!

"The way you miss silk stockings

THAT'S HOW I MISS dreft!"

...dreft works wonders no soap can do for silks, woolens, dishes!

"I miss dreft for dishes

IT MAKES EVEN GLASSES SHINE WITHOUT WIPING!"

IT'S TRUE! . . . No soap ever made can perform the dishwashing miracles that Dreft can! It makes dishes positively gleam without wiping. For Dreft leaves no streaks or cloudiness the way soaps do. Gets even glasses so clean they sparkle—without touching a towel to them!

UNCLE SAM COMES FIRST

Special materials employed in making Dreft are now being used by Uncle Sam. Of course we have been glad to cooperate in this vital emergency—glad to lend every aid to today's big effort. That is why we have suspended the making of Dreft temporarily—and why Dreft very likely is not on your grocer's shelves at present.

For Dreft is different from soap—made from different materials. When such materials were suddenly needed for the war effort, Dreft gladly stepped aside. We do not know how much longer Dreft will not be available, so please understand. Soon, we hope, Dreft will again be back on your grocer's shelves. Watch for it.

"AND I miss dreft for lingerie

IT KEEPS COLORS SO MUCH FRESHER THAN SOAP!"

IT'S TRUE! . . . Dreft is so gentle to wash colors—it's as non-alkaline as pure drinking water. Keeps colors fresh far longer than finest soap flakes. Dreft leaves none of the deposits all soaps leave. Stockings washed with Dreft look so much fresher—precious new woolens wash softer and fluffier than with any soap you've ever used.

WORKS MIRACLES NO SOAP COULD EVER DO!

No soap gives you the wonderful benefits Dreft gives. Special ingredients which went into Dreft are helping Uncle Sam and therefore Dreft is not available for the time being. But watch for its return . . . watch for Dreft!

IT TAKES A WOMAN

As every woman knows it's hard to get men to mend things around the house, especially anything that helps to make the place pretty and attractive. The Lady of Fashion knows that very well, and if it wasn't for her constant efforts the Teenie Weenie village would soon have a run down at the heels appearance.

"Goodness me!" she says, "I don't want to be always nagging, but it's the only way you can get things done, for the men never have a thought about the house other than their meals."

There was the time when one of the front porch posts of the shoe house was knocked off. It took three weeks of pointed reminders, tears, and a sitdown strike to get it replaced. The post had been made from a cedar lead pencil. The glue which held the pencil together had softened in the weather and when it was accidentally bumped one day it fell apart. The Old Soldier with a wooden leg propped up the porch with a stick, and there it remained for a week, with the porch spouting lying across the toe of the shoe, before the Lady of Fashion mentioned that a new post would help the appearance of the place.

Nothing happened for another week and then the little lady shed a few tears. That put the men in motion, but with just enough energy to find another lead pencil, which lay for another week in front of the house, and then the Lady of Fashion had an idea. She always did the cooking on the Cook's day off. When the men came down to breakfast that morning there wasn't any warm breakfast awaiting them.

"You men don't get a bite to eat until you have put up that porch post," the Lady of Fashion told them.

Now Teenie Weenie men are fond of their meals, and especially their breakfasts, and so they lost little time in getting to work. They brought out their tiny tools, cut the lead pencil to the right size with their Teenie Weenie crosscut saw. and had the post in place in remarkably short time. Then the Lady of Fashion served them with a wonderful breakfast of tiny muffins, frog meat sausage, and baked raisin with gooseberry sauce.

For two more weeks the new post remained unpainted, and when the Lady of Fashion could not get the men to do the work, she painted it herself.

"It takes a woman to keep things in order," said the General, admiringly, when the new post had been painted white to match the other one.

YOU CAN SEE THE DIFFERENCE!

Tests show it...Millions know it!

No matter what leading tooth powder you are using now . . . Pepsodent Tooth Powder with Irium will make your teeth brighter!

Pepsodent makes this unqualified promise to you, without fear of contradiction . . . because test after test proves: Pepsodent Powder with Irium makes teeth far brighter.

Tests by impartial laboratories . . . tests with photoelectric devices . . . tests by identical twins . . . by dental clinics, by dentists themselves . . . produced overwhelming evidence for this one unshakable fact:

Pepsodent Powder produces a lustre on teeth twice as bright as the average of all other leading brands . . . brighter than any of them—bar none!

Change to Pepsodent Powder—the only powder containing Irium, the exclusive cleansing ingredient. Use it twice a day . . . and see it make your teeth brighter!

You can see the difference in one week!

How dentistry can improve a child's profile!

This girl's undershot chin was spoiling her looks. Her lower teeth extended far beyond the uppers . . . and could not meet properly. However, with modern dental treatments it was possible to correct her undershot chin . . . bring her teeth and jaw back into normal position and improve her looks.

The important point is . . . her parents consulted a dentist early . . . while features were forming and correction was still possible. Watch your child's teeth carefully . . . especially during the growing years. Remember your child's looks and personality throughout life will be influenced by the early care the teeth get.

So take your child to the dentist regularly . . . and insist upon the habit of careful daily brushing with Pepsodent Powder to keep teeth shining brighter.

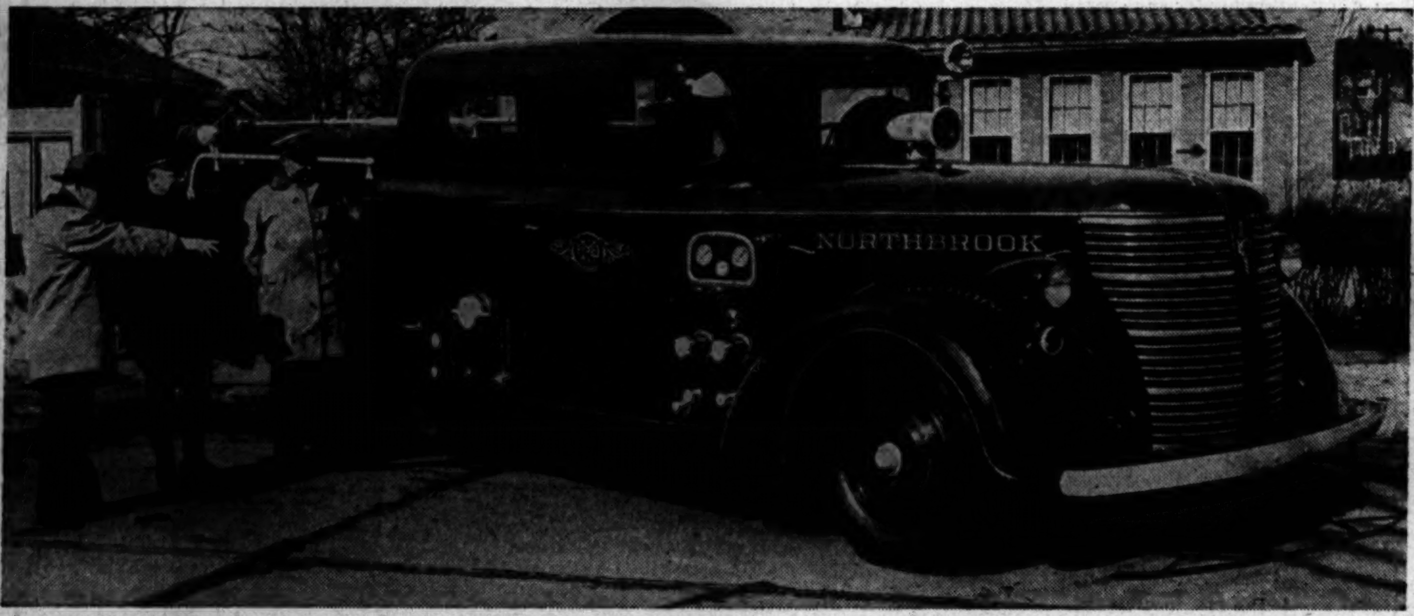
Northbrook Volunteer Firemen Are Ready to Meet Emergency



Mayor S. M. Campbell, Police Chief Donald Clavey, and Fire Chief Herman Lorenz inspect the latest piece of fire fighting equipment bought for the volunteer fire department of Northbrook. The truck has a 750 gallon pump, 1,200 feet of hose, and an inhalator. The department contributed $1,500 and a $10,000 bond issue was floated to complete the purchase price.

Assistant Chief Werhane and Fireman Swanson are at the cab of the truck bought two years ago for use in rural areas. A used chassis was purchased and firemen mounted a 1,500 gallon water tank and 500 gallon pump on it. The department is a member of the Illinois Firemen's association, Cook County Firemen's association, and the National Fire Protection association.

FIRE FIGHTERS GET NEW TRUCK IN NORTHBROOK

Chief Lorenz Lauds Volunteers.

Older even than the village of Northbrook is its volunteer fire department, organized in 1901 with 44 members, to secure, as the record plainly states, "some sort of fire protection for the community."

Today Fire Chief Herman Lorenz, whose grandfather was first president of the department, believes his organization is one of the best equipped of any volunteer group along the north shore. The department lists 49 members, but 19 are in service and one is reported missing in action. The organization has four fire trucks and incidental equipment.

Department Buys Truck.

Latest purchase of the department is a 30 foot truck, equipped with 1,200 feet of hose, a 750 gallon pumper, and an inhalator. Altho application for priority to buy the truck was made two years ago, its purchase was permitted only recently. "We've had money in the bank two years to buy it," Lorenz said. The department contributed $1,500, which it raised by sponsoring entertainments. A $10,000 bond issue also was floated to complete the purchase price.

Other equipment includes a truck purchased in 1924, with a 500 gallon pump and an 85 gallon water tank, and a used truck bought two years ago to make runs to rural areas. The department installed a 1,500 gallon tank and a 500 gallon pump on the latter. An OCD truck with a 500 gallon pump completes the equipment.

Minor additional installations on the new truck and the training of 10 firemen as an inhalator squad also are planned, Chief Lorenz declared. "We realized the need of an inhalator about a year ago when two men were injured by lightning, and later when a woman almost suffocated from gas fumes," he said.

Chicago Foreman Helps.

John Fligg, member of Chicago fire department at 509 Chicago av., who has taught fire fighting to the Northbrook men for the last five years, has promised to teach them how to use an inhalator. "Fligg has been a big help to us," the chief declared.

The department is housed in the city hall, which was built in 1927 in the center of the village. Two years ago a fire siren was placed atop the building.

The village and the fire department have developed on an equal scale, said Arthur Therrian, resident of the community since 1893, an honorary member of the department and president of the village board from 1921 to 1925.

Village Organized in 1901.

Late in 1901 the community and neighboring Bach town were incorporated under the name of Scher-

VOLUNTEERS BUY NEW FIRE TRUCK FOR NORTHBROOK

Chief Lorenz Is Proud of Men, Equipment.

merville to obtain sidewalks and telephones. The village was named for a farmer named Schermer, who owned land near-by. Population was approximately 300, and the first president was Louis Voltz, who served one year. Herman Lorenz, grandfather of the present fire chief, succeeded him and served until 1921.

"Telephones were installed in 1903," Therrian recalled, "and were used to sound fire alarms until the siren was bought. Fires were reported to the operator, who kept a list of volunteer firemen and would notify them. Before 1903 a dinner gong was set up above the blacksmith shop where the fire equipment was kept. Whoever wished to report a fire would ring the gong.

"The blacksmith shop was owned by Lorenz. At first it was a one story frame building, but after the village was incorporated he added a second story and it became a combination village hall and wagon shop."

Charter Member Still Lives.

First officers of the fire department were Herman Lorenz, president; Edward Landwehr, secretary; George Kiest, treasurer; J. F. Bernhardt, chief; Albert Blank, foreman; Norman Carstensen, assistant foreman; John Maischaider, hose captain, and John Meier and Otto Funke, pipemen.

Women occasionally helped man the hand pump in the early days, Therrian said, but the group never operated as a bucket brigade, probably because the first equipment was bought soon after the department was organized. A used, horse drawn hand pump and 300 feet of hose were bought for approximately $350, money for which was donated. This equipment and a light truck were sold for $150 in 1924, when the new pump was bought.

The village name was changed to Northbrook in 1922 because "a woman who liked to shop in the loop couldn't stand being teased about having packages sent to a place named Schermerville," Therrian said. "She enlisted the aid of a civic group and a petition to change the name was circulated. A contest was held to choose a name, and after six months the change was made legal. Northbrook was chosen because the north branch of the Chicago river runs thru the village." The present population of the village is 2,000.

More Improvements in 1924.

The year 1924 saw the installation of paved streets and sewers and the straightening of the north branch of the river, as well as the purchase of a new fire truck, money for which was raised by a dance. In the same year the fire department was reorganized with a charter from the village.

Last year Northbrook firemen answered 54 calls, Chief Lorenz said. The department's regular territory includes a belt two miles wide around the village, but the men have been called to fires as far as 12 miles distant. Last fall they helped fight a $100,000 fire in the National Brick company in Deerfield.

List Department Heads.

Other officers include: Donald Werhane, assistant chief; William Bohannon, hose captain; Walter Schmidt, lieutenant; Donald Porth, president; Victor Havel, secretary; and Robert Landwehr, nephew of the charter member, treasurer. Lorenz became chief two years ago when Lowell Mueller went to the South Pacific with the Seabees. The present chief, who is also a bus driver for St. Norbert's school, Northbrook, has been a volunteer fireman 15 years.

Bohannon recently received a medical discharge after 18 months in the South Pacific. John Heynie, a member of the department, has been reported missing in action in the European theater.

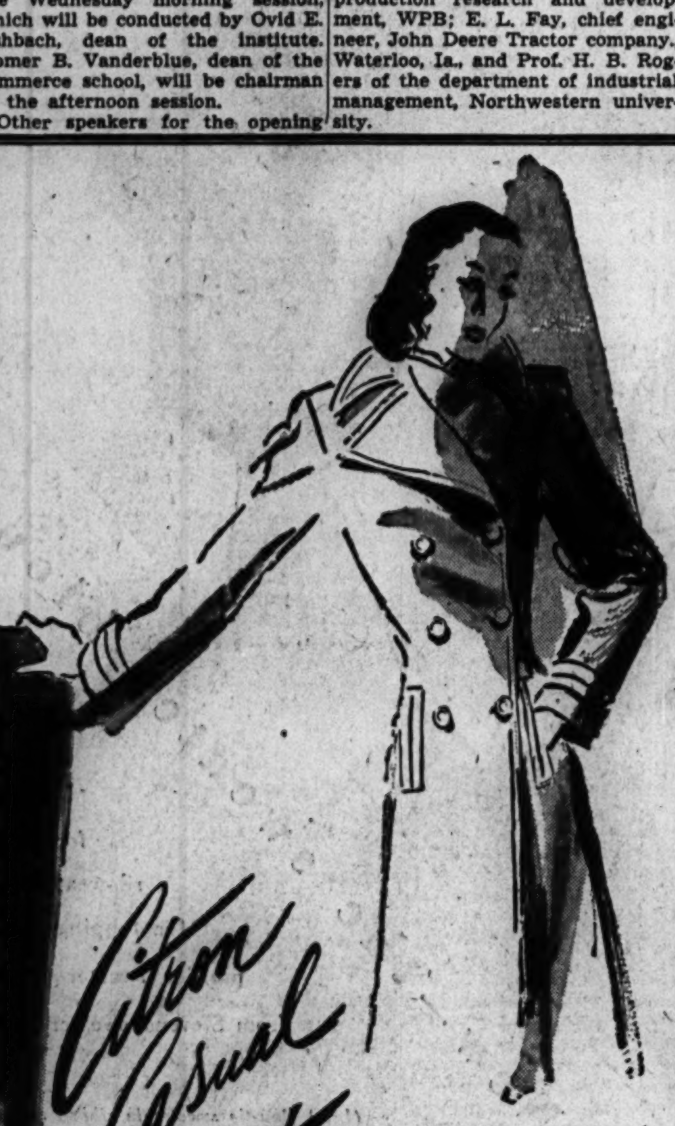
ALEX ZAMUDIO HEARS BROTHER IS RELEASED FROM LUZON PRISON

Adolph Zamudio.

"See you soon!" was the cheery closing to the first letter received by Alex Zamudio, 7451 N. Maplewood av., an employe of THE TRIBUNE's art department, from his brother, Adolph, in more than three years. Dated Feb. 6, the note was written after Adolph's release from Santo Tomas prison on Luzon.

Adolph went to Manila in 1939 as representative of a medical supplies company and was taken prisoner in December, 1941. His wife and two children live in Witt, Ill.

The letter said, in part: "At last I am free! I am happy to tell you, that aside from some ailments due to malnutrition, for we were being slowly starved to death, I am okay. Now that Uncle Sam is here we are again eating well and in a while I will have fully recovered my health, weight, and old energy."



As golden as a jonquil, and equally delicious in texture is this casual wool coat of fine Melton cloth. Simple, but enormously effective. Beautiful over black or gray now, white later on. Matching buttons. Also in red, navy or black. $110.00.

IROQUOIS FIRE FIGHTER CLOSES HIS LONG CAREER

Fire Marshal Robert B. Wallace of the 3d division, who retired last month at 63 after nearly half a century of service, was one of the first fire fighters to reach the scene of Chicago's costly Iroquois theater fire on Dec. 30, 1903.

His memories of the catastrophe are vague. He had joined an insurance patrol on March 5 of the same year. Of the fire which cost more than 600 lives he remembers chiefly his struggle to help persons out of the building and removing bodies.

Having served eight years with the patrol, Wallace joined the city fire department Jan. 1, 1911, and was assigned to hook and ladder company No. 4 at 22d st. and Wentworth av. He became a lieutenant June 5, 1918, while assigned to the station at North and Hudson avs. He was promoted to captain Oct. 1, 1936, and made battalion chief July 1, 1937. His appointment as a fire marshal took place Oct. 1, 1943.

With his retirement recently, Wallace now has plenty of time for fishing and travel. Indulgence of his favorite pasttimes however, will have to await the end of the war, and the lifting of the travel ban, Wallace said. His favorite fishing streams are located in northern Wisconsin.

Born in Canada, Wallace was brought to Chicago when 10. He was educated in the public schools on the west side, taking his job with the fire insurance patrol at the age of 21. Wallace resides with his wife at 3535 Wilton st. They have one son, Pvt. Gordon Wallace, serving as a wire chief in the signal corps at Camp Crowder, Mo.

MORTON GROVE MISS TOPS, SAY SINGING SAILORS

She Is Their Favorite for a Serenade.

Hildegaard Schottleutner, 18, of Morton Grove, must have been a beautiful baby, because, according to the unanimous vote of the 100 members of the glee club at the naval training station in Gulfport, Miss., she is mighty pretty to look at now.

Hildegaard, radio and dramatic student, recently was chosen by the blue jackets as the girl they would like best of all to serenade each day of their lives. As for Hildegaard, she would like to be "everybody's theme song," but nobody's girl until she has had a career on the stage. At present she is attending the Barnum school of expression on a scholarship which she won in competition with students from 15 city schools last June.

Hildegaard Schlottleutner.

When a scroll bearing the signatures of the members of the Glee club arrived in her morning mail, Hildegaard was mystified. She had no idea who could have entered her picture in the contest. "Then," she said, "I read the letter accompanying the piece, and remembered how it happened."

"While clerking in the local five and dime, during senior year at Niles Township High school, the manager of the store was John Andersen. He is assigned as chaplain's assitant at Gulfport. He had entered a picture I had given to him and his wife . . . and now this has happened."

Tho the scroll was accompanied by a picture of all the men who had voted for her, Hildegaard still says she wants a theatrical career, has since she was 3 when she made her debut in "The Princess Who Never Smiled."

RADIO VESSEL APACHE RELAYS M'ARTHUR VOICE

Take Measures to Check Jap Jamming.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

A coast to coast audience listened in a few evenings ago when Gen. MacArthur turned the civilian government back to the Philippines and again last Sunday on the Army hour when he participated in ceremonies raising the American flag on the battered pole at Corregidor.

On the first broadcast Gen. MacArthur spoke from the presidential palace. Elaborate preparations were made to assure the success of the broadcast and as a result Gen. MacArthur's resonant voice came thru clear and strong.

Act to Block Jamming.

For 24 hours preceding the ceremonies, troops guarded land telephone and power lines as a precaution against Japanese cutting the lines. To lessen the possibility of jamming by the Japs, American networks were not allowed to make any announcement of the broadcast until a half hour before it started.

A signal corps mobile unit also was employed which shortwaved the ceremonies to the Apache, the radio vessel which had moved into Lingayen gulf at the beginning of the Luzon operations. Thru this ship more than half a million words of press copy had already been shortwaved back to the United States.

On the first MacArthur broadcast Press Wireless used its transmitter for voice and beamed his words both to Los Angeles and to San Francisco so that a choice could be made of the better circuit.

Schechter in Charge.

At the time of the invasion of Luzon a broadcasting unit mounted on a two and a half ton truck drove out onto the beach from a landing ship. Broadcasts were short waved back to the Apache, which relayed them on to their destination.

Representing the four major networks on Luzon are Don Bell for Mutual [Royal Arch Gunnison has returned to the United States]; George Folster of NBC; William J. Dunn, CBS, and Arthur Feldman of the Blue.

B'NAI ZION RABBI, FOUNDER QUITS AFTER 40 YEARS

Dr. Lassen Planning to Write Book.

An ambition to find time for study and literary pursuits before midnight is one reason for the retirement of Dr. A. L. Lassen, rabbi of B'nai Zion congregation, 1447 Pratt blvd. Having produced two books in his leisure time, generally post-curfew, Dr. Lassen hopes to do a psychological tract—but during day time hours.

He also stated that he had planned to leave the rabbinate after 40 years of service, that his retirement was four years overdue. Dr. Lassen's first assignment came in 1901 when he was named rabbi of Evansville, Ind., synagog. With the election last week of Henry Fisher of Rochester, N. Y., as rabbi of B'nai Zion, Dr. Lassen has become rabbi emeritus of the congregation. He will occupy his pulpit until the arrival of Rabbi Fisher in midsummer.

Founder of B'nai Zion.

Dr. Lassen, who founded the B'nai Zion congregation, was called to his post in 1919 to establish a synagog in Rogers Park. The first members, 14 families, met in a chapel at 1715 Lunt av., purchased from the Church of St. Paul by the Lake. Here he inaugurated the first synagog based upon conservative Judaism in the middle west. He since has been instrumental in organizing 10 conservative congregations in Chicago.

The congregation worshiped in the little synagog on Lunt av. until erection of the new edifice on Pratt blvd. in 1928. The structure cost a quarter million dollars, and then was ample for housing the activities of the congregation of 400 families.

Plan Educational Centers.

Plans have been tentatively drawn for a $400,000 educational and recreational center to be built on Pratt blvd. and Greenview av. after the war.

During his quarter century of service at B'nai Zion, Dr. Lassen has found time for religious and civic affairs outside his parish circle. He helped organize the Round Table of Christians and Jews, served 18 years as president of the Council of Conservative Rabbis, and is past president of Rabbinical Society of America. He is a charter member of the Kiwanis club of Rogers Park and has served on the Community Chest and various other community committees.

Born in Russia.

Dr. Lassen was born in Russia, where he was educated in rabbinical ritual until 15. He then was sent to Germany to complete his studies. While a student of voice at the conservatory of Berlin, he rejected an opportunity for an operatic career.

Dr. Lassen came to this country in 1901 and was assigned to the Indiana post. He received a master of arts degree from Northwestern university and holds a doctorate of Hebrew literature and Jewish theology from the Jewish Theological seminary, New York City.

Director from East.

Rabbi Fisher, his successor, has been rabbi of Temple Beth El, Rochester, N. Y., since 1939, and has served as director of placement for the Jewish Theological seminary. He formerly was an officer of the executive committee of the Rabbinical Assembly of America.

Rabbi Fisher was graduated from Jewish Theological seminary in 1928. He also holds degrees from the College of the City of New York, Columbia university, and the teacher's institute of the Jewish seminary.

Women of Moose.

The Chicago chapter, Women of the Moose, will give an officer's night program at 8 p. m. Friday in the hall at 1016 N. Dearborn st.

This WEEK in the GARDEN

Monday, March 12.

Transplant all seedlings into flats or pots just as soon as they can be handled. Seedlings left in the seed box are likely to grow too large for quick rooting in the soil.

Use proper soil [half sand and loam or half peat and sand], a not too heavy covering, and use care when watering so the seeds are not washed away or the soil piled up over them. Shade during direct sunshine.

Tuesday, March 13.

It is not too late to buy tubers of the highly colored fancy leaved caladiums to obtain a good plant for use in a shady spot in the garden. Start by placing just beneath the surface in a pot of sandy soil and when well above ground shift to a pot according to the size of the plant—a 4 inch pot is a fair size for most started plants.

Wednesday, March 14.

The hardy annuals can be sown directly in the open ground as early as the soil can be worked. These consist of such desirable kinds as the calendula, petunia, nigella, four o'clock, sweet peas, morning glory, California poppy, Shirley poppy, and many others.

Thursday, March 15.

Sweet peas can be sown now and the soil should be well enriched. Make a shallow trench and apply well decayed manure or commercial fertilizer. Sow the seeds carefully and good growth should be obtained. As the plants grow the trench can be filled around the base.

Friday, March 16.

Order all seeds now to avoid substitutions. Just what variety to buy is largely a matter of personal choice, altho some varieties are better for the home gardener who wants vegetables for the table gathered directly from his own garden.

Saturday, March 17.

Prepared in coöperation with Garfield Park conservatory.

RADIO VESSEL APACHE RELAYS M'ARTHUR VOICE

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

A coast to coast audience listened in a few evenings ago when Gen. MacArthur turned the civilian government back to the Philippines and again last Sunday on the Army hour when he participated in ceremonies raising the American flag on the battered pole at Corregidor.

On the first broadcast Gen. MacArthur spoke from the presidential palace. Elaborate preparations were made to assure the success of the broadcast and as a result Gen. MacArthur's resonant voice came thru clear and strong.

Act to Block Jamming.

For 24 hours preceding the ceremonies, troops guarded land telephone and power lines as a precaution against Japanese cutting the lines. To lessen the possibility of jamming by the Japs, American networks were not allowed to make any announcement of the broadcast until a half hour before it started.

A signal corps mobile unit also was employed which shortwaved the ceremonies to the Apache, the radio vessel which had moved into Lingayen gulf at the beginning of the Luzon operations. Thru this ship more than half a million words of press copy had already been shortwaved back to the United States.

On the first MacArthur broadcast Press Wireless used its transmitter for voice and beamed his words both to Los Angeles and to San Francisco so that a choice could be made of the better circuit.

Schechter in Charge.

At the time of the invasion of Luzon a broadcasting unit mounted on a two and a half ton truck drove out onto the beach from a landing ship. Broadcasts were short waved back to the Apache, which relayed them on to their destination.

Representing the four major networks on Luzon are Don Bell for Mutual [Royal Arch Gunnison has returned to the United States]; George Folster of NBC; William J. Dunn, CBS, and Arthur Feldman of the Blue.

Rosecrance, professor of education at Northwestern university will participate in the program.

William Primrose Is NBC Symphony Soloist

As soloist on the NBC Symphony orchestra hour over WMAQ-NBC at 4 p. m. today, William Primrose, viola artist, will play Walton's Concerto for Viola and Orchestra. The orchestra will be directed by Malcolm Sargent, who, with this broadcast, concludes a four week engagement as guest conductor. BITS OF IRELAND COME TO REST IN GAELIC HOME

Story with Each Lends Nostalgic Touch.

BY RAY ELLIS.

A little bit of Ireland may be found in the south side home of Mrs. Daniel McGrath, where Gaelic objects of art, culture, and craftsmanship have come to rest, many thousands of miles from their homeland.

Fragile, lustrous Belleek, delicate laces and fine linens, sturdy woolen blankets, and paintings and etchings of Erin in her collection strike a nostalgic note this St. Patrick's week.

Widow of Irish Consul.

No collector of objects merely for their external beauty, Mrs. McGrath has a love for her collection which comes naturally. She is the widow of Daniel McGrath, Irish consul in Chicago from 1933 until his death in 1942, and the daughter of the late Michael O'Gallagher, who came to Chicago from County Mayo in 1888 and was noted for his knowledge of Irish lore.

She also is a descendant of Charles O'Gallagher, known as Cahair Ban or Charles the Fairhaired, who met the French when they landed in Killalai in Mayo in 1798 to aid the Irish in their perpetual fight against the English.

Visits Ireland Twice.

Nor was her collection acquired in local shops, much of it having been obtained on two trips to Ireland in 1936 and 1939 to visit relatives.

A Belleek coffee pot, cream pitcher, sugar bowl, and a dozen demitasse cups, decorated with a pattern from the Book of Kells serves as a constant reminder of the origin of that work of art which has been called "the most beautiful book in the world."

The traditional shamrock is ever present in another Belleek tea set and tea cozy made by her sister-in-law.

Waterford glass more than 100 years old, fine linens and delicate appliqued Carrickmacross, and Limerick laces also recall the artisanry of the Irish.

Has Belleek Bowl.

Another side of Irish life is reflected in a Belleek bowl given Mrs. McGrath by a sister of Kevin Barry, young Irish patriot executed by the British in 1921. It brings to mind tales Mrs. McGrath heard at her father's knee of the trials of her ancestor O'Gallagher when the French assistance failed to succeed. Another ancestor, the collector remarked, was tried for his part in the uprising after he was dead.

Her father died March 18, 1938. A student of ancient, middle, and modern Gaelic he taught occasionally at De Paul university and conducted classes at the Gaelic society. Gaelic was the only language spoken in his home.

Sons to Learn Gaelic.

Mrs. McGrath's two sons, Donal, 9, and Michael, 7, who attend St. Patrick's academy in Momence, Ill., so far have evaded their Gaelic lessons, but next summer will put an end to that, their mother has promised.

In honor of St. Patrick's day Mrs. McGrath will introduce recordings of Irish folk songs and music, which she owns, at 2 p. m. Saturday at the public library. She also will give some Irish readings.

Corporal's Bride

CORP. AND MRS. B. J. DUFFY.

Following their recent marriage Corp. and Mrs. Bernard J. Duffy are residing at 6724 Cornell av. The bride is the former Mary Jane Ryan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John J. Ryan, 7640 Blackstone av. She is a graduate of Acquinas Dominican High school. Corp. Duffy, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard J. Duffy, 9823 Avenue L, is assigned to the Chicago military police.

This WEEK in the GARDEN

Monday, March 12.

Transplant all seedlings into flats or pots just as soon as they can be handled. Seedlings left in the seed box are likely to grow too large for quick rooting in the soil.

Use proper soil [half sand and loam or half peat and sand], a not too heavy covering, and use care when watering so the seeds are not washed away or the soil piled up over them. Shade during direct sunshine.

Tuesday, March 13.

It is not too late to buy tubers of the highly colored fancy leaved caladiums to obtain a good plant for use in a shady spot in the garden. Start by placing just beneath the surface in a pot of sandy soil and when well above ground shift to a pot according to the size of the plant—a 4 inch pot is a fair size for most started plants.

As soon as the ground is warm and does not stick to the blade of the spade begin spading a small section for such vegetables as spinach, lettuce, onion sets, and radishes. Do not sow more than can be economically used.

Wednesday, March 14.

The hardy annuals can be sown directly in the open ground as early as the soil can be worked. These consist of such desirable kinds as the calendula, petunia, nigella, four o'clock, sweet peas, morning glory, California poppy, Shirley poppy, and many others.

Examine the perrenial border to see if the mulching material is too heavy, for often the plants may be smothered. By gently disturbing the material or lifting a part of it for aeration, or by removing a part, the perrenials will receive proper attention.

Thursday, March 15.

Sweet peas can be sown now and the soil should be well enriched. Make a shallow trench and apply well decayed manure or commercial fertilizer. Sow the seeds carefully and good growth should be obtained. As the plants grow the trench can be filled around the base.

Sweet peas are excellent for cutting—in fact, the flowers must be cut to prevent seed from forming, for if it does the flowering period will be much shortened. Constant care must be given to control attacks by aphids.

Friday, March 16.

Order all seeds now to avoid substitutions. Just what variety to buy is largely a matter of personal choice, altho some varieties are better for the home gardener who wants vegetables for the table gathered directly from his own garden.

Growing corn, potatoes, and other crops that take a considerable amount of space should be avoided, and some crops are not adapted to the restricted and congested area of the city.

Saturday, March 17.

Prepared in coöperation with Garfield Park conservatory.

OLD ERIN DAYS TO LIVE AGAIN ON WEST SIDE

Irish Groups Plan Annual Parties.

BY AGNES LYNCH.

Traditional Gaelic customs will be revived by many west side groups on Saturday as they celebrate the feast of Ireland's most popular saint. Honoring St. Patrick, a corned beef and cabbage supper will be given under the auspices of St. Patrick academy Mothers' club from 5 to 7 p. m. in the school cafeteria, 122 S. Des Plaines st.

Entertainers will include Pat Roach and his Irish dancers, as well as Mrs. John Cribien and Tom Sullivan, who will sing Irish songs.

Committee in Charge.

Mrs. Otto Neurauter, chairman, will be assisted by the following members of the arrangements committee: Mrs. Raymond Bougert, Mrs. George Bomber, Mrs. Alex Brown, Mrs. John Clyne, Mrs. Joseph Cosgrove, Mrs. Felix Connor, Mrs. Frank Campbell, Mrs. Frank Galvin, Mrs. Thomas Hayes, Mrs. Richard Keating, Mrs. John Lowery, Mrs. Frank Murphy, Mrs. Christ Maerz, Mrs. John O'Brien, Mrs. Steven O'Neil, Mrs. Leo Patterson, Mrs. James Pocius, Mrs. Joseph Walsh, and Mrs. John Scully.

West siders of Irish ancestry will also gather at McEnery's halls, 4039 Madison st., where the Ulster Irish Liberty legion will hold a St. Patrick's day reception and dance. The second floor of the hall will be reserved for Irish dancing, while the third floor will be devoted to modern steps. Exhibitions of Irish dancing will be given in both halls by experts in the jig, reel, and hornpipe.

Seek Reunion of Ireland.

John McGinnis is president of the league whose purpose is "to aid the movement for the reunion of Ireland—north and south." The committee in charge of arrangements for Saturday's dance includes William H. Ray, chairman, and Mrs. Ray; Mr. and Mrs. Michael McLaughlin, Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Riley, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel McKillop, Mr. and Mrs. John Kerr, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Gillespie, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph McGlynn, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur McGinnis.

Others include: Mr. and Mrs. Hugh McElroy, Mr. and Mrs. James De Largy, Mr. and Mrs. John Brennan, Mr. and Mrs. Tim Brennan, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Wetherall, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel McLaughlin, Mr. and Mrs. John McLory, Mr. and Mrs. Michael Bresnahan, Mrs. John O'Neill, Mrs. Agnes McLaughlin, Miss Eileen Blake, William McCauley, William Laird, and John Faloon.

Hibernians Plan Party.

The Ancient Order of Hibernians, one of the oldest Catholic fraternal organizations in the United States, will be hosts to several thousand in the Morrison hotel Saturday night. Members of the order's Ladies auxiliary are co-sponsors of the event. There will be continuous dancing in the hotel ballroom, with other forms of entertainment, including exhibition dancing and singing in adjoining parlors.

John Joseph Ryan is chairman of the celebration. West siders assisting on the arrangements committee are Robert Stack, Patrick Enright, James McCambridge, John McDermott, Michael Windle, Michael Coleman, Daniel Keating, Ed Sheehan, Patrick Joyce, J. C. O'Donnell, C. V. Ryan, Thomas P. Dowling, Thomas Keigher, Owen McGovern, William Herbert, Thomas C. McDermott, Mrs. Margaret Klemt, Mrs. Mary Stack, Miss Statia Colfer, Mrs. Elizabeth Delacy, Mrs. Julia Murray, Mrs. Margaret Kinsella, Mrs. A. J. Gibbons, Mrs. Winifred Ford, Mrs. Bridget Kelliher, Mrs. Ellen Wischoffer, Mrs. Anne Kramer, Miss Mary Enright, Mrs. Ellen Brady, Mrs. Elizabeth Grady, and Michael C. Brady.

SHANNON ROVERS

Memories of old Erin will be relived by members of the Shannon Rovers club as they hold their 18th annual St. Patrick's day party Saturday evening at Temple hall, 332 S. Marshfield av. Of the 500 members, 80 per cent were born in Ireland, and learned on their native soil the traditional songs and dances which will give the party its Celtic flavor.

Some of the dances ante-date St. Patrick's arrival in Ireland by several centuries. The most ancient of them, the Garden of Daisies, has been traced back to the time of the Druids. With its intricate steps it is probably the forerunner of the modern jigs, which somewhat resemble it.

Warpipe Band to Play.

Other dances in which the group will participate are the Blackbird, an Irish hornpipe; the Job of Journeywork, one of the oldest of the Gaelic country dances; Rocky Roads, a slip jig, and the ever popular four hand reel.

Music will be furnished by the 50 piece Irish warpipe band, whose members assert that the warpipe, or bagpipe as it is commonly known, has been popular in Ireland for centuries. They cite a fifth century picture of an Irish warpipe player which has been preserved at Klon MacNois, Ireland. The portrait of the musician, who is attired in green and saffron kilts, also indicates, they say, that the Irish wore the kilts at an early date.

Founded in 1925, the Shannon Rovers club adopted its name because the Shannon river flows thru the length of Ireland, touching almost every county. The Shannon in

Smiling Colleens of West Side Prepare for St. Patrick's Day Party

Tales of fairies, always popular with children, become increasingly fascinating as St. Patrick's day draws near. Diminutive Irish colleens listen as John Hartigan, 4853 Quincy st., tells them stories he heard as a child in Tipperary. The girls will dance at the Shannon Rovers St. Patrick's day party Saturday night in Temple hall, 332 S. Marshfield av. In the front row (left to right) are Virginia Gavin, Mary Margaret Shea, Patricia Coughlin, and Kathleen Gavin. Standing behind them are Rosalie McGlynn (left) and Margaret Coughlin. Hartigan, who is dressed in the uniform of the Rovers Irish warpipe band, is a juvenile police officer at the Warren av. station.

From war to warpipes is the transition recently made by Patrick Meehan, 4046 5th av. In the air corps for two years, he served 21 months in the South Pacific with the ground forces of the 42d bomber command. His tour of duty included service on Tarawa as well as in the Gilbert, Ellis, and Marshall Islands. Born in County Cavan, he came to the United States in 1926. With 49 other members of the Shannon Rovers Irish warpipe band, he will play traditional Gaelic melodies at the St. Patrick's day party. Bagpipes, which have been played in Ireland since before the fifth century, originally had only two drones, a tenor and base. A third drone was added later to give a wider musical range to the instrument.

Three members of the club talk over plans for the St. Patrick's day celebration. Iin the shako and braid adorned uniform is Peggy Sullivan (left), 3926 Lexington st. For the last five years she has been baton leader of the Rovers band. Sitting on the table is Madonna Gaffney, 1215 S. 50th av., Cicero, who is coaching the young dancers for the party. On the right is Thomas McGovern, 3931 Lexington st., a member of the band.

TURN FOXHOLE FANTASIES INTO THE REAL THING

Foxhole dreams of family dinners, corner store sodas, and Saturday night movies are a little more real for 16 west side service men, some of whom are already home after overseas service, while others are convalescing in coastal hospitals from battle wounds. Included in the group are fighters from the European, Pacific, China-Burma-India, and North Atlantic zones. Some of the men left America nearly three years ago.

Among Chicagoans on furlough from the western front is Pvt. Frank Minzenberger, 170 N. Elizabeth st., who as a company aid man with an armored infantry unit was in almost continuous front line action for more than seven months. On his return, Pvt. Minzenberger voiced admiration for fellow G. I.s who participated in the battle of the Ardennes bulge.

Not Always Easy Going.

"The doughboys were fighting mad," he related. "We hear a lot about easy going Americans, but when a Yank infantryman gets sore there's nothing easy going about him. Von Rundstedt did some great planning for the Ardennes counter-offensive but I don't believe he figured on the cold, fierce courage of our infantry outfits."

After two and a half years in the China-Burma-India zone as a member of the famed Merrill's Marauders, Sgt. Timothy Buckley, son of Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Buckley of 452 Claim st., Aurora, is convalescing in a Miami Beach hospital from a leg wound. He wears the expert infantryman's combat badge, a Presidential unit citation, and two battle stars.

Got His Pack, Not His Back.

One tale brought home by Corp. Roy C. Gobeyn after 34 months overseas concerned a battle with Japanese soldiers. His pack was shot off his back, but he was unharmed.

Wounded, however, in another encounter, Corp. Gobeyn wears the Purple Heart, as well as the combat infantryman's badge, and two battle stars. The son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis F. Gobeyn, 508 N. Le Claire av., he is a graduate of Austin High school. He has reported for duty at Langley field, Va.

Another Chicagoan recently reassigned after overseas service is Sgt. Stanley C. Kyzivat, son of Mrs. Rose Kyzivat, 1512 S. Harding av. He is on duty at the instructors' school at Randolph field, Tex. Sgt. Kyzivat enlisted Jan. 12, 1942, and served 31 months in the China-Burma-India theater.

Wounded in Leg.

Severe leg wounds received during a Jap hunting expedition on Leyte necessitated the return of Corp. Russell G. Ford, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Ford, 804 S. Western av. Corp. Ford was assigned to haul ammunition to front lines. When his jeep ran out of gas and supplies were sent forward by hand he volunteered for patrol duty. His buddies carried him to the aid station by bamboo litter and on their backs after a Japanese machine gunner wounded Ford and killed a Filipino guide.

He was sent to the Letterman General hospital in San Francisco and awaits transfer to Vancouver, Wash., for further treatment.

Col. Edward P. Streeter of La Grange, who returned recently from an 18 month tour of duty in combat zones, was retired to the inactive reserve on Feb. 25.

Helped Plan with Chiefs.

Formerly deputy chief of air staff to Maj. Gen. Stratemeyer, Col. Streeter completed a around the world mission to Australia, with a special conference with Gen. MacArthur and chiefs of staffs in New Guinea. He has been convalescing at a Miami Beach hospital, and plans to rejoin E. P. Reed & Co., shoe manufacturers with whom he has been associated 17 years.

Col. Streeter's son, John, was killed while on duty in Italy with the merchant marine. The colonel has two daughters in service, Corp. Constance in the WAC and Joan, a 1st class hospital apprentice, in the WAVES.

Home on Furlough.

Pvt. Morris S. Stein is visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur B. Stein, 1655 S. St. Louis av., on furlough from a Colorado hospital where he is being treated for wounds received in France on Sept. 13. Pvt. Stein participated in the invasion of Southern France, and wears the Purple Heart and an infantry citation.

Lt. Jack A. Keating, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur J. Keating, 1028 S. Harvey av., Oak Park, has returned to the United States on rotational leave. Assigned to overseas duty in June, 1944, he served with the 381st bombardment group which won the Presidential unit citation. He also wears the distinguished flying cross. A graduate of Oak Park-River Forest Township High school, he was a student at the University of Wisconsin when he entered service in December, 1942.

On respite leave after a year's service on the Greenland patrol is Warren F. Kajslen, 415 S. Kostner av., soundman 1st class with the coast guard. Kajslen was aboard a cutter guarding the North Atlantic sea lanes.

KNEW BEECHER, LONGFELLOW IN CHILDHOOD DAYS

Friends, 3 Cakes Greet Nonagenarian.

When Herbert W. Jones, 627 S. Ashland blvd., celebrated his 90th birthday recently he had not one but three birthday cakes. The extra supply was necessary to treat the scores of friends and relatives who came to felicitate the nonagenarian.

Mr. Jones was born in Cambridge, Mass., near Harvard university, and as a young boy enjoyed many hours with Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, who used to place him on his shoulders for a stroll thru the college grounds.

Recalls Noted Preacher.

He also has vivid recollections of Henry Ward Beecher who made frequent trips to Cambridge to preach in the Congregational church. Mr. Jones' mother used to take him to the services. He remembers sitting at her side in the family pew, listening wide-eyed to the noted preacher.

Mr. Jones attended Waterville college in Maine. He moved to Chicago in 1906, and until his retirement 20 years ago supervised the construction of buildings in many parts of the country.

Still Follows Baseball.

Since college days he has been an enthusiastic baseball fan, and even today thru newspapers and radio keeps track of games and players thruout the United States.

He attributes his longevity in part to the fact that he has always followed what he calls a sensible diet in which fruits, vegetables, and milk have predominated. He does not smoke or partake of liquor. But, being a tolerant man, he admits with a twinkle in his eyes that many others who have lived to an advanced age may be right in attributing their long life span to their daily pipe or their pint of wine.

Ancestors Long-Lived.

Mr. Jones comes of a line of long-lived ancestors. There were 14 in his father's family, all of whom lived until their late 80s or their 90s.

He has one son, Ralph Q. Jones, and three daughters, Mr. N. J. English, Miss Ina V. Jones, and Mrs. W. G. Nash, each of whom is a Chicago resident.

FLYERS RESTORE A BOMB PITTED BASE IN 4 DAYS

Engineers Termed It a 55 Day Job.

Col. Samuel had been informed by the field engineer that operations would have to be suspended for two months until sufficient equipment, materials, and man power could be obtained from other engineer units for major repairs.

105 Holes in Field.

The runway which the men had been using since last October was pockmarked by 105 holes, most of which had been caused by former allied bombings, including four attacks by the Annihilators themselves. When the Americans first took the field they filled all holes with a chalky substance the French call clichye. The filler held up fairly well until the thaw, when rains and melting snows turned it into jelly-like mush.

Refusing to accept the verdict of two months of inactivity, Col. Samuel sent out a general call for every man on the base to report on the runway the following morning instead of going to his regular job.

Even Clerks Toiled.

Early next day the runway resembled an infantry breakthru as mechanics, cooks, clerks, gunners, radio men, navigators, bombardiers, and pilots streamed onto the field and started to dig in.

Leading the activity was Col. Samuel himself, slugging away with a pick. In a short time he was splattered with chalky mud from cap to shoes.

"Shortage of men and supplies can't stop us," he grinned. "If necessary we'll build our own airdrome."

Do Job in Four Days.

He and his men worked in ten hour shifts filling holes that ranged from three to 40 feet in diameter with rock and gravel. After four days and nights of constant work the runway was repaired and ready for operation. Had the repair job been done by available engineers under normal working conditions, staff experts said, it would have taken approximately 55 days longer.

On the morning of the fifth day, 50 Marauders taxied down the renovated runway and took off for a target in Germany.

More than 73 organizations and groups held 451 separate meetings at the Hinsdale Community house from Sept. 1, 1944, thru Jan. 31, 1945, according to a recent survey. Total attendance at the meetings was 14,322, a figure which, it is estimated, would be doubled if those who took part in open activities were included.

Sea Scouts Launched.

Organizations that began their activities at the house during the period under survey include a ship of Sea Scouts, the Zion Lutheran and the St. Jogues' bowling groups, the great books classes under direction of Henry G. Geilen, the Community theater, boxing classes taught by Earl Case, classes in Bible history, taught by Mrs. Isabel Heaps, and vocal classes instructed by Miss Emily Wendt.

A Business and Professional Woman's club is being formed, golf lessons are to be held by George Arnold, and a class in tennis will be taught by Claire Riessen. Dancing classes taught by Lester Mayhew are to be held Friday nights.

Tell of Expansion.

Several of the older organizations haxe expanded their activities. The Toastmasters' club has increased its membership from 17 to 25. The Hinsdale Community Artists have doubled their membership, as has the Community Knit shop.

The nursery school of 35 youngsters has many on the waiting list. The Stamp club and the square dances continue to attract Hinsdalians, and there is sustained enthusiasm for the rug classes taught by Mrs. Arlene M. Billy and the American Friends Sewing society.

T. A. Blank is the community house director.

RADIO VESSEL APACHE RELAYS M'ARTHUR VOICE

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

A coast to coast audience listened in a few evenings ago when Gen. MacArthur turned the civilian government back to the Philippines and again last Sunday on the Army hour when he participated in ceremonies raising the American flag on the battered pole at Corregidor.

On the first broadcast Gen. MacArthur spoke from the presidential palace. Elaborate preparations were made to assure the success of the broadcast and as a result Gen. MacArthur's resonant voice came thru clear and strong.

Act to Block Jamming.

For 24 hours preceding the ceremonies, troops guarded land telephone and power lines as a precaution against Japanese cutting the lines. To lessen the possibility of jamming by the Japs, American networks were not allowed to make any announcement of the broadcast until a half hour before it started.

A signal corps mobile unit also was employed which shortwaved the ceremonies to the Apache, the radio vessel which had moved into Lingayen gulf at the beginning of the Luzon operations. Thru this ship more than half a million words of press copy had already been shortwaved back to the United States.

On the first MacArthur broadcast Press Wireless used its transmitter for voice and beamed his words both to Los Angeles and to San Francisco so that a choice could be made of the better circuit.

Schechter in Charge.

At the time of the invasion of Luzon a broadcasting unit mounted on a two and a half ton truck drove out onto the beach from a landing ship. Broadcasts were short waved back to the Apache, which relayed them on to their destination.

Representing the four major networks on Luzon are Don Bell for Mutual [Royal Arch Gunnison has returned to the United States]; George Folster of NBC; William J. Dunn, CBS, and Arthur Feldman of the Blue.

SELECT FINEST OF OLD HOUSES IN ELGIN SURVEY

Real Estate Board Has Annual Banquet.

It was the fine structures built in the bygone that were paid tribute by the Elgin Real Estate board at a recent civic banquet to which descendants of many of Elgin's earliest families were invited.

In its annual competition leading up to the banquet the board deviated from its pre-Pearl Harbor custom of encouraging community development by offering awards for the finest examples of new homes, industrial plants, and public structures. Construction being halted, it was decided to give attention to types of architecture long overlooked—the Elgin region's many fine buildings that have stood the test of 75 or more years.

Architect Makes Choice.

Earl H. Reed of Chicago, a member of the American Society of Architects, was invited to judge the many entries.

Winners in the various classifications and the dates built were:

INSTITUTIONAL CLASS—Elgin academy [1885], first and also grand award winner; Elgin State hospital [1870], honorable mention.

HISTORICAL CLASS—Davidson house [1850], 359 Prairie st., Elgin, first; Pioneer house [1846], 306 W. Chicago st., Elgin, and Yarwood house, Park and N. College sts., Elgin, honorable mention.

SUSCEPTIBLE TO MODERN ADAPTATION—Whedon house [1850], 304 Division st., Elgin, first for brick types, and Browning house [1860], Dundee Avenue rd., first for frame types, and Braden house [1840], Dundee, honorable mention.

FRAME FARM HOUSES—McLean house [1849], McLean blvd. and Highland av., Elgin, first place; Van Nostrand home [1850], 519 Arlington av., Elgin, and Dickerson house, Liberty and Barrett sts., Elgin, honorable mention.

ANTEBELLUM STONE MASONRY CLASS—Peaslee home [1836], South Elgin, first, and Kenyon farm house [1845], Clintonville, honorable mention.

In addition to the award winners the committee recognized two Elgin area landmarks mentioned in the Historic American Buildings survey of a few years ago—the Keating house on route 31 at Fayville, five miles south of Elgin, and the Hinsdell homestead at 443 E. Chicago st., Elgin.

Plea for Preservation.

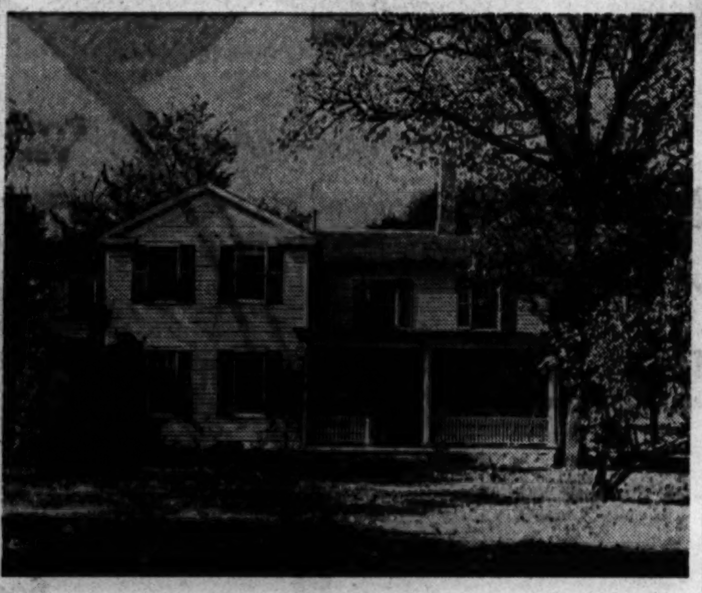
In announcing the contest winners Mr. Reed made a plea for the preservation of the old structures that are rich with tradition.

Stephen C. Ladd was chairman of the Real Estate board's pioneer buildings contest committee and was assisted in the research by B. H. Yarwood, historian for the committee; K. K. Coffman, photographer, and the following representatives of Elgin civic groups; Merrill O. Calame, general chairman of the civic committee; Mrs. Edward N. Herbster, secretary; Henry L. Krumm, representing the Elgin Business Men's association; John O. Lueder, Elgin Association of Commerce; Clifford Lamp, Elgin Building Contractors' association; City Building Inspector A. J. Nichol, Mrs. George R. Thompson, Elgin Woman's club, and Clarence F. Schwarzwalder, Elmer A. Gylleck, and LeRoy W. Thompson, representing the architectural profession.

Two Graduates of Fenger Get DePauw Scholarships

Eugene L. Delves, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Delves, 10050 Normal av., and Eston H. Ellis, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Ellis, 10151 Wallace st., have been awarded scholarships to DePauw university, Greencastle, Ind., under the Edward Rector Scholarship foundation. Both are graduates of Fenger High school.

A Winner in Elgin House Survey



The Browning farm house was given first award for being most susceptible to modern adaptation for frame types at the recent banquet held by the Elgin Read Estate board. he house, three miles north of Elgin on Dundee rd., was built about 1860 and purchased 10 years later by Samuel W. Browning, whose daughter still resides there. Improvements and additions were made 15 years ago, but care was taken to retain the original architectural design.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, March 12.

Transplant all seedlings into flats or pots just as soon as they can be handled. Seedlings left in the seed box are likely to grow too large for quick rooting in the soil.

Use proper soil [half sand and loam or half peat and sand], a not too heavy covering, and use care when watering so the seeds are not washed away or the soil piled up over them. Shade during direct sunshine.

Tuesday, March 13.

It is not too late to buy tubers of the highly colored fancy leaved caladiums to obtain a good plant for use in a shady spot in the garden. Start by placing just beneath the surface in a pot of sandy soil and when well above ground shift to a pot according to the size of the plant—a 4 inch pot is a fair size for most started plants.

As soon as the ground is warm and does not stick to the blade of the spade begin spading a small section for such vegetables as spinach, lettuce, onion sets, and radishes. Do not sow more than can be economically used.

Wednesday, March 14.

The hardy annuals can be sown directly in the open ground as early as the soil can be worked. These consist of such desirable kinds as the calendula, petunia, nigella, four o'clock, sweet peas, morning glory, California poppy, Shirley poppy, and many others.

Examine the perrenial border to see if the mulching material is too heavy, for often the plants may be smothered. By gently disturbing the material or lifting a part of it for aeration, or by removing a part, the perrenials will receive proper attention.

Thursday, March 15.

Sweet peas can be sown now and the soil should be well enriched. Make a shallow trench and apply well decayed manure or commercial fertilizer. Sow the seeds carefully and good growth should be obtained. As the plants grow the trench can be filled around the base.

Sweet peas are excellent for cutting—in fact, the flowers must be cut to prevent seed from forming, for if it does the flowering period will be much shortened. Constant care must be given to control attacks by aphids.

Friday, March 16.

Order all seeds now to avoid substitutions. Just what variety to buy is largely a matter of personal choice, altho some varieties are better for the home gardener who wants vegetables for the table gathered directly from his own garden.

Growing corn, potatoes, and other crops that take a considerable amount of space should be avoided, and some crops are not adapted to the restricted and congested area of the city.

Saturday, March 17.

Prepared in coöperation with Garfield Park conservatory.

POLISH YOUTH URGES HOPE IN ORATORY TESTS

HighSchoolLeague Makes Awards.

BY JANET PECK.

A grin on his face, and first place medal on his lapel, Andrew Pach Jr. stepped up to receive the gold traveling trophy he won for his school in the annual oratorical contest sponsored by the Polish Student's federation.

Andrew, a Foreman High school senior, and five other contestants declaimed recently in their ancestral tongue before an audience of nearly 200 Polish-Americans at the Polish Falcons hall, 1062 N. Ashland av. Each a northwest side high school student, chosen to compete by the Polish group within his own school, the contestants were Stanley Kordek, Lane; Wanda Bieniak, Steinmetz; Virginia Janiak, Tuley; Jack Iwicki, Tuley, and Helen Warchal, Steinmetz.

Message, Delivery Count.

Judging was based on the message within the original orations and on delivery. Judges were Dr. Alexander Wiesiolowski, Polish government information center; Dr. Walter A. Dzuik, medical director of the Polish Roman Catholic union and vice president of the Illinois Polish congress; George Jaworowski, Polish radio announcer; Dr. Julius Szygowski, Polish consul general; B. W. Janowski, Polish Daily Zgoda, and Wlodzimierz Slodowski, professor of Polish literature and history at De Paul university.

The program moved rapidly. After singing "The Star Spangled Banner" and the Polish national anthem the audience settled down to hear discussed such serious subjects as the Russian-Polish situation and the responsibilities of Polish-American youth in the six minutes allotted each speaker.

Urges Cultural Unity.

Stanley Kordek spoke first on the necessity of the "hanging together of Polish-American youth in order to preserve the tradition and culture of their parents." Stanley, who is 17, lives at 2301 N. Hoyne av., and like most of the others learned his Polish grammar at school and his conversational Polish at home.

Wanda Bieniak, 2733 N. Marmora st., wore a Polish festival costume—gay red skirt, embroidered blouse and long ribbons in her hair. She won the trophy a previous year and well she might have, judging from the sincerity with which she spoke. She advised Polish-Americans to have faith and stand united as an aid to freeing Poland from her oppressors. "Poland is not lost," she declared.

Cites Double Responsibility.

"Polish youth in America has a double opportunity because he speaks a double language and has a double culture," stated Virginia Janiak, 1238 N. Maplewood av., second prize winner. "But," she continued, "he also has a double responsibility . . . to help protect America and to help rebuild Poland." Speaking clearly and dramatically she emphasized that youth must realize these responsibilities, particularly at this time.

Also stressing this duty was first place winner Andrew Pach Jr. Andrew, a graduate of St. Ladislaus grammar school, learned most of his Polish at home, 5212 Roscoe st., where it is spoken by his parents. According to one of the judges, outstanding in Andrew's favor was his wide vocabulary. His thesis was that "future Polish culture, which must preserve past Polish culture, is the responsibility of Polish-American youth."

Praises Polish Heritage.

"He talks like a Polish priest," was the comment heard as third place winner, Jack Iwicki, 2314 N. Leavitt av., spoke. Clearly and sincerely he urged that boys and girls of Polish heritage "be proud rather than ashamed of their nationality. All the progress made so far has been thru the efforts of our parents but we must begin to carry on those efforts," he said.

Last speaker was Helen Warchal, 2311 N. Major av., who in a review of Polish contributions to civilization, spoke of the Polish scientist, Madam Curie. Helen also wore a festival costume, parts of which her parents bought in Poland just before the war.

Dance to Folk Tunes.

While the judges conferred, music was started and a Polish dance group entertained with a series of popular folk dances. The federation, 15 years old, has a membership of 70 high school students from all over the city. Raymond Rzepecki, 1141 N. Richmond st., is president.

Stanley Wisniewski, 1126 N. Richmond st., is adviser to the group. The contest committee included Miss Irwina Michon, 5131 Henderson st.; Casimir Srutwa, 5201 Roscoe st.; Stanley Bugay, 2744 Evergreen av.; Bernard Bartnicki, 1640 N. Francisco av.; Mary Kapustka, 2028 Haddon av.; Irena Mrozek, 3027 N. Avers av.; and Wanda Bieniak, 2733 N. Marmora av.

JEWISH GROUP TO HEAR TALK BY DR. BRADLEY

The Rev. Preston Bradley, pastor of Peoples church, will be the guest speaker at a meeting of the Jewish Men's club of Chicago at 8 p. m. Monday at Hibbard school, Ainslee st. and Sawyer av. His subject will be "What Are We Facing?" A musical program will be presented by Sadie Richmond, vocalist; Evelyn Fineberg, violinist, and Peter Sher, pianist. Ben Franklin is chairman of the meeting.

Students Hold Oratorical Contest in Native Polish Tongue

Andrew Pach Jr., 5212 Roscoe st., Foreman High school senior, won the gold traveling trophy as first prize in a recent oratorical contest sponsored by the Polish Student's federation. This is the second year the trophy has gone to Foreman High school, and if its students win again it becomes the permanent property of the Polish group there. Present when Pach received the trophy were Wlodzimierz Slodowski, Dr. Julius Szygowski, Polish consul general; Stanley Wiesniewski, federation advisor, and Dr. Walter A. Dzuik. The contest was held at the Polish Falcons hall, 1062 N. Ashland av.

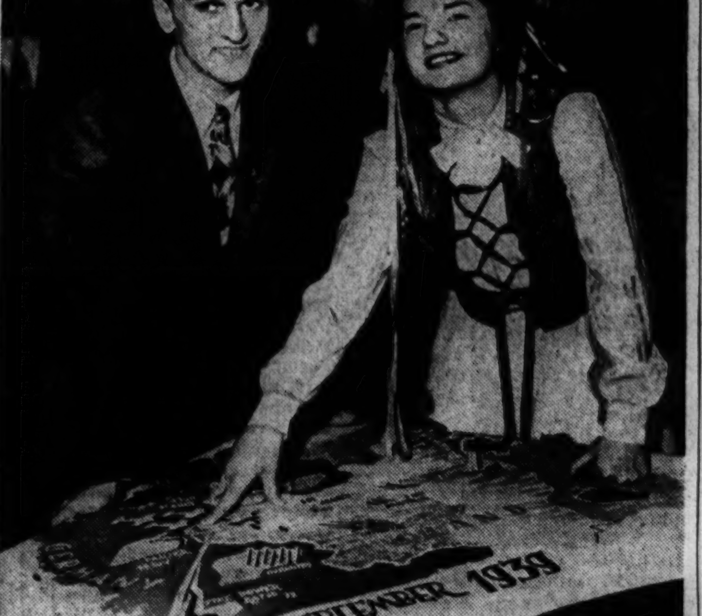
Virginia Janiak, 1238 N. Maplewood av., and Jack Iwicki, 2314 N. Leavitt st., were second and third place winners, respectively. They were awarded gold medals and books on Poland. Miss Janiak is a senior and Iwicki, a junior at Tuley High school. All contestants spoke in their ancestral tongue.

While the judges decided winners of the oratorical contest, the Polish Student's dance group entertained with folk dances. Clockwise from center front are Lillian Zielinski (wearing false mustache), Ruth Kustush, Stanley Kozuch, Angeline Keska, Eugene Maday, Loretta Krajecki, Eugene Adamski, and Mary Kapustka. Members of the group are also federation members.



Raymond Rzepecki, 1141 N. Richmond st., and Wanda Bieniak, 2733 N. Marmora st., delineated the territory that was Poland in 1939 as compared with that of today. Wanda, one of the contestants, used as her subject the Polish-Russian situation and advocated the cooperation of Polish-Americans as an aid toward freeing Poland. Raymond is president of the federation.

SERGEANT WINS MEDAL FOR JOB AS A CO-PILOT

Repairs Plane, Then Takes Over.

Sgt. Elmer Keller Jr., 5313 Patterson av., who was present when the Japs bombed Hickam field, Hawaii, the first day of the war, was recently awarded the distinguished flying cross in Italy, where he is now serving with the 15th A. A. F. His brother, Richard, is pilot on the plane on which he is serving as aerial gunner.

Sgt. Elmer Keller.

The sergeant earned his award while on a mission over Munich, Germany. His plane was hit by flak and the co-pilot was severely injured. After repairing damaged hydraulic lines and a control cable so effectively the plane kept in formation, he then flew as co-pilot on the trip home, tho he had had no previous pilot experience on heavy bombers.

Battle Jap Attack.

Keller was among the members of a B-17 outfit stationed at Hickam field who frantically manned their machine guns in a futile attempt to drive off those first Jap raiders. Later based on Midway and the Solomons he flew 67 missions and was then sent home for a rest and reassignment.

On arriving in the United States he learned his younger brother, Richard, had been commissioned and ordered to the Mediterranean theater as a pilot. At Sgt. Keller's request he was assigned to the same crew where they are now serving.

Other Kellers in Service.

Two other members of the Keller family are also in service. Sgt. William Keller, the oldest, is serving with the 1st army. Wounded during the Normandy invasion he returned to duty and was captured by the Germans during the December counter-offensive. Four days later he was recaptured and returned to duty at the front lines. The boys' sister, Gladys, is a private in the marines and is stationed at Camp Le Jeune, N. C.

SEED CATALOGS SPUR INTEREST OF GARDENERS

Point Values Are a Factor, Too.

Ernest R. Wurm, war garden chairman for the northwest suburbs, has a theory about the prespring sport of many suburbanites. He believes their favorite armchair recreation is studying the new seed catalogs published during the winter. Forgetful of the February drear and the March fickleness they comfortably sit and ponder the best variety of tomatoes to plant, and whether to put in an extra row of sweet corn.

The numbers of these earnest gardeners are on the increase this year, Wurm declares. With canned vegetables high on the ration list many families have set about planning their spring gardens with more enthusiasm and purpose than ever.

More and Larger This Year.

The gardens in northwest suburbs were many and large last year, but this year probably will see more and larger gardens than ever before, Wurm predicted. By the time spring planting begins, nine out of every 10 families in northwestern suburbs will have gardens, Wurm asserted.

The requests for new plots of ground for war gardens haven't begun to pour in as yet. There were many new applicants last fall, and Wurm anticipates that by next month requests will be heavy again. At present garden planning is a discussion question for passengers on the commuters' trains. They spend most of their 25 minute ride to the city debating which radish matures fastest and weighing the relative merits of green and yellow beans.

Interest High in Des Plaines.

In a few of the northwest suburbs gardens came near the peak of production last summer. In Des Plaines, for instance, Mrs. A. B. Perlin, garden chairman, asserted that the community always has been interested in gardening. There it is simply the matter of keeping them interested. She anticipates a few new requests for garden plots, and considerable increase in produce next fall thru more careful planting and culture.

Prospective gardeners may contact the chairmen in their communities for information on available sites, and subsequently for advice on what to plant and how to plant it. Chairmen are as follows: Arlington Heights—Harry Belle, 108 S. Walnut av.; Des Plaines—Mrs. A. B. Perlin, 1015 Woodlawn av.; Leyden township—Charles Donald, Melrose Park; Norwood Park township—John and Henry Lange, rural route 1, and Park Ridge—Ernest R. Wurm, 313 S. Clifton st. Announcement will be made soon of garden chairmen for Mount Prospect, Prospect Heights, Schiller Park, and Wheeling.

STEP THIS WAY FOR BIG CIRCUS AT LAIRD HOUSE

Settlement Party to Open Wednesday.

Most every one gets a thrill by attending a circus. But members of Laird Community house, 1838 Division st., will have the additional thrill of putting one on. Therefore plans for their annual party which is to be a circus this year, are going forward with greater enthusiasm than ever before. Performances will be given at 7:30 p. m. Wednesday and Thursday at the house.

Laird, under the guidance of Miss Olive Corbett, serves some 400 adults and children in the neighborhood. It offers them use of the gymnasium, classes in crafts, and membership in a variety of clubs.

Put Big Top in Gym.

The circus big top will be in the gymnasium. With colored streamers and crepe paper decorations the youngsters, aided by the staff, have given the room a carnival-like appearance. Unfortunately there are no balloons to be had, but as one child said, "Real circuses probably don't have 'em now either."

Booths have been trimmed in a rainbow of colors with members of the Mother's club, headed by Mrs. Celia Ollek, 2636 Division st., displaying their own handiwork for sale. There will be an exciting fish pond tended by members of the junior Girl Scouts. In charge of the pond will be Judy Tuchowski, 1214 N. Wolcott av., and Roberta Zaidman, 1940 Division st.

Program in Auditorium.

Altho the big top will be in the gym the big show will be held in the auditorium. Acts will include a Tom Thumb wedding, advertised on the billboards as the "Wee Won's Wedding." Principals will be Marlene Bonk, 1225 N. Wolcott av., and Glen McKerrow, 1106 N. Hermitage av. The bride and bridegroom are 7 and 8 years, respectively. The bride will be dressed in an embroidered white organdy gown, the bridegroom in a blue business suit. Soloist on the traditional "I Love You Truly" will be 9 year old Joyce LeFebvre, 1734 Crystal st. Richard White, 8 years old, has the role of minister.

Also on the program will be several playlets to be given by the dramatic club, a puppet show brought in from the outside for the occasion, and musical selections by the Mother's club Kitchen Cabinet band directed by Mrs. Ollek. Gerald Bettis, 1940 Crystal st., will be a strong man and Richard Stanke, 1103 N. Marshfield av., a thin man, will show what happens to boys and girls who don't eat their spinach. Donald Marek, 1142 N. Wood st., will be master of ceremonies.

Clowns Will Be Busy.

Thruout the evening clowns, led by Henry Karwoski, 1951 Division st., will add to the general confusion with Raymond Zabjech, 1650 Division st., dressed as a monkey, and acting the part. In one of the clubrooms the Boy Scouts will show comedy films, with Kenneth Wallace, 1938 Thomas st., in charge.

Lions and tigers made of paper will stare out at the public from behind bars made of the same and in the tearoom, waitresses in Polish festival costumes will serve. Venders will crowd their way thru the halls and rooms calling the ware in authentic circus style.

Staff members at the house, helping with plans, are Warren Studer, Miss Louis Ellis, Miss Helen Friedlay, and Miss Corbett.

NOON LENTEN SERIES SET AT KIMBALL HALL

The Rev. John B. Hubbard, rector of St. Mary's Episcopal church, Park Ridge, will address noon lenten services during passion and holy week at Kimball hall. He will speak on "Race Hatred — Facing the Facts" March 22.

Sponsored by the Church club of the diocese of Chicago, the services will be held at 12:10 p. m. each day.

Sergeant Claims English Bride

Sgt. William L. Peterson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lars Peterson, 6101 Patterson av., will bring an English girl home after the war. He and the former Margaret Joyce Smye of Oxford, England, were married at Iffley church in Oxford.

SEVEN FIGHTERS OF N.W. SIDE GET BRONZE STARS

Six in Europe, One in New Guinea.

Six northwest service men have been awarded the bronze star medal, five of whom are in the European theater. They are Corp. Frank S. Pogany, 2212 N. Laramie av.; Sgt. Leo E. Heim, Des Plaines; Sgt. Charles P. Mercurio, 5757 Irving Park rd.; Lt. Theodore A. Wendland Jr., 4139 N. Troy st., and Sgt. Eugene J. Dombroski, 3221 Wilson.

Sgt. Leo E. Heim.

Aids Wounded Under Fire.

Corp. Dobson received the award for giving first aid and assisting in evacuation of wounded men while under heavy fire in the Maffin bay area of New Guinea last June. He is a member of the medical detachment of an infantry regiment.

The decoration was presented Corp. Pogany, son of Mr. and Mrs. Regina Pogany, of the above address, in Italy, for saving a truck which had been hit by a bomb by pulling off the burning tarp and extinguishing the fire.

Sgt. Heim, husband of Mrs. Margaret B. Heim, Des Plaines, received the bronze star for constructing an air field control tower. Sgt. Heim was a teacher at the American Conservatory of Music before entering service in June, 1942. He went overseas in April, 1943. He is a control tower operator for a Flying Fortress suqadron in the 15th air force in Italy.

Inspires Confidence of Pilot.

Sgt. Mercurio, son of Mrs. Lillian Mercurio, of the address above, was decorated at a 9th air force fighter bomber base in Belgium. The citation stated that as crew chief of a P-38, he had kept his aircraft in such superior condition as to inspire the confidence of the pilot and contribute materially to the operational efficiency of his unit despite minimum maintenance facilities and heavy operational demands. He entered service in February, 1942, and has served in France and England. His wife lives at 5745 Byron st.

Lt. Wendland, platoon leader of a combat engineer unit, was awarded the medal for advancing beyond friendly lines to demolish five houses near a town in Germany last October. He attended Wright college before enlisting in September, 1942. His wife resides at the Troy st. address. His parents live at 4148 N. Troy.

Sgt. Dombroski, husband of Mrs. Ruth J. Dumbroski, of the Wilson av. address, earned the medal following combat in northern Italy. With total disregard for his own safety, Dumbroski took charge when a serious fire broke out in his gunpit. He prevented possible casualties among personnel and reduced damage of material to a minimum, the citation stated.

WAR'S TOPFLIGHT CHIEFS ARE THIS BOY'S FRIENDS

BY NORMALEE RUGAN.

Confidant of American and British army generals as well as the envy of his 5th grade pals, Jan V. Paulis, 3420 N. Laramie av., is displaying a collection of 40 war souvenirs sent him by the world's military great.

Of course, military secrets are not divulged to this pupil at St. Ladislaus school, 5346 Roscoe st., but letters and shoulder patches which make up the collection will serve as "great remembrances of World War II.," Jan declares.

Has Letter After Letter.

In a bulging scrapbook, which Jan displays with pride and guards carefully when there are small children around, he has pasted letter after letter from Generals MacArthur, Eisenhower, Clark, Doolittle, Bradley, Stilwell, McLain, Simpson, Field Marshal Montgomery, and numerous others.

Of them all, mementos from Gen. Clark, who has been Jan's most frequent correspondent, seem to hold the spotlight. Almost every newspaper story concerning Clark since the 9 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Victor Paulis began his collection several months ago has been clipped and preserved in the scrapbook. An 8 by 10 autographed photo of the general shares a choice spot in Jan's room along with that of his favorite cousin, Pvt. John T. Horowicz, 2915 N. Lotus, who is serving in the Pacific theater.

More than 30 Patches.

His collection includes more than 30 shoulder patches from army ground troops and air force units, most of them from the European theater. One of the outstanding is the Normandy invasion insigne. On a field of black representing the darkness of Nazi oppression the sword of liberation gleams in the form of a crusader's sword. Flames leap up in the blade. Surmounting the sword is a rainbow, emblematic of hope, which contains all the colors in flags of the allies.

Another item of interest is the badge of the old China-Burma-India theater received from Gen. Stilwell. The 12 pointed star on the left is the Chinese Kuomintang emblem, while that on the right is the star of India. The red and white stripes on the shield represent the United States.

"Mac" Sends "Good Luck."

In addition Jan has received Japanese money from Maj. Gen. A. V. Arnold and "good luck" autographs from MacArthur and Doolittle.

Besides hearing from generals, Jan holds an avid interest for building airplane models. He has many different types.

The war is progressing so fast now, Jan says, that he finds it difficult and confusing to keep up with ever changing addresses of generals, but he hasn't given up hope of increasing his collection.

However, he'll have to buy another scrapbook.

SCRAP CHAMPION BUILDS STRATEGY AS WELL AS PILE

Collecting 19,000 pounds of scrap paper single handed in six weeks might seem quite impossible to do, but that's exactly what Jimmy Staff did.

Well known at Funston school where he is in the 7th grade, Jimmy was named city-wide paper king in all Chicago schools recently. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ruben Staff, 3574 Dickens av.

Develops Strategy.

Jimmy's strategy for gathering scrap paper was first to go to the shop owners and business men on Armitage av. near the school and make himself acquainted. Then day by day as he revisited them the pile of salvaged paper grew.

Before school, at the lunch hour, and after school Jimmy collected paper, and flattened corrugated boxes. It was not an uncommon sight, Mrs. Elizabeth MacGregor, Funston principal, said, to see Jimmy during the noon hour pulling a wagon loaded with paper with one hand and eating a sandwich with the other.

One might think Jimmy spent 24 hours a day pulling the wagon which his father made with Jimmy's help. Jimmy's father points out, however, his son is learning to play a saxophone, plays in an accordion band which frequently makes public appearances, and has numerous home duties to perform for his mother besides his school work.

Wants His Own Band.

Jimmy's plans for the future are to have the saxophone pay his way thru college by playing in a dance band. After college he wants a band of his own.

Jimmy was honored recently at a luncheon given for representatives of 25 Chicago schools highest in a six week paper drive. As paper king Jimmy was awarded a gold medal for first prize in the salvage drive and a portrait of George Washington.

Jimmy refused to take all the honor, saying, "I couldn't have done it if I hadn't had all the cooperation I did. Ronald Jack helped me a lot and deserves a lot of the praise." Ronald, another Funston student, lives at 1837 N. Lawndale av.

Total Keeps Mounting.

Jimmy's collection boosted Funston's scrap paper to a total of 80,000 pounds.

Most of the checks received from the salvage go to the Chicago service men's center. The next check, which Jimmy himself will present to Mrs. Edward J. Kelly, wife of the mayor, will put the school's donation well over $1,000. Checks also are donated to the Community War Fund, Red Cross, veterans' flower fund, and a book fund for service men.

Funston students have collected more than a quarter million pounds of scrap paper since the national drive began in November, 1943.

PATIENTS TO SEE CHILDREN ACT AT N. W. HOSPITAL

Park Ridge Student Wins Honors at Northwestern

Marcia Lunde, Park Ridge, a sophomore at Northwestern university, was honored at a convocation for maintaining the highest scholastic average in journalism in her class. Dean Kenneth Olson of the school of journalism made the award.

NEW DISTRICT TO PICK SCHOOL BOARD APRIL 14

An election will be held April 14 to name a president and six members of the board of education of the new school district made by consolidating district 62 in Des Plaines and 65 in Riverview. Supt. Puffer of Cook county schools called the election when a canvass showed a vote of consolidation had carried, 410 to 21.

Backing for consolidation first developed in Riverview, where there is one grade school with an enrollment of 281 pupils. Des Plaines has five grade schools with an enrollment of 1,066. Both districts formerly operated under separate boards.

"The recent election," declared Puffer, "furnished further evidence that where citizens make an earnest study of the advantages of consolidation they find that in the larger unit they are better able to give their children more diversified and richer educational opportunities."

Members of the former Des Plaines board of education include R. D. Duthie, president; W. I. Merrian, clerk; O. W. Blume, Russell W. Peters, Fred W. Traeger, J. R. Lawrence, and Walter J. Zenner. Old board members at Riverview include Erick Church, president; Ernest Van Stockun, and Louis Gapenski.

P. A. D. Auxiliary.

The P. A. D. auxiliary, St. Paul's house, will sponsor a book review in the auditorium, 3831 N. Mozart st. Mrs. Harvey Clark will review "The Green Years."

RADIO VESSEL APACHE RELAYS M'ARTHUR VOICE

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

A coast to coast audience listened in a few evenings ago when Gen. MacArthur turned the civilian government back to the Philippines and again last Sunday on the Army hour when he participated in ceremonies raising the American flag on the battered pole at Corregidor.

On the first broadcast Gen. MacArthur spoke from the presidential palace. Elaborate preparations were made to assure the success of the broadcast and as a result Gen. MacArthur's resonant voice came thru clear and strong.

Act to Block Jamming.

For 24 hours preceding the ceremonies, troops guarded land telephone and power lines as a precaution against Japanese cutting the lines. To lessen the possibility of jamming by the Japs, American networks were not allowed to make any announcement of the broadcast until a half hour before it started.

A signal corps mobile unit also was employed which shortwaved the ceremonies to the Apache, the radio vessel which had moved into Lingayen gulf at the beginning of the Luzon operations. Thru this ship more than half a million words of press copy had already been shortwaved back to the United States.

On the first MacArthur broadcast Press Wireless used its transmitter for voice and beamed his words both to Los Angeles and to San Francisco so that a choice could be made of the better circuit.

Schechter in Charge.

At the time of the invasion of Luzon a broadcasting unit mounted on a two and a half ton truck drove out onto the beach from a landing ship. Broadcasts were short waved back to the Apache, which relayed them on to their destination.

Representing the four major networks on Luzon are Don Bell for Mutual [Royal Arch Gunnison has returned to the United States]; George Folster of NBC; William J. Dunn, CBS, and Arthur Feldman of the Blue.

LAY PLANS NOW TO MODERNIZE YOUR DWELLING

Be Ready for Go Signal Following War.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

Many thousands of home owners who were not able to modernize their houses in the '30s are planning to do so as soon as the war ends and the "go" signal is given.

Right now is an excellent time to begin planning on paper. It will be those whose plans are all ready who will be able to put in their orders, and the earlier the order, the quicker the delivery.

In a recent nation-wide survey conducted by a large woodwork company some 68 per cent of those interviewed are planning to build new homes as soon as possible after victory. Of this group nearly 90 per cent already have taken definite steps in their planning.

Most to Modernize at Least.

Of those who are not contemplating new homes, some 22 per cent are going to modernize their existing ones, while others are planning extensive repairs.

Owners who are planning to modernize can take comfort in the fact that most of the equipment, fixtures, and materials which will be available for new homes can be used to convert an old fashioned home into an up to date, efficient dwelling.

If thought is taken concerning the various activities to which a house must be adapted, it is possible thru proper space arrangement to make a small house adjust itself to the changing needs of a family.

Can Develop Zones.

The house of tomorrow can be separated into two areas, a zone of quiet and a zone of activity, separated by insulating mediums against sounds.

In the quiet zone belong spaces for rest, reading, conversation, writing, and quiet hobbies.

In the activity zone belong spaces for work and play which will not suffer from noise and activity. Such spaces will include areas for washing, cleaning, cooking, adult and children's games, and care and feeding of children. Cost will determine how large these different zones may be, the possible insulating mediums employed, and the number of partitions.

This zoning of a house for quiet areas and activity spaces is not a new idea. It has been adapted in some of our pre-war houses.

Y to Conduct Government Forum Series

Ten northwest siders are among 100 boys and girls representing neighborhood Hi-Y or Tri-Hi-Y clubs at the University of Good Government sponsored by the Y. M. C. A. The project opening this week will consist of eight weekly meetings to be held on Thursdays at 7:30 p. m., in the Central Y. M. C. A., 19 S. La Salle st. Political officials and government employes have been invited to speak.

This WEEK in the GARDEN

Monday, March 12.

Transplant all seedlings into flats or pots just as soon as they can be handled. Seedlings left in the seed box are likely to grow too large for quick rooting in the soil.

Use proper soil [half sand and loam or half peat and sand], a not too heavy covering, and use care when watering so the seeds are not washed away or the soil piled up over them. Shade during direct sunshine.

Tuesday, March 13.

It is not too late to buy tubers of the highly colored fancy leaved caladiums to obtain a good plant for use in a shady spot in the garden. Start by placing just beneath the surface in a pot of sandy soil and when well above ground shift to a pot according to the size of the plant—a 4 inch pot is a fair size for most started plants,

Wednesday, March 14.

The hardy annuals can be sown directly in the open ground as early as the soil can be worked. These consist of such desirable kinds as the calendula, petunia, nigella, four o'clock, sweet peas, morning glory, California poppy, Shirley poppy, and many others.

Thursday, March 15.

Sweet peas can be sown now and the soil should be well enriched. Make a shallow trench and apply well decayed manure or commercial fertilizer. Sow the seeds carefully and good growth should be obtained. As the plants grow the trench can be filled around the base.

Friday, March 16.

Order all seeds now to avoid substitutions. Just what variety to buy is largely a matter of personal choice, altho some varieties are better for the home gardener who wants vegetables for the table gathered directly from his own garden.

Saturday, March 17.

Prepared in coöperation with Garfield Park conservatory.

IROQUOIS FIRE FIGHTER CLOSES HIS LONG CAREER

Fire Marshal Robert B. Wallace of the 3d division, who retired last month at 63 after nearly half a century of service, was one of the first fire fighters to reach the scene of Chicago's costly Iroquois theater fire on Dec. 30, 1903.

His memories of the catastrophe are vague. He had joined an insurance patrol on March 5 of the same year. Of the fire which cost more than 600 lives he remembers chiefly his struggle to help persons out of the building and removing bodies.

Having served eight years with the patrol, Wallace joined the city fire department Jan. 1, 1911, and was assigned to hook and ladder company No. 4 at 22d st. and Wentworth av. He became a lieutenant June 5, 1918, while assigned to the station at North and Hudson avs. He was promoted to captain Oct. 1, 1936, and made battalion chief July 1, 1937. His appointment as a fire marshal took place Oct. 1, 1943.

With his retirement recently, Wallace now has plenty of time for fishing and travel. Indulgence of his favorite pasttimes however, will have to await the end of the war, and the lifting of the travel ban, Wallace said.

Born in Canada, Wallace was brought to Chicago when 10. He was educated in the public schools on the west side, taking his job with the fire insurance patrol at the age of 21. Wallace resides with his wife at 3535 Wilton st. They have one son, Pvt. Gordon Wallace, serving as a wire chief in the signal corps at Camp Crowder, Mo.

PUPILS INVEST MILLION IN WAR AGAINST ENEMY

Catholic Youths Aid Bond Drives.

BY ALBERT PUGNER.

Practically every branch of America's fighting forces has benefited from more than a million dollars' worth of war equipment purchased thru sales of war bonds and stamps at 10 southwest side Catholic schools. Their total, $1,151,293, was nearly a third of the $3,890,799 school sales of the Chicago archdiocese from last September thru December.

St. Joseph's Slovenian Catholic school, Joliet, which purchased the first bomber in the archdiocese during 1943, also has purchased a Catalina patrol bomber, an Avenger torpedo bomber, two primary trainers, one liaison plane, two bomb trailers, and a jeep with sales of $340,487.50 in the four months.

Post Bomber Pictures.

A bond buying contest was held in which each grade was represented by a large bomber on the corridor walls. The 8th graders were the first to buy a bond and sent their bomber to the "front" by moving it across the hall. A week later all other grades had purchased a bond. Motion pictures, programs, and posters stimulated sales. Posters of army officers by rank were posted and as pupils increased their receipts for bond sales they advanced in ranks.

Under Sister Mary Secunda, principal, further support to the services has been given thru Red Cross work. Students have made bedroom slippers, utility bags, memorandum pads, napkins, book marks, letter writing portfolios, afghans, and wash cloths. They also have participated in Junior Red Cross activities.

Half Million at St. Gall's.

Three hospital service planes, one landing craft mechanized, six liaison planes, one personnel carrier, six jeeps, and one field ambulance can be bought with $467,370 raised in bond sales at St. Gall's school, 5514 S. Kedzie av. Three young salesmen from the 6th, 7th, and 8th grades meet weekly with Walter L. Lumpp, school bond coördinator, to plan war bond sales activities. The Rev. James D. Hishen, pastor of St. Gall's parish, and Lumpp are in charge of school bond socials which have resulted in sales to 95 per cent of the attendants.

Evidence of monthly stamp buying by at least 90 per cent of the school enrollment is the treasury department Minute Man flag which has flown over the school for 18 months.

Joliet School Active.

St. Patrick's school, Joliet, under direction of Sister Agnes Clare of the Sisters of St. Dominic, has two light tanks and one field ambulance to its credit with sales of $72,980 in war bonds. Almost enough sales have been made to purchase another field ambulance, which costs $3,430.

This school almost quadrupled its quota of 4,120 pounds in a recent paper drive by collecting 16,000 pounds.

Academy of Our Lady, 95th and Throop sts., which already has purchased a P-51 fighter plane, valued at $75,000, and five landing craft, plus a jeep, with an aggregate value of $66,000, is now working to finance the purchase of a $125,000 hospital plane with its war bond sales. The school recently received a citation of merit from the treasury department and has reached $68,250 in its current campaign.

Rally Opens Drive.

In three months, students at St. Mary of Perpetual Help, 1023 W. 32d st., sold enough stamps and bonds to purchase a $50,000 pursuit plane. The campaign began with a rally staged by the 8th grade, with songs and a dramatization. Competition spurred sales when a war scene of destruction was posted on the bulletin board. Blocks representing $100 sales gradually obliterated the scene when each room was assigned a line of 13 blocks. When all blocks were in place they formed an American flag.

St. Mary's also has received a minute man flag which it received during a patriotic program at which the pursuit plane was named "The Spirit of St. Mary."

In the weekly paper drives students have collected 88,847 pounds and they have filled 100 Red Cross boxes for children in foreign lands.

More than half way to their goal of $125,000 war bond sales, price of an ambulance plane, are the 570 girls at Lourdes High school, 4034 W. 56th st. Chairmen in each home room tabulate purchases and place the figures on the bulletin board beneath the branch of service representing their group. Seniors are represented by the navy; juniors, marines; sophomores, army, and freshmen, coast guard. The minute man flag also flies over Lourdes.

Girls Make All Plans.

All bond sales work at Visitation High school, 900 W. Garfield blvd., is carried on by its 1,007 girls who have a 1944-'45 goal of 65 jeeps, worth $75,725. A committee of seniors makes out applications for bonds, counts money, and balances books. The group has $45,435 of its expected total. Daily pep talks, playlets, and songs by students are broadcast over the school public speaking system and a large bulletin board in the main hall contains a graph showing the progress of each home room.

Enrollment in the Visitation branch of the Junior Red Cross is 100 per cent. An example of salvage drive activity is the total of 4,845

Yes, K Rations Make for Fine St. Pat's Meal

When Mr. and Mrs. William T. Curran, 10911 Hermosa av., their daughter, Celeste Marie, and 10 guests sit down to a corned beef and cabbage dinner in celebration of St. Patrick's day, the four Curran sons probably will be celebrating the same holiday with K rations at army and navy posts. The brothers are commissioned officers and three are in action overseas.

Grandparents of the four fighting Currans were born in Ireland. Mrs. Curran's father, Patrick J. Cooney, came to America from his native land in 1880 for political and religious freedom, after he had been imprisoned as a leader of the Sinn Fein movement to free Ireland. Sparkling discussions concerning Ireland's neutrality in the present conflict are common in her household, Mrs. Curran said.

Green Napkins with Meal.

Altho separated by thousands of miles, the Currans and their sons probably will be thinking and speaking of each other St. Patrick's day. Mrs. Curran has sent green napkins to the boys.

She probably will get out the family scrapbook, which revives memories of the boys' scholastic and athletic accomplishments. "All the boys attended college and all helped pay their way thru school by working on the side," proudly says Mrs. Curran.

Mark, the youngest, described by Mrs. Curran as "typically Irish," is an ensign in the navy stationed at Newport, R. I. He played varsity football at St. Ignatius High school and St. Ambrose college, Davenport, Ia. He enlisted in the V-12 program at college and was a battalion commander of students there.

Reunion in Germany.

A recent highlight in the Currans' lives was the reunion in Germany of William a 1st lieutenant with the 9th army, and Francis Eugene, a 2d lieutenant with the 3d army.

Mrs. Curran also remembers the time Francis Eugene played guard 60 minutes with the University of Iowa football team against Notre Dame. "And Iowa won, 7 to 0," adds Mrs. Curran. Francis, a graduate of Iowa where he was a member of the Delta Tau Delta fraternity, entered France on his 23d birthday.

William, a graduate of Morgan Park High school and De Paul university, entered service in December, 1943, and has served with the field artillery in France, Belgium, Holland, and Germany.

Family Well Represented.

Thomas represents the family in the Pacific area. He is a lieutenant aboard an aircraft carrier. He played end on the varsity football teams at St. Ignatius High school and Springfield college, Mobile, Ala. At college he won a medal for oratory and was valedictorian of his class.

"Tom can talk himself out of or into anything," said his mother. "He always talked himself into free rides home from Alabama, and even talked himself home the time he and four friends arrived in New York with 75 cents between them."

Among guests of the Currans Saturday will be Tom's wife and his 2 months old daughter, Virginia Ann, whom he has never seen. Other guests will include Mrs. Curran's brother, Capt. C. F. Cooney of the Lincoln park police, and his wife, her sisters, Mrs. Maurice E. Hardy and Mrs. B. G. Ziv, and their husbands. The Hardys have two sons in service, one overseas, and the Zivs have one son in service.

Sister Also Helps.

Celeste Marie, sister of the four Curran warriors, is a senior at the Academy of Our Lady and is on the girls' committee of the Frank White's Open house where she helps plan entertainment for fighters.

Another member of the Curran household the boys are anxious to get back to is Blackie, a dog of many breeds with the accent on bulldog. "The boys ask about Blackie in almost every letter," said Mrs. Curran, "especially since he was hurt by an automobile. He's getting better now and seems to know that he must live at least until the boys return."

Evening Circle.

The Norwood Park Methodist church Evening circle will sponsor a book review at 8:15 p. m. Friday in the church, Nickerson and Hood avs. "Immortal Wife" will be reviewed by Mrs. Harry Hoppe.

SISTER OF FLYER MISSING IN ACTION JOINS NURSE CORPS

Virginia M. Barrett, whose brother, Tech. Sgt. William T. Barrett of the air forces, has been missing in action over Germany since October, 1944, recently was appointed to the army nurse corps with the rank of second lieutenant. Lt. Barrett, daughter of Mrs. William T. Barrett, 6236 Massasoit av., has been assigned to Camp McCoy, Wis. She received a bachelor of science degree from Mercy hospital school of nursing of St. Francis Xavier college.

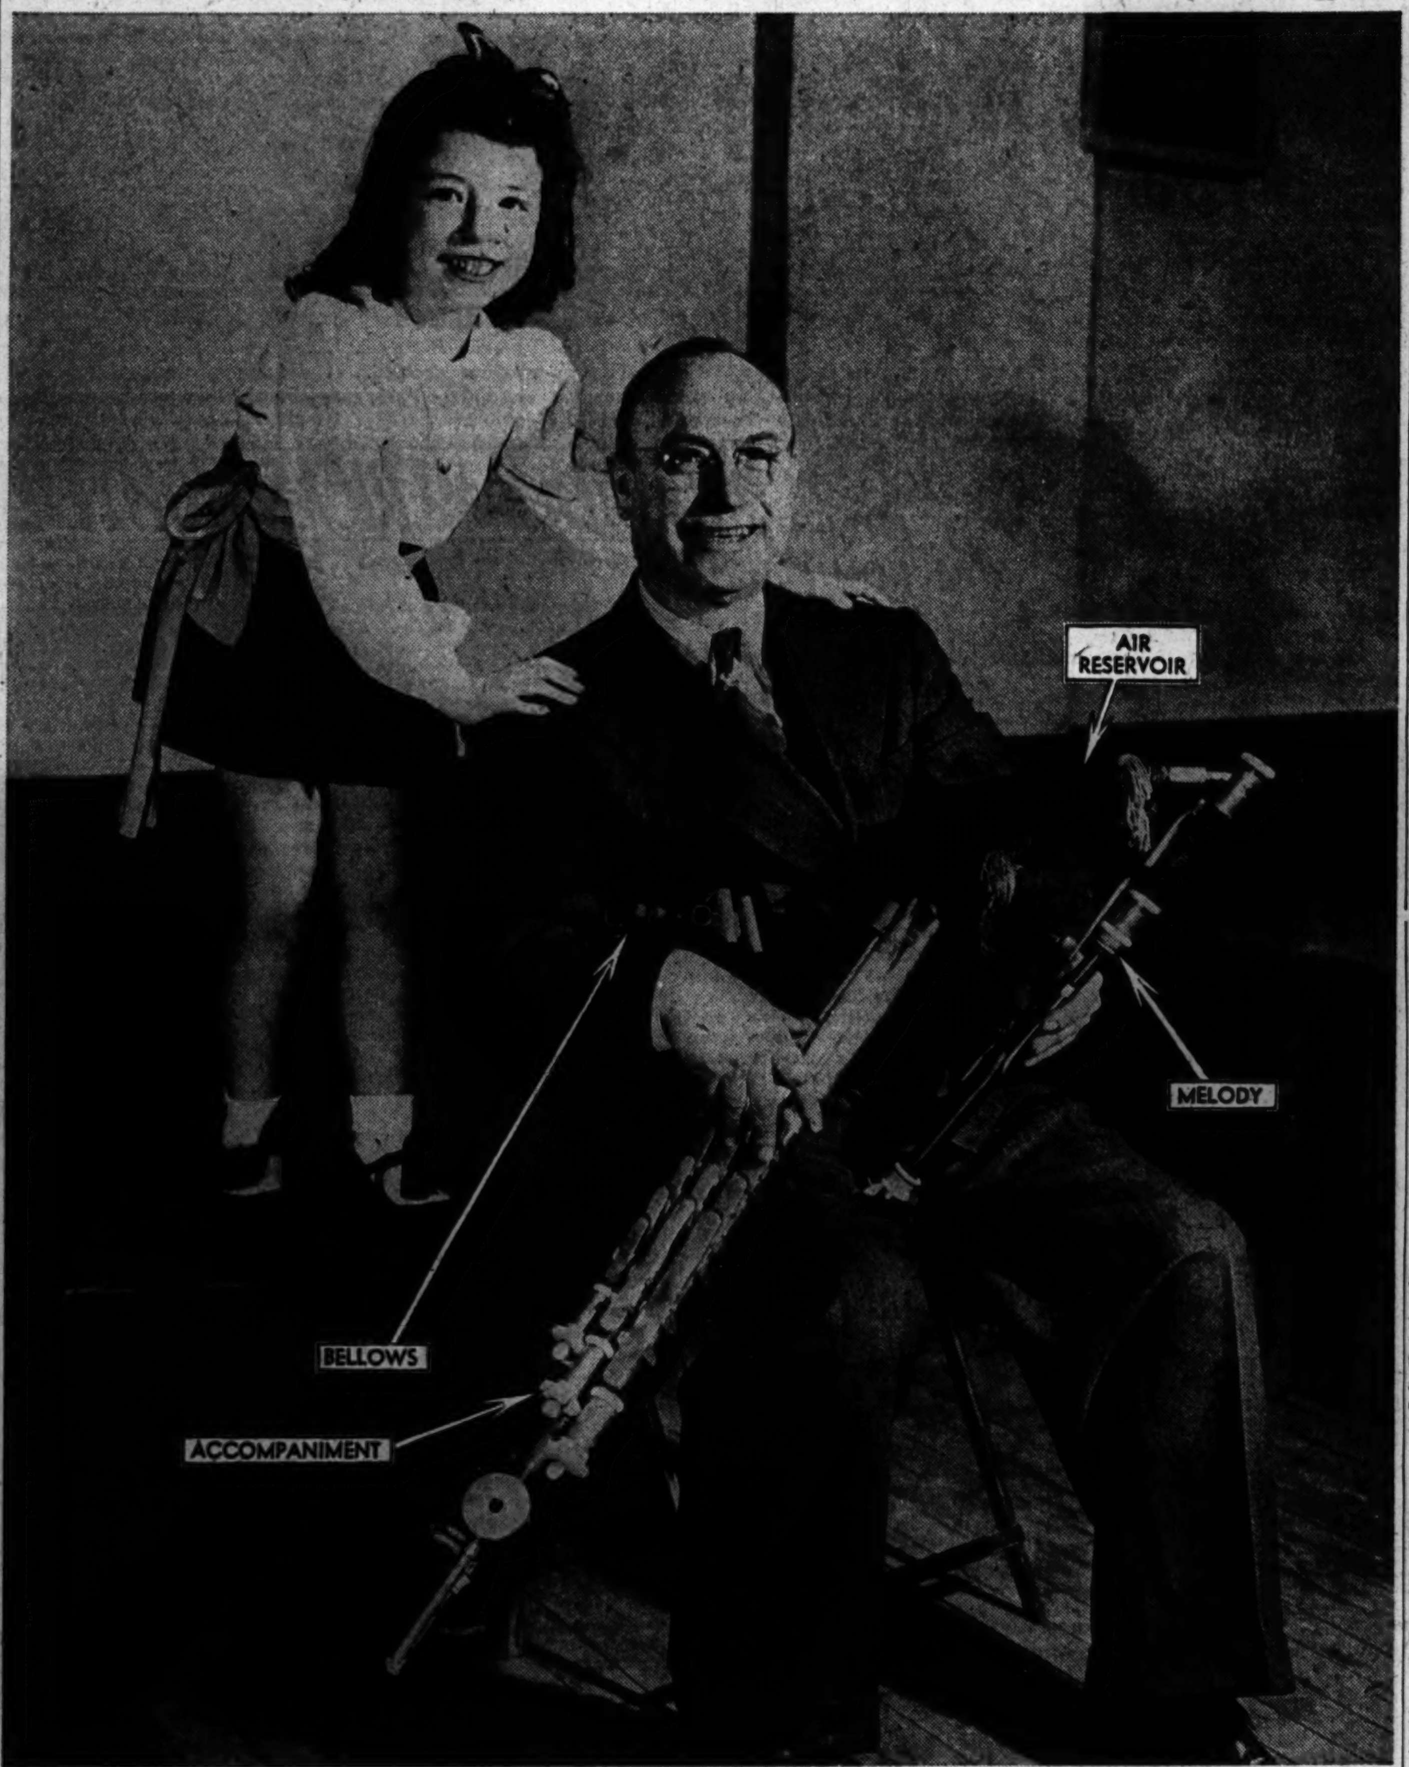
Virginia Barrett.

Her brother, a radio operator on a Flying Fortress, was awarded the air medal. He attended Lindblom and Kirkwood, Ill., High schools.

Mavournin Will Jig to Sweet Strains of Uilleann



A 5 year old girl will dance a hornpipe and jig to the music of a 200 year old pipe Saturday night at the United Irish societies annual St. Patrick's night celebration sponsored by the Kevin Barry club in Carpenter's hall, 6414 S. Bestow Club of Month Title in Blue Island

Lois Ely.

In 13 years the Blue Island Junior league has grown from eight timid but eager Girl Scouts to 126 competent young women who recently have been honored by having their club chosen Club of the Month by the General Federation of Women's Clubs. They were chosen from 16,500 women's clubs thruout the nation.

Part of the success of the organization is due to its tradition of selecting competent, enthusiastic leaders. This year's president, Miss Lois Ely, 2449 W. York st., Blue Island, was given nation-wide recognition Feb. 24 when she was designated for the honor roll on the Citizens of Tomorrow broadcast. A 17 year old senior at Blue Island High school, Miss Ely has a deep interest in current affairs and is seriously interested in dramatics.

Other officers of the club are Joyce Krueger, vice president; Nancy Kough, secretary, and Marjory Mohr, treasurer.

The club was formed in 1932 with two meetings a month devoted to charitable and social activities. Later, when its program was expanded, the club affiliated first with the Junior Woman's club of Blue Island, then with the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs, and last January with the General Federation of Women's Clubs.

RADIO VESSEL APACHE RELAYS M'ARTHUR VOICE

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

A coast to coast audience listened in a few evenings ago when Gen. MacArthur turned the civilian government back to the Philippines and again last Sunday on the Army hour when he participated in ceremonies raising the American flag on the battered pole at Corregidor.

On the first broadcast Gen. MacArthur spoke from the presidential palace. Elaborate preparations were made to assure the success of the broadcast and as a result Gen. MacArthur's resonant voice came thru clear and strong.

Act to Block Jamming.

For 24 hours preceding the ceremonies, troops guarded land telephone and power lines as a precaution against Japanese cutting the lines. To lessen the possibility of jamming by the Japs, American networks were not allowed to make any announcement of the broadcast until a half hour before it started.

A signal corps mobile unit also was employed which shortwaved the ceremonies to the Apache, the radio vessel which had moved into Lingayen gulf at the beginning of the Luzon operations. Thru this ship more than half a million words of press copy had already been shortwaved back to the United States.

On the first MacArthur broadcast Press Wireless used its transmitter for voice and beamed his words both to Los Angeles and to San Francisco so that a choice could be made of the better circuit.

Schechter in Charge.

At the time of the invasion of Luzon a broadcasting unit mounted on a two and a half ton truck drove out onto the beach from a landing ship. Broadcasts were short waved back to the Apache, which relayed them on to their destination.

Representing the four major networks on Luzon are Don Bell for Mutual [Royal Arch Gunnison has returned to the United States]; George Folster of NBC; William J. Dunn, CBS, and Arthur Feldman of the Blue.

Five Bull's-eyes Coming Up—Soon!

Five young southwest side sharpshooters train their guns on targets in the rifle range at the Englewood Y. M. C. A., 6545 S. Union av. Two teams from the association are entered in the National Rifle association tournament which ends Thursday. Practicing (left to right) are Ted Meyers, Charles Hansen, Frank Millar, Ronald Lundberg, and Dean Upp. Local tournaments are held annually among different groups under A. R. Davis, rangemaster.

This WEEK in the GARDEN

Monday, March 12.

Transplant all seedlings into flats or pots just as soon as they can be handled. Seedlings left in the seed box are likely to grow too large for quick rooting in the soil.

Use proper soil [half sand and loam or half peat and sand], a not too heavy covering, and use care when watering so the seeds are not washed away or the soil piled up over them. Shade during direct sunshine.

Tuesday, March 13.

It is not too late to buy tubers of the highly colored fancy leaved caladiums to obtain a good plant for use in a shady spot in the garden. Start by placing just beneath the surface in a pot of sandy soil and when well above ground shift to a pot according to the size of the plant—a 4 inch pot is a fair size for most started plants.

Wednesday, March 14.

The hardy annuals can be sown directly in the open ground as early as the soil can be worked. These consist of such desirable kinds as the calendula, petunia, nigella, four o'clock, sweet peas, morning glory, California poppy, Shirley poppy, and many others.

Thursday, March 15.

Sweet peas can be sown now and the soil should be well enriched. Make a shallow trench and apply well decayed manure or commercial fertilizer. Sow the seeds carefully and good growth should be obtained. As the plants grow the trench can be filled around the base.

Friday, March 16.

Order all seeds now to avoid substitutions. Just what variety to buy is largely a matter of personal choice, altho some varieties are better for the home gardener who wants vegetables for the table gathered directly from his own garden.

Saturday, March 17.

Prepared in coöperation with Garfield Park conservatory.

An Advance Look at Theater Bookings for Spring

By Claudia Cassidy.

Playgoers are insatiable folk, always wanting to know what next. The best I can offer, after "Rosalinda" and "Catherine Was Great," is the brief parade of spring shows bringing "Sing Out, Sweet Land" to the Shubert Great Northern Saturday night, March 31, "One Touch of Venus" to the opera house April 2, our own company of "Dear Ruth" to the Harris April 16, "Othello" to the Erlanger April 9, and "Jacobowsky and the Colonel" to the same theater May 7, both of the latter on American Theater society subscription. Which reminds me, several people have written asking if you have to belong to the society to buy tickets for its shows. No, you don't. Membership just guarantees tickets at a discount.

Mary Martin.

But facts are one thing in the theater, and gossip is quite a livelier matter. There is talk about "Snafu" coming, and a Chicago company of "Anna Lucasta" is being considered. Mike Todd hopes to have "Up in Central Park" duplicated for us as soon as possible. It is the pride of his life, and one of the biggest hits in New York. He probably wants to get it here before fall comes around with that booking of "Carmen Jones," the return of "Oklahoma!" and Max Gordon's sprouting idea of a sumptuous revival of "The Great Waltz," which so many unfortunates thought they were buying when they got stuck with "The Waltz King."

The booking of "Sing Out, Sweet Land" sounds like a fine way to reopen what is now the Shubert Great Northern. This is the Theater Guild's salute to American folk and popular music put together by Walter Kerr, and presumably it comes to us complete with Alfred Drake and Burl Ives of "Rock Candy Mountain" fame.

Aside from Mary Martin and John Boles, any resemblance to the original cast of "One Touch of Venus" is purely incidental. The musical has been running so long almost every one else has gone off on presumably primrose paths to other plays. James Sheridan now has the role created by Kenny Baker, Ruth Bond substitutes for acrid Paula Lawrence, Jack Mann for Comedian Teddy Hart, and Atty Van Den Berg for dancing Sono Osato. Agnes de Mille did the ballets to Kurt Weill's score, and if you want a preview of Ogden Nash's lyrics and the book he wrote with S. J. Perelman, they have been handsomely published.

"Dear Ruth" is one of those comedies for which producers pray. Norman Krasna wrote a hit in 10 characters and a single modest setting, and Moss Hart directed it for Brother Bernard, co-producer with Joseph H. Hyman. When this sort of play catches on it coins money and is a headache powder to the office plagued by a huge hit that can't make money no matter what business it does because of greedy overhead. "Dear Ruth" isn't anything much as a play, according to report, but it is a string of gags deftly strung together to make a captivating show. Its title comes from letters written by an enamored soldier to an adolescent imp who masquerades in ink as her beautiful big sister. Rosemary Rice plays the imp, Augusta Dabney is Ruth, and William Harrigan plays the judge who is their father.

Of all the season's plays, none has stirred quite the curiosity that surrounds Paul Robeson's "Othello." That four weeks at the Erlanger is going to be a short time to hold the crowds that want to go, and as Mr. Robeson is booking concerts for next season, it looks like now or never to see him as Shakespeare's Moor. The ticket sale will not open for some time, but mail orders are piling up at the theater, and if you want to add yours to the heap, the price range is from $3.60 down the usual scale.

It looks sad to see "The Glass Menagerie" advertised in the New York papers, but I am glad to see it is going in simply as a play by Tennessee Williams. None of that "greatest play in 50 years" business. The worst thing that can happen to something good is to be oversold in advance. Audiences are strange critters, critics among them, and they like to make their own decisions. Let something fine creep up on them and they delight in discovery; shout its glories from the housetops and their backs go up like a suspicious cat's. Discovering "The Glass Menagerie" for yourself is a rare adventure in playgoing.

Max Gordon is about ready to invade New York with that long planned musical, "The Firebrand of Florence," which adds Kurt Weill tunes and some Ira Gershwin collaboration to Edwin Justus Mayer's play about Cellini, a resonant hit of the 1920s when Joseph Schildkraut and Frank Morgan were in the cast. Earl Wrightson and Melville Cooper have those roles in the musical, and Jo Mielziner designed the production, which has Catherine Littlefield ballets. Mr. Wrightson is a baritone, like John Raitt, who plays the Schildkraut role in the musical "Liliom" known as "Carrousel." Yet in older days, both undoubtedly would have been written for tenors. Aren't there any tenors any more, or has the baritone, long the villain of opera, come into his romantic own?

Thomas Job has made a free adaptation of Emile Zola's "Therese Raquin," which is being called "Cousin Theresa" while a cast is assembled. Margaret Webster may direct, with Eva Le Gallienne and Dame May Whitty, Miss Webster's mother, in the cast.

THE GOLDEN TOTEM

BY BARRETT WILLOUGHBY

(Copyright: 1945: By Barrett Willoughby.)

INSTALMENT X.

"AS SOON as I got word he was missing I dropped everything and came over here," Greer continued. "Young Faber, just home after his graduation, met me. He—blamed me. He wouldn't even allow me to help search for Alan's body. But I waited here and to keep from going crazy I wandered about the country. It was during one of my rambles that I stumbled on the outcropping which I've since developed into the Golden Totem." Greer got up, took a turn about the room, and again sank into his chair.

"That must have been a bad time for young Faber. His father's death; my finding gold on the family property, and the discovery that he had no title to that property. It must have been then that he staked Melody Hill back here. After the funeral in Juneau he came back here and, to my surprise proposed that we combine our holdings, and develop them as one property. I—— But why should I bore you with all this, Lynn."

"O, please go on. I'm intensely interested."

"Well, I was almost certain Court's Melody Hill ground had no value as a mine. But I was positive the Golden Totem was rich—rich enough for both of us. And I wanted desperately to do something for Alan's son. Then, to be honest, Court did have something of value to contribute to the combine—not a mine, but his name." My idea was to work the Golden Totem vein first, giving Faber a good salary and a share in every dollar taken out. I further proposed that after I'd taken $500,000 from the venture, I'd quit and turn the entire property back to Faber without asking another cent."

"How generous, Mr. Greer. He couldn't have asked more than that."

"He did, tho. By virtue of his new mining engineer's degree, he insisted on dictating both the method of financing and development. My wider experience in these matters made it impossible for me to agree. And so——" Greer shrugged —— "The stubborn young ape went off to his hilltop in a huff, vowing he'd handle his own property as he pleased."

Greer, obviously under a tension, came to his feet and stood looking down at Lynn. "The trouble is, if he succeeds in unloading his layout on some unsuspecting outsider, it will in the end be bad, not only for the Golden Totem but for his own future in the mining game. . . . I don't know just what I can do about it, Lynn. It's—it's not easy for me to stand out against Alan's son." Abruptly he walked to the window and with his back toward Lynn, stood looking down the inlet.

She was profoundly touched. With her gaze on his fine, broad shouldered back, she was wracking her brain for just the right sympathetic remark when Perry's breezy greeting put an end to the scene. "Hi, Goldilocks!" He came in hatless, tubbed, groomed for dinner, the only meal he took at Illahee.

"O, hi, darling!" Lynn sprang up and ran to him. He put his arms about her. "Still working overtime, I see."

It was Greer who answered. "Pay day, you know, Holloway." He turned from the window and, taking an envelope from a drawer in his desk, held it out to Lynn. "Ladies first. The initial instalment on your salary, my dear."

Lynn's face lighted as she drew five new $10 bills from the envelope. "O, look, Perry! Fifty dollars in real money! The first I ever earned." Waving the bills above her head, she did a little war dance where she stood.

Not since Carmel days had Perry been so glowing-eyed and amusing as he was that evening. "We've got to celebrate pay day," he declared, a subdued excitement emanating from him. And before dinner he mixed for Lynn and himself a cocktail of his own invention which he christened "Mamma's Downfall." After dinner, when they were all having coffee in the living room, he sat at the piano and burlesqued Hollywood's ranking musical comedian in a way that brought Mrs. Strum to the door to share in the laughter.

He spent a few minutes working out an accompaniment. Then, half-singing, half-talking, he rendered something he called "Arctic Wooing," an extemporaneous ditty in which he absurdly misused names of Alaska home brew, skin boats, and wearing apparel. After each verse he looked at his audience and gave out with the chorus, confidentially, sotto voce, the spice of the devil in his long lashed hazel eyes:

"And so, dear friends——

"He grabbed his huge macoola,
And twirled his gay bidarka,
Then kissed her on the oomiak
And spanked her on the parka."

Lynn's heart soared. The barrier Perry's recent misconduct had reared between them went down under a renewed wave of love. Her Perry—back again! This was a red letter evening. It promised to be the happiest she had known since coming to Illahee.

And then, soon after Tonglaw had taken away the coffee tray, both Greer and Perry bade her good night and left the lodge.

She felt somewhat deflated. Since it was too early to go to bed she decided to send Tonglaw to the office for Greer's press book. She could begin pasting in the unmounted clippings tonight.

At her call Tonglaw came and stood awaiting her orders. His black eyes rested on her without expression. He had shown no further sign of hostility since the day of her arrival, but she had a queer feeling that he was always watching her. She started now to describe the book she wanted him to fetch her, but he lifted a brown hand in a gesture that must have come down to him from some authoritative Thlinget forebearer. "Yes, Miss Clonard. I'm familiar with Mr. Greer's press book."

On his return from the office he placed everything necessary for her work on a card table before the fireplace. The large book covered more than half the table. It had an elaborate cover of carved wood. On the front in bas relief appeared a totem pole on the bank of a stream with a miner squatting by a campfire. The background was a pyramid mountain with the sun raying out over the top. Across the bottom in raised block letters appeared the name: Jefferson Greer—Alaska.

Idly she began leafing thru the pages of neatly mounted clippings. They began some 15 years before—news items from Alaska papers setting forth the establishment by Jefferson Greer of various development enterprises. But as Lynn turned pages she found an increasing number of items from metropolitan newspapers—New York, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Chicago—feature stories for the most part carrying feminine by-lines and liberal in the use of photographs and adjectives.

Lynn's eyes swept over the captions: Palatial wilderness lodge. . . . Economic problems never trouble wealthy Alaska bachelor with gold mine in his back yard. . . . Dreams in front of his fireplace of free-milling quartz that carries thousands of dollars in gold.

"Mrs. Strum!" Lynn called to the housekeeper, who came into the room just then. "Come look at these pictures of Illahee."

The older woman glanced over Lynn's shoulder. "O—those. Yes, I saw them in a magazine before I came up here to work."

"O-ho!" cried Lynn, teasingly. "So that's what lured you up here! Well, I don't blame you, Mrs. Strum. 'Wealthy Alaska bachelor with gold mine in back yard' would lure any widow."

There was no answering smile on Mrs. Strum's face. She said soberly, "I'm not a widow. And—Mr. Greer wouldn't look at a woman as old as I am with an eye to marriage. Besides, he's not the marrying kind. He——" She checked herself, turned away, and started gathering up ash trays.

Lynn's eyes followed her. This was not the first time Mrs. Strum's manner had puzzled her.

She was winding the clock on the bookcase now. "That reminds me," she said. "I must set my alarm tonight. Mr. Greer is leaving on the early morning tide for Juneau to pick up the Baxter party coming in on the next steamer."

"How many are coming?" asked Lynn, returning to the clippings.

"I've prepared for five."

Lynn had noticed that Greer's favorite picture of himself, used again and again, was the one that showed him in his reindeer parka holding Moccasin, the big malemute, on a short leash. She read, under one of these: "'Yes,' said the big Alaskan with his shy grin, 'I always bring my lead dog south with me. I'd be mighty lonesome on the paved trails of civilization without old Moccasin.'"

Lynn shrugged and wondered, a little resentfully, why Greer never paid any attention to MacFarlane. Aloud she remarked to Mrs. Strum:

"What in the world has happened, darling?"

"That lead dog of Mr. Greer's is a splendid creature. I'm looking forward to seeing him."

"When?" asked the housekeeper, pausing on her way to the kitchen with a collection of ash trays.

"When I go to the mine."

Mrs. Strum looked puzzled. "Why, Moccasin is not at the mine. Mr. Greer boards him in a kennel down in San Francisco. He's not much of a dog lover, you know."

"Boards the leader of his dog team in San Francisco!" exclaimed Lynn. "Well, for Pete's sake, what does he use him for down there?"

Mrs. Strum went on to the kitchen without answering.

Lynn went to bed early and propped herself up in pillows to read. The Lodge was quiet, but from the office back in the trees came occasional yips and snatches of song. Payday, she thought, pleasantly aware of her own 50 dollars under her pillow. They're all glad, like me.

She grinned sympathetically as she recognized the voices of Al and Bill uproariously duetting their favorite ditty:

Don't go in the lion's cage tonight, mother darlin'.

A comfortable friendship had sprung up between her and the brothers. She chatted with them almost daily when they came down to the float in the evening to bail out their battered old skiff, the Veteran Virgin; and they had completely won her by their kindness to MacFarlane who, for some reason, shared their fondness for the Veteran. When they found that the Scotty liked to sit in the stern of the skiff, Bill actually brought his pillow from the bunkhouse to make the seat more comfortable for the little dog.

Lynn must have dozed, for MacFarlane's growl woke her. Some one was knocking on her door.

"Lynn! Goldilocks! Toss something on and come out on the gallery."

In the dark Lynn dived into a robe and flung open her door. Perry stood there in the dimness. "What in the world has happened, darling?"

He laughed and she caught the smell of liquor on his breath. "Nothing, baby. I—just wanted to see you." His arms went about her, his cheek came down to rest on top of her head. His voice grew soft, cajoling. "Look, Goldilocks. I'm in a spot. I—I made a bet with a fellow at the bunkhouse, and he insists that I put up 50 dollars—cash money. It makes me look like a bum, because I've got nothing but my pay check. Of course, the boss will get it cashed for me when he goes to town tomorrow, but that's not now. I—I wondered if—er—you'd mind letting me take that fifty Greer gave you this evening?"

A queer, blank stillness held Lynn immobile for a moment. Then she drew back in the circle of his arms and looked up at him. "Why, Perry, I—I——"

"See darling," he went on hurriedly. "I want it only until I get my check cashed. I—O, well, if that's the way you feel!" His arms dropped from her. His tone was hurt, resigned. "If you can't even trust me with your money for three days—"

She darted back into her room, snatched the money from under her pillow and, returning, thrust it into his hand. "There, silly." She managed to laugh as she closed his long brown fingers over the bills: "Run along. I'll be seeing you tomorrow during lunch hour as usual."

Lynn went back to bed wondering at the sudden depression that had come upon her. Money, as money, had no value to her. Gladly would she share anything she had with Perry; yet, to have him come so promptly to borrow from her, a woman and for the purpose of making a bet, gave her an unhappy sense of pause. It seemed to belittle her, and at the same time it did something drastic to her respect for Perry. The method he had used, she suddenly remembered, was identical with what Julie used to call, with gay bitterness, "the rush act." A method employed by her aunt's husband that Julie couldn't write stories fast enough to support him after the first year.

"Is that pattern repeating in my own life?" Lynn asked herself as she tossed on her pillow. She remained uneasy and unable to recapture that lovely sense of oneness with Perry she had known during the dinner hour. Resolutely she closed her eyes and willed herself toward sleep.

She was just slipping over the border when a forbidden memory leaped into her mind, possessing her, steeping her in the still warmth of remembrance. That last look Court Faber had given her as they stood on the shore of Martin lake. The tone of his voice saying, "Good-by—until I see you again, Lyneen."

Earlier than usual next morning Lynn leaped out of bed and ran to the window overlooking the cove. It was the sort of day she loved, a strange, tranquil day, sunless yet bright from the radiance of silver clouds and still shining water, with the mountains an unbelievable shade of soft kings' blue. A weather breeder, Greer called such a day.

She saw, by the empty place at the float, that the Prospector had already left for Juneau to meet the Baxter party. Greer was gone! Her heart lifted to a new freedom; a beginning again sense of happiness. At last she and Perry would have an evening alone together at Illahee. Two evenings—because Greer had been sure he would not return until the third day.

She reached the office half an hour earlier than usual. She could hear Tonglaw still at his morning work in Greer's bedroom. The door to the sitting room was open revealing the round, green felted table on which stood empty bottles, brimming ash trays, scattered decks of cards.

His voice was disapproving. "I'll close the door and finish; and then go out the front way so I won't bother you."

Before settling down to work, Lynn felt a gay urge to call Perry on the makeshift telephone line that connected the mine and the office. But she conquered the temptation and sat down to her desk.

She was pleasantly conscious of the morning that lay ahead, free from interruption. Tho Greer was a considerate employer, he had no regular office hours. Sometimes he didn't come near all day. Again he'd come in without speaking and sit silent at his desk running thru lists of names and addresses, and juggling figures on a pad. Often he dictated to her all morning.

Greer had many ways that appealed to her. He seemed to know, instinctively, those times when a great loneliness for Julie was upon her. He would start Lynn talking about her gay little aunt, and keep her at it until, by the magic of her own words, she brought Julie nearer to her.

But what Lynn liked best of all about Greer was his deep affection for her father. One evening she brought Dick Clonard's framed photograph down to the living room so that her employer might see it. For some minutes he sat with it in his hand studying it in an emotional silence. At last he said in his deep, low tones, "That's Dick, all right. I always loved that devil-may-care grin of his." He glanced up at Lynn. "Would you mind if I sent this picture in to Juneau to have a copy made for myself?"

The framed picture had been at the photographer's a week now. But it was only this morning that Lynn remembered, with a qualm of dismay, Henriette's check. In the press of her new duties she had completely forgotten that she had placed it in the back of the frame. It was too late to do anything about it now. Greer was to bring the picture back when he returned home with the Baxter party.

The noon hour was almost over when she heard footsteps outside. She jumped up, a gay greeting on her chair, feeling the joy go out of her. Greer, not Perry, entered.

"O-o-o-o! I thought you had gone to town!"

He smiled at her. "My, my, what a tell-tale little face it has! I'm sorry, Lynn. But things happened that made it necessary for me to send Perry in my place."

"But—he went without saying good-by to me!"

"Don't hold that against him, my dear. He and Al and Bill all overslept. They had just time to get aboard and make the tide. Cheer up, now, and put on your little green jacket. I've got a present for you down at the float."

The present was a white rowboat with a new outboard motor attached to the stern. "Your new command, Lynn."

"Mine!" She clasped her hands and looked at the craft with incredulous delight. And then she saw the gold and black lettered name on the bows:

JULIE

"Julie," she whispered, her throat tightening. And something that was kin to the warmth of Julie's laughing, protecting presence seemed to some back and enfold her.

"Yes, I named it for your aunt because—well, because you told me she always made you happy."

For a moment Lynn couldn't speak. After she had winked her eyes free from the sudden mist that obscured them, she looked up at him and said, "You're nice. You are nice."

What Has Gone Before

Lynn Clonard, alone in the world, spends her Easter vacation with one of her Aunt Julie's friends and meets Perry Holloway, gay and irresponsible, who is heading for Alaska. Perry asks her to put the Clonard motto, "When two roads open up before me I choose the more venturesome," to work—to marry him, that they may go to Alaska together to seek their fortune. They become engaged and will marry at Christmas time. Perry wires her he has a job as foreman in a mine and pleads with her to come immediately to Alaska and marry him there. Lynn has enough money for a small trousseau and a one-way passage. Court Faber, a young mining engineer, rescues Lynn and her dog from an accident on the boat. Perry is late meeting the boat, arriving with two friends—all three hopelessly drunk. At the hotel Lynn tells Perry she will not marry him. Jefferson Greer is approached by Faber and refuses to grant him a right of way to Faber's claim. Lynn finds she has less than $2. Greer tricks Lynn into asking for a job as his secretary at his mine, the Golden Totem. En route to the mine Lynn learns that Perry is aboard the boat and that Greer is Perry's boss. She demands they return at once to Juneau. Out canoeing, Lynn sees Faber and Tonglow, Greer's houseman, studying over papers. Perry arrives, repentant, asking for another chance. From him she learns of the dangerous work done by Court in the mines. Out walking, she meets Flan O'Hara and Court, who is visibly impressed when he discovers she is not married. Greer, riding out of the woods, joins them, leading a saddled pony for Lynn.

Lotte Lehmann Anxious to Get Back to Home and Sunshine

LOTTE LEHMANN had a Daiquiri and a mixed grill as she explained why she has to get back home to Santa Barbara and so will not be on hand for that "Rosenkavalier" so many of us had set our hearts on. Black and white plumes nodded from her spring straw as she looked out on the lake, which was in grim mood that day out of sheer contrariness, and the California Chamber of Commerce would have gloated to hear what she said. Not that she maligned us. O, no. Lehmann has a fine time wherever she is, even jaunting down the cabless street with dapples of rain threatening her new bonnet. But you should have heard her about her lovely outdoor life at home, where her dogs, the parrot, and the pet bluejay named Oscar are impatient for her coming.

At home she wears slacks and has a time for herself. "But I do not all match as Janette does," she hastens to add, Janette being Jeanette MacDonald. "When Janette comes for a lesson her slacks are so [a knife edge sweep here to indicate the crease], and if she is rusty here [the slacks] she also is rusty here [the sandals] and here" [the ornament for the hair]. Lehmann just wears slacks with not necessarily harmonious accessories, while busy with her singing, her pets, her painting, and her writing. O yes, she is writing another book, this one called "More Than Singing," and she has spurned her portrait painting painting to illustrate the songs for Schubert's song cycle, "Winterreise." A limited, de luxe edition of the latter should be a collector's item.

Her happiness is so real it pricked a reminiscent twinge, and it sent me to her autobiography, "Midway in My Song," just completed at the time Hitler marched into Austria. With that conquest Lehmann gave up her home, and in the book's postscript, dated May, 1938, she tells why. Here it is, in part:

Lottie Lehman.

"I cannot serve politics. I can only serve that which always has been and still is the mission of my life. I cannot paint political boundaries on the measureless ways of the art world. I will not, and cannot probe whether people to whom I give my art are good or bad, believers or unbelievers; nor does it interest me to what race they belong, or to what politics they subscribe. I want to be an artist—nothing else. I want to live in my world which is more beautiful and loftier than all man made countries or all states, my world of music. I want to sing the songs that I love, without questioning to what race the composer belonged. God put music in my heart and a voice in my throat. I serve Him when I serve music. I no longer understand the land of my birth.

"And I who was born a German, and who was bound to Austria with the bonds of deepest love—I stand now at the door of America. I want to become an American citizen. I am sure that I shall find my third home here and that I shall not need again to wander. I want to become a good American. But that which was my beloved homeland will live on for me in my songs."

Their Home Is Music.

Sounds like Bruno Walter, doesn't it?—for he is another who never can be dispossessed because his home is music. Just last Sunday Walter was saying to Olin Downes, "Music has to be free. It is out of the power of statesman, tyrant or humanitarian to bestow other gifts upon it, least of all to attempt to condition in any way its expression."

America has been incalculably richer that this is their home, tho they belong to the world, and now that they insist, however unreasonably, that they are too old for all we want them to do, we take them, gratefully, on their own terms. If Lehmann can be persuaded to sing the Marschallin, that would be like Walter's decision to conduct our Mozart. But as far back as 1938 Lehmann was writing, "With ever greater inclination I fled to the magic kingdom of the lied." We share the riches of her Schubert, Brahms, and Schumann, and next season even if we do not get her "Rosenkavalier," we may have Strauss in recital, combined with Hugo Wolf.

Happy In Her Present Life.

For altho Mme. Lehmann exercised the perfectionist's prerogative of being dissatisfied with her superb Schubert recital at Orchestra hall—she had never sung there before, and she was, she says, a little confused by its unaccustomed acoustics and a little tired from her concert tour and the hullabaloo of "Rosenkavalier" at the Met—she is happiest now in the life that permits her to soak up California sunshine most of the year and to concentrate her singing time on lieder, where she is convinced she has most to offer. She enjoys the flexibility of the recital stage, where with a clairvoyant accompanist like Paul Ulanowsky she can follow the mood of the moment, knowing he will sense it instantly and reflect it at the piano. I understand and sympathize with all these things—yet just one more Marschallin would be a treasure to those who remember it, a revelation to those who missed its magic.

As for the magic of her lieder, who can solve it? She is her own best clew. She begins with the text, building up the song from the foundation of the words. "My interpretations," she says, "flow from a deep sense of poetry in the music. The actual sound of the words never leaves me. I feel that they complete the music and never should be swallowed up in it. The music is the shining path over which the poet passes to give his song to the world."

If Lehmann never sang another word in her life, which heaven forbid, that last sentence could go a long way toward explaining what happened when she sang. It can be the wise young singer's key to the door of music.

Opera Theater.

Opera or theater, no matter which you choose to emphasize, Opera Theater will make another bow at the Eighth Street theater the night of March 25, with Cimarosa's "Il Matrimonio Segreto," sung in Italian with English dialog. Giacomo Rimini, long a member of the Chicago Opera, and the man chosen by Toscanini to sing "Falstaff," is artistic director, and Rosa Raisa, beloved opera star, is regisseur. Opera Theater made a successful debut at the Civic theater in 1940 with the same intimate opera.

Oscar Levant to Be Soloist at 2 Concerts

By Albert Goldberg.

Oscar Levant.

Having previously this season played only three works by American composers, none of them new and only one by a living writer, Désiré Defauw will devote both the Tuesday and Thursday-Friday programs of the Chicago Symphony orchestra this week to a veritable festival of American music. Thirteen American composers are represented on the programs, 11 of them still living. Four of the composers are residents or natives of Chicago, and seven of the compositions will be played here for the first time. E. Power Biggs, Boston organist, will be soloist at the Tuesday concert, giving first local performances of a Prelude and Allegro for string orchestra and organ by Walter Piston, head of the Harvard University School of Music, and a Classic Concerto for the same combination by the Chicagoan, Leo Sowerby. Oscar Levant, American pianist, Gershwin disciple and former music expert of "Information Please," will play Gershwin's Concerto in F for the first time at these concerts on Thursday and Friday.

Of extra-musical interest will be the appearance of Carl Sandburg, famous poet and biographer of Abraham Lincoln, to read the excerpts from Lincoln's writings which form a part of Aaron Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait," a work commissioned by Andre Kostelanetz and first performed here by that conductor at a Soldiers' Field concert in 1942. Other participants in the week-end concert will be a chorus of students from Northwestern university, who will assist in the performance of a concert version of John Alden Carpenter's "Skyscrapers," "a ballet of American life."

Of the new compositions to be played, Felix Borowski's "Requiem for a Child" was only recently completed, and the composer asserts that he had no individual child in mind. William Schuman's "Side Show" is from music he wrote for Billy Rose's "Seven Lively Arts" revue, and is in the manner of a barker endeavoring to attract attention to a side show. Deems Taylor's "Fanfare for Russia" is one of a series of such pieces commissioned two years ago from various composers by the Cincinnati Symphony orchestra. Virgil Thomson's "The Plough That Broke the Plains" originally was part of incidental music to a documentary film issued by the United States department of agriculture. The composer is music critic of the New York Herald-Tribune. Roy Harris' "Chorale" is not a new piece, having been composed in 1932.

The orchestra will give a special "Pop" concert with an all Tschaikowsky program under Mr. Defauw's direction this afternoon at 3:30.

Willie Shore to Open at Chez Paree Thursday Night

Comedian Back from Extended Overseas Tour

By Will Davidson.

Boyd Raeburn.

Chicago show business is welcoming home this week one of its favorite and worthiest sons, Comedian Willie Shore. Willie had just got the breaks that mean big time stardom when the war came along, and immediately he took his vast talents overseas to entertain the soldiers in England and Europe.

For more than two years he has been doing that at a rate which astounded every one. USO officials, soldiers, civilians, and reporters are unanimous that in Willie show business has one of its greatest civilian figures of this war. It will be especially good to welcome him back as an entertainer when he opens Thursday night at the Chez Paree. The boy is very, very good, my friends.

With Willie will be Donna Dae, the former Fred Waring vocalist who was curfewed out of an engagement in the Camellia House recently, and Dorice Midgley, tap dancer. Olive Bernard has six new routines for the Adorables.

Other openings of the week are topped by Woody Herman's appearance on Friday in the College Inn of the Hotel Sherman. Woody easily ranks with the very few at the top of the swing band ladder and his four week run will be the signal for considerable rejoicing.

That same night the Tavern room of the Bismarck hotel will introduce Vela Montoya, Spanish dancer. She'll do some of her numbers in collaboration with Allan Kane, the zanie and highly talented violinist-maestro of the Tavern.

On Wednesday the Blackhawk adjusts its floor show again, this time to a more or less permanent position. Al [Whitey] Roberts, comical juggler and magician, takes over as emcee and chief entertainer, and the Three Claire Sisters carry on their team taps. Del Courtney and his boys—and That Girl—also stay with us, glory be!

AT BISMARCK

Buddy Franklin, back from the war, has become a prime favorite in the Walnut room of the Bismarck hotel, where Talia is starring in the current show.
[Seymour Photo.]

The curfew-harried Latin Quarter will drop Bernie Cummins' orchestra Thursday, probably turning again to Irv Kostal, who did a good job there so long. Bert Wheeler voluntarily left the show after a start handicapped by insufficient preparation, and both Dorothy Donegan, the piano star, and Lou [Lapidus] Holtz are being added to the cast tonight.

Woody Herman will be replacing Boyd Raeburn, the Chicago favorite who has just come into his own in the hot band field. I was only able to catch Boyd once, on opening night, and he hadn't had time to tone down his too powerful brass section to fit the low ceilinged College Inn. There is plenty of versatile strength in Boyd's band. Alto sax devotees, among whom I'm afraid I can't number myself, will like Johnny Bothwell's solos—especially his work in the "Summertime" arrangement. Johnny is an excellent technician. I think Boyd best demonstrated the flexibility and the savvy of his organization in his finale—"Concerto for the Duke." Here the familiar Ellington tunes found elegant expression.

Don D'Arcy and Margie Wood are the Raeburn vocalists.

The Inn's show is lively and amusing. Mardoni and Louise, long favorites in the Sherman's hot box, repeat their fast magic and telepathy work, and Prof. Backwards—otherwise Jimmy Edmonson—demonstrates a dead pan virtuosity in the Joe Miller travelogue vein, and then proves something or other by rapidly pronouncing and writing backwards any word given him by the audience.

That bawdy bard, that leering Lucifer, Dwight Fiske—darling of the Smut Set—is back at the Blackstone yodeling his tainted tales of top hat turpitude. Behind a smirk screen of white tie gentility Mr. Fiske gets by with what is often referred to as murder.

The man has a very definite genius. His adroit use of the non sequitur; his satanic ability to make a meaningless phrase teem with suggestive possibilities; his demonstrative pianistics are elements of a highly successful entertainment formula. When he does his best numbers Mr. Fiske is out in front alone as a raucus raconteur. He dissects the shabby little impulses of mere humans; he pillories pomposities; he flaunts before us our naughty-boy tendency to laugh at dirty stories.

When he's doing his poorest numbers Mr. Fiske ought to get his wrists slapped. "Bella the Mouse" has a tag line that should be thrown out on the city dump, where it would be quite at home. It may be cynicism, it may be a mistaken notion of what people want, that makes Dwight go overboard occasionally. It most certainly isn't in his favor.

Dick La Salle has come back to the Mayfair room as master of his own band, and altho he still is adjusting himself to the reduced size of his group he already is playing excellent music. Neil Bondshu can well be proud of the way Dick is carrying on.

Boswelling the Bistros:

The Marine dining room of the Edgewater Beach hotel has a new show on tap, starring the Juvelys, Vic Hyde, and the Dorothy Hild dancers in four new routines: Arabian Nights, a swing novelty, Paper Dolls, and Spangled Bolero. . . . The Marine room show times are 8:30 and 10:30, except on Sundays, when the dinner show goes on at 7:30. . . . It was sad news that told of Hal Halperin's death in Florida. Very few men had done so much for show business. Few had worked so hard and heartily to bring entertainment to the men and women in service.

Jose Manzanares' new piano player is Hugo Plato, just released after serving in the Pacific. Claire Friend is the intermission pianist. . . . Ralph [Cookie] Cook, 51 Hundred club star, whose theme song is "Claire de Lunatic," is recovering from flu by writing a book called "Curfew Calypso." It lists 69 reasons for married men staying out after 12. He hasn't tried out the 70th yet.

Santo Tomas Prison Put Into a Novel

"THE OPEN CITY," by Shelley Smith Mydans. [Doubleday, Doran, $2.50.]

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin.

Shelley Smith Mydans.

All America has been rejoicing over the recent liberation of 3,700 civilians interned by the Japs in December, 1941, at Santo Tomas university in Manila. We at home have been wondering how these people, undernourished in both body and spirit, have been able to survive three long years of dreary imprisonment. Here in "The Open City" Shelley Mydans presents a graphic picture of life as it was lived in that crowded compound. She knows whereof she writes, for she and her husband, who had been covering the far east together as a photo-reporting team, had been confined at Santo Tomas with the others for the first eight months of the war.

Rather than record their own experiences, Mrs. Mydans has chosen to tell the unhappy story in the form of a novel. But the book contains so much of truth that it seems more fact than fiction, and is the more interesting for that very reason.

Dispassionately, in a style almost matter of fact, the first chaotic hours of internment are described. Gradually, as time goes by, order is brought about by the setting up of various prisoner committees, governing such important matters as sanitation, insect control, and work assignment. Every one has a camp job. A man once successful in Manila's business life is now a member of a garbage crew or construction gang. A woman, formerly a fastidious housewife, finds herself spending several hours each day removing weevils, cocoons, and worms from piles of cracked wheat, which later she eats cooked for breakfast.

Fortunately, life does have its lighter moments in the enjoyment of after-dinner baseball games and occasional floor shows and concerts of records. But inevitably the lack of privacy, adequate food, and hope for the future has its effect. Some of the prisoners retain their dignity and are quietly heroic, some go to pieces, but most of them gradually develop a dull apathy and listless acceptance of their situation.

Suspense and drama are introduced with the arrival in camp of an American in civilian clothes, who had escaped from his army unit imprisoned on Corregidor, and the efforts of a traitor to betray him and others to the Japs. But what will be etched most clearly on the reader's memory is the picture of hundreds of once proud American men and women, herded together by stupid little yellow men and forced to do menial work and eat vile food in order to keep alive.

Story of Boy and a Peruvian Llama

"GREGORIO AND THE WHITE LLAMA," by Laura Bannon. [Albert Whitman, $2.]

Lithographs by the author help her to present a pleasant picture of Peruvian Indian children. The White Llama has a distinct personality, no doubt quite characteristic of the more aristocratic llamas. The detail of the illustrations, half of which are in color, seems to this unpractised eye quite authentic in its Peruvian designs, and at any rate the pictures are attractive.

Interesting and Timely Study of Japanese Empire

"JAPAN: A Physical, Cultural and Regional Geography," by Glenn Thomas Trewartha. [University of Wisconsin Press, $5.]

Reviewed by Charles C. Colby.

A thin belt about 800 miles long on the southern margin of Japan's big central island contains the industries, the transportation facilities, the four highly urbanized areas, and the brains which motivate modern Japan. This is the belt and these are the men with which we are at war. Outside of this belt Japan is largely rural, with ways and standards of living not much different from those which prevailed under the feudal rule of the Tokugawa shoguns.

Japan's industries and commerce grew rapidly during and after World War I. and by 1930 Japan had become the one strong nation in the orient. Trewartha shows how under the drive of an ambitious government Japan's industrial structure developed and diversified enormously after 1930.

The writer argues that, properly motivated, this development might have paved the way to better times for the impoverished subsistence of millions of Japan and other parts of the orient. Instead Japan chose the path of military aggression and plunged the far east into war and disaster.

Trewartha's book has high value for any one interested in Japan, and who isn't in these days of our rapidly developing attack on Nippon? His presentation of the physical equipment, the natural resources, and the cultural features of the islands is gratifyingly satisfactory. His detailed treatment of the regional divisions of the archipelago is a masterpiece in kind. Masterly also are his numerous maps and other illustrations. All in all Trewartha has given us the right kind of book at the right time.

GREEN ARMOR

By OSMAR WHITE

At all bookstores $3.00

NORTON

Before the war Osmar White knew the Pacific islands intimately. He has known them in the midst of battle. Out of his knowledge and his experiences as a war correspondent, he has written a book that presents an indelible picture of a fabulous unknown area—a thrilling narrative as well as a penetrating analysis of the nature of the war against Japan. It is a book for every lover of true adventure and every American with a boy fighting "out there."

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS

AMONG THE AUTHORS

By Frederic Babcock.

THIS is the way things sometimes happen in the book business. . . . In last Tuesday's TRIBUNE Claudia Cassidy announced that the dramatic rights to Kenneth Horan's latest novel, "Papa Went to Congress," had been bought by Eddie Dowling. . . . Which was news to Mrs. Horan. . . . She called up Mr. Dowling, and he confirmed it. . . . Some time ago Mrs. Horan found, at the bottom of a trunk in her home in Evanston, a leather bound book containing clippings of letters sent by her father years ago to the Jackson [Mich.] Daily Citizen. . . . [At the time the letters were written, he was a Michigan congressman.] . . . She found them so delightful that she wrote a novel around them. . . . The book will be published by Doubleday, Doran next summer. . . . If Mr. Dowling finds the right playwright, and has the book dramatized into something half as beautiful as "The Glass Menagerie," he will have another outstanding hit on his hands.

Remember "They Wanted War" and "Tokyo Record"? . . . Otto D. Tolischus, who wrote them, has done "Through Japanese Eyes," and Reynal & Hitchcock will bring it out this spring. . . . With the world's eyes turned toward the Pacific and the far east, the publishers relate that this book "is an effort to let the Japanese speak for themselves. It is a statement of their aims and their political and religious beliefs. As a revelation of that ideology, the statements here collected are as plain and unequivocal as Adolf Hitler's 'Mein Kampf.'"

Also on the R. & H. list are: "A. Woollcott: His Life and His World," by Samuel Hopkins Adams; "The City Is the People," by Henry S. Churchill; "Rickshaw Boy," by Lau Shaw; "Can Representative Government Do the Job?" by Thomas K. Finletter; "Saints and Strangers," by George F. Willison; "Angel in the Forest," by Marguerite Young, and "The Ballad and the Source," by Rosamond Lehmann, author of "Dusty Answer."

"Wartime Racketeers" is something I hope to read. . . . It's by Harry Lever and Joseph Young, and Putnam's will issue it this month. . . . Also coming off the Putnam presses: Sydney R. McLean's novel of early New England, "A Moment of Time"; "Betio Beachhead," the story of the battle of Tarawa, by marine corps combat correspondents; "You Can't Stop Living," by Fern Rives, author of "Friday, Thank God!"; "Raffles: the Bird Who Thinks He's a Person," by two Chicago favorites, Zetta and Carveth Wells, and "No Passport for Paris," by Alice-Leone Moats, author of "Blind Date with Mars."

It was set forth in this column last Sunday that Harper's this spring would sponsor Morris L. Ernst's autobiography, "So Far So Good." . . . Curiously, the same title has been announced by Julian Messner, Inc., for Charles Hanson Towne's autobiography. . . . [The name of the Ernst book will be changed to "The Best Is Yet."] . . . Messner also will publish "Stallion Road," by Stephen Longstreet, author of "Last Man Around the World."

Employment for All and Freedom Too

"FULL EMPLOYMENT IN A FREE SOCIETY," by William H. Beveridge. [Norton, $3.75.]

Reviewed by Arthur Bergholz.

A pleasant surprise awaits the reader of this important work. It is neither forbidding as to content or style. Beveridge writes in a simple, lucid well-ordered manner. What he has to say about the major problem of employment is a pure distillate of Socratic wisdom.

Most of us are agreed that we want to live in a political democracy. Further we are agreed that within that framework we want to conduct the institutions of production and distribution of goods and services under the guidance of the leading principle of free enterprise. However, within this large agreement none of us are so intellectually blind as to be unaware that the agencies which we have created thru our skills and technics for exemplifying free enterprise have themselves considerably circumscribed the principle. In fact, wanting political democracy and economic free enterprise together has created a crisis. It is this crisis which is epitomized in the problem of employment.

Beveridge proposes a program whereby the dilemmatic demands of our democratic and economic freedoms within the compass of employment can be resolved. The resolution rests on three conditions. One, the maintenance at all times of adequate total outlay of production and consumption. Two, the control of the location of industry. Three, the securing of the organized mobility of labor. These three conditions determine the specific steps whereby our political and economic ends can cohere into a social pattern of optimum well-being.

What the thoughtful reader will particularly welcome is the skillful way in which Beveridge documents these three conditions. Treating in parallel manner Great Britain and the United States as they seek to deal with employment in peace and war, Beveridge exposes at once the extent and limitations of this treatment in bringing the economic institutions and state into effective relations for the maintenance of individual freedoms.

The full exposition of how Beveridge out of this historical examination creates his own program of rational coöperation between state and economic institutions would require a lengthy critical essay.

The problem of employment is too far advanced for reflection distorted by emotion. Concepts such as planning, control, regulation, freedom, et cetera, must be rationally furnished with content. The emotional heat-lightning must be disregarded. "Full Employment in a Free Society," in its wise humaneness, its profound administrative grasp of procedures, its reasonableness of policy should play a major role in guiding us to our intellectual responsibilities when dealing with major issues.

THE MURDER CHART

ENTRY.	PERFORMANCE.	PAY-OFF.
"OBSEQUIES AT OXFORD," by Edmund Crispin. [Lippincott, $2.]	Various persons who gathered at Oxford for play by repertory theater were involved in hatreds. There were so many cross-currents that almost any one could have been expected to murder any one else. Killing of obnoxious young woman made case for scholarly deduction by Gervase Fen, professor-sleuth.	Assortment of characters and their entanglements introduced with skill. After that, however, atmosphere is made tiresome by repetition, and aroused interest suffers. This is for reader who likes detailed exposition and debate in puzzle solving.
"AND DIE SHE DID," by Inez Oellrichs. [Doubleday, Doran, $2.]	Mrs. Shannon, neurotic, had embittered her family and even hired a detective because she thought her nurse was planning to poison her. But it was a bashed skull that ended her life and led to murder puzzle in which Sgt. Tittle needed help of Matt Winters, milkman, who solves murders.	Novel introduction of involved family circle and assorted retainers. Puzzle set up and solved in pleasingly free and easy narrative. Unique methods produce surprise solution.

Illinois Colleges Reveal Post-War Plans for Vets

21 to Waive Requirements for Entrance

By The Rev. John Evans.

Replies to the questionnaire on post-war educational plans for veterans in private colleges of Illinois have now been tabulated. It was sent by President Clarence P. McClelland of MacMurray college, member of the governor's advisory committee on education, to determine what institutions are contemplating to do for those who will take advantage of the G. I. Bill of Rights.

A summary of the returns from 32 colleges shows that 19 plan to increase their residence facilities and 16 expect to enlarge their classroom capacities. Requirements for admission will be waived by 21 colleges, but 19 colleges plan to give credit for military experience, six for courses in trade schools, and 15 for courses in correspondence schools. A current testing service in 19 colleges will be enlarged, while 24 will rely on intelligence and aptitude tests for the admission of veterans.

Asked how frequently during the year veterans would be admitted, three colleges replied twice, 11 three times, seven four times, and two five times. Illinois college, Jacksonville, offers to admit veterans at the beginning of each week for two years after the war ends. Bradley Polytechnic institute, Peoria, probably will admit them monthly.

Nineteen colleges will adopt, or continue, a program of acceleration enabling veterans to attend college 11 months out of the year, but only four colleges are planning shorter or more intensive courses for veterans.

Preparatory courses for veterans lacking some of the usual high school credits will be offered by 14 colleges; 10 will offer evening courses, and one college only plans correspondence courses. Nearly all the colleges, however, will make special provision for counseling veterans.

Since under the G. I. bill veterans are entitled to federal aid, the institutions were asked whether they planned to offer special scholarships or work-aid jobs in addition to the government's assistance. Replies indicated that 15 colleges would offer scholarships, 19 work-aid, and 13 both work-aid and scholarships.

As of the academic year beginning last fall, discharged veterans have not sought admission in large numbers, President McClellan states. Most of those mustered out have taken jobs, but as demobilization is accelerated there is no doubt that the resources of colleges in Illinois will be taxed to the utmost, as it is estimated that 100,000 of the million veterans of this state will avail themselves of the G. I. bill's advantages, he added.

When "Rosalinda," the New Opera's version of Johann Strauss' "Die Fledermaus," opens at the Erlanger tomorrow night, it will have numerous young singers worth investigating, including Graciela Rivera, John Dudley and Ralph Herbert. Miss Rivera, who sings Adele, is a Puerto Rican coloratura who did concert and radio work before making her American debut with "Rosalinda." Mr. Herbert, a Viennese baritone who sang in opera and toured Europe and Egypt with Richard Tauber, was rehearsing Bartolo in "The Barber of Seville" for the New Opera, when he was persuaded to take on the tenor role of Eisenstein in "Rosalinda." John Dudley, the Alfredo, is an Australian who has sung with the Metropolitan Opera and the D'Oyly Cartes of Gilbert and Sullivan fame. Last summer he went to Mexico to appear in Sir Thomas Beecham's Mozart festival, singing leading roles in "The Magic Flute" and "Don Giovanni."

Katharine Cornell's revival of "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" is now definite to open at New York's National theater March 26. Brian Aherne, the original Browning of Besier's play, is co-starred.

Viola Frayne.

Rosemary Taylor, whose "Chicken Every Sunday" begins its final Blackstone week with Viola Frayne and Sidney Blackmer in leading roles, has signed contracts for a third book, which may in time attract a dramatist. It will concern the antics of the customers at a dude ranch, possibly in Arizona, where her more or less autobiographical boarding house has its locale.

Unable to engage a downtown theater, the Chicago Dance Council will present Elizabeth Waters in recital next Sunday afternoon at 3:30 at George Williams College, 5315 S. Drexel blvd. Her program includes a Bach sarabande and courante, two Indian dances to percussion, "Verdict," with Hebrew, Spanish and Russian implications, and other dances to music of Grovlez, Casella, Buchardo and Rudhyar. The pianist is Stephen Bennett Williams.

Burton Holmes' 52d season of travel lectures has been to put it mildly, a wow at the box office. He completes his subscription series at Orchestra hall this week with the Wednesday and Friday night and Saturday afternoon performances of "Guatemala," which are sold out. Half a dozen extras are planned there, but the ones now on sale are a repetition of the Colorado River lecture March 17, of the National Parks lecture March 23, and the Guatemala lecture March 26. Mr. Holmes also has arranged two additional lectures at the opera house, which he invades for the first time March 24 with "Today's Mexico," last season's favorite with Ted Phillips' pictures of Paricutin volcano. On March 28 he will repeat the lecture on Guatemala, which he considers the finest of his career.

Shirley Wins Right to Wear Lipstick in Public

Hollywood, Cal., (AP).—After a year of campaigning, Shirley Temple has achieved what she considers a milestone in her life—the privilege of wearing lipstick in public. Her mother finally acceded to her desires and Shirley says the victory was largely due to her current role in "Kiss and Tell," in which she receives her first screen kiss.

Tough Guy.

Fabulous Story of Golden Gate Country Is Recorded

"GOLDEN GATE COUNTRY," by Gertrude Atherton. [Duell, Sloan & Pierce, $3.]

Reviewed by Delos Avery.

You can drop the first two letters of "history" when Gertrude Atherton writes it. This book, then, is the story of San Francisco, told with wit, clarity, and a sort of clinical detachment—in a nimble prose that dances along so fast it covers 169 years in a few lines less than 250 pages. From the high observatory of the age she has attained [88th birthday next October] she looks backward thru a finely etched perspective, sees the whole parade pass by in memory, sometimes splendid, sometimes pitiful, many times absurd, and always interesting.

Gertrude Atherton.

She grinds no ax, preaches no sermon, cares not at all whose toes she steps on—and she tells her tale.

The paragraph I like best is in the chapter captioned, "The Wickedest City on Earth," dealing with the period when courts were corrupt, life cheap, police venal, when the self-righteous vigilantes were hanging miscreants right and left on the theory that one good murder deserves another, and when the equally self-righteous Law and Order party stood in fierce opposition.

"My grandfather," writes Mrs. Atherton, "who revered the law, whatever its exponents, was a member of the Law and Order group. My father was one of the vigilantes. Upon one occasion my grandfather called my father a murderer, and relations were strained."

From the way she writes it you cannot tell whether she approved her grandfather, her father, or neither. My guess is that she approved both, but it is no more than a guess. And I wish more historians would write like that.

One of the charms of the book is the way Mrs. Atherton remembers bits of color. . . . "The interiors of those houses were, needless to relate, Victorian: horsehair or velvet furniture, Brussels carpets, four-posters, washstands with bowl, pitcher, and slop jar. A marble top table was in every front parlor, adorned with a bowl of goldfish, wax flowers under glass, or the family Bible. Antimacassars were on every chair."

She describes the women of the "oldest profession," who "outnumbered the respectable women by a hundred to one." . . . They "promenaded Montgomery st. at the fashionable hour and, in that uncomely costume of the era—flounced skirts over immense hoops, coal scuttle bonnets, hair parted in the middle and plastered over each ear—they were hardly to be distinguished from the ladies of South Park and Rincon Hill. . . . Nor could they be kept out of the fashionable shops; their $20 gold pieces, fresh from the mint, rang temptingly on the counters and the best was theirs."

Haughty ladies of the Spanish "old aristocracy" are in these pages, too, my favorite being an indignant one who, when Yankee troops took the country away from Mexico, "cried aloud that she would give every league of her ranchos and throw her jewels to the pigs if she could but feel a necklace made from the ears of 20 Americans about her neck. Eventually she married an American, her daughter another."

Mrs. Atherton begins her story with events of 1775 and carries it thru 1944. She is always thoro, always cerebral, and I think that if she ever dies her brain will die last.

Superfortress Story.

Duell, Sloan & Pearce have scheduled for May publication "The Super Fortress Is Born," by Thomas F. Collison.

Unending War Is Remedy Proposed for Our Economy

"THE PERMANENT WAR, or Homo the Sap," by Lorne T. Morgan, M.A., Ph.D., associate professor of political economy, University of Toronto. [Workers' Educational Association, 25 cents.]

Reviewed by Anthony Wirry.

Because the farmer, laboring man, and industrialist appear to be more prosperous now than they were in 1933, the author concludes, with tongue in cheek, that a permanent, scientifically conducted war is the only possible solution to our economic ills.

In arriving at this conclusion the author, a tutor for the Workers' Educational association, scraps three alternatives to continuous warfare. They are: a return to the normalcy of 1939 or the "good old days," fascism, and what he calls a "socialized economy," somewhat similar to, if not identical with, Russian communism.

While he dismisses the first two with little or no regret, he seems to shelve the third with considerable reluctance, saying: "So we must gently lay aside the vision of a socialized, scientifically operated economy."

More or less unmindful of the debt factor involved in endless warfare, he relates that numerous advantages accrue to the nation conducting such an undertaking.

The book is pocket-sized, and its idea matches its dimensions.

Historical Tales.

"Patrick Henry and the Frigate's Keel," a collection of historical stories by Howard Fast, will be published in April by Duell, Sloan & Pearce.

Historian Offers a Simple Answer to Humanity's Woes

"ARE MEN EQUAL?," by Henry Alonzo Myers. [Putnam, $2.50].

Reviewed by Avery Craven.

It is comforting in these troubled times to find an author who has a simple answer to all the troubles which beset poor, confused humanity. That is, it is comforting until one realizes how much of oversimplification and distortion of history is required to support that answer. Then one is apt to find himself right back where he started. That is the case with Prof. Myers' book.

He believes that all our troubles, individual and international, arise from the failure of men to accept the simple idea of the equality of all men. Without it there can be no justice and without justice there can be no social or political peace. Of course, men are not really equal in any way that can be measured. They are very much unequal—unequal even in their capacity to contribute to the welfare of mankind. Nor can they ever become equal in any measurable way. They are equal only in the vague sense that they are all human beings and because each one thinks of himself as being just as good as any one else. That, however, says Prof. Myers, is enough to discredit all the claims to superiority that men have falsely erected.

And in the same sense all social and all political groups are equal. One civilization is just as good as another. One period of history is just as rich as another. There is no such thing as progress. Superiority and progress are just fictions which fortunate groups and nations create in order to exploit their fellow beings.

The proof for all this Prof. Myers finds in the history of the United States. For him that history is a very simple thing. We fought the Revolution for the kind of equality he suggests. The Civil war was fought for this abstract idea alone. All of our great spokesmen from Emerson and Melville to Lincoln and Mark Twain have proclaimed it and, in spite of the fact that there is no such thing as progress, we have grown steadily in its acceptance.

All this sounds very well until one tries to fit it to the hard facts of every day life. Then the abstractions seem about as hard to accept as is the history of the United States reduced to such simplicity. One wonders if Prof. Myers has not simply rediscovered the Golden Rule which does seem to contain a solvent for most of humanity's problems—if we could only find some way to get men to practice it even better than we have in the United States where a continent's richness and the task of occupying it have encouraged an unusual amount of almost any kind of equality one might suggest.

Early American.

Colonial America in the 17th century is the setting of "Ask No Quarter," by George Marsh, which Morrow will publish in April.

The author of NATIVE SON of his own youth

This true story of life in America will open the eyes of many readers to things they never knew before about our country and its people. It is the story Richard Wright knows best, for it is his own. The birth of a best seller

ELEVEN months ago we published THE BROTHER, a novel of James, the brother of Christ. We realized that ours was not the only "religious" novel of the day, but we saw in it a new and fitting approach to an ageless story—a source of comfort and strength in a bitter year.

We were not disappointed. The book was published, the word got around, and, starting slowly, THE BROTHER quietly proceeded to sell.

Today it is a nationwide best seller. Readers everywhere know why this novel has become an American favorite. Its power lies in the fact that it tells the story of Jesus, not from the viewpoint of theology or history, but through the eyes of His own family. It is the story of the Gospel as any one of us might have experienced it had Jesus been our Brother, and had we, like James, been too blind to understand Him until three crosses stood side by side on Calvary.

THE LITERARY SPOTLIGHT

by Fanny Butcher

"A BELL FOR ADANO," by John Hersey, is the first book to go to the members of the recently organized Labor Book Club, Inc., a non-profit book club "organized to provide automobile and aircraft workers and their families with good books at moderate cost." . . . The club is sponsored by the educational department of the U. A. W.-C. I. O., with the publishers Reynal and Hitchcock acting as consultants and advisers. . . . Thus one more laurel leaf is added to the already brow-circling wreath on young John Hersey's head. . . . On Broadway the Paul Osborn dramatization is one of the season's hits. . . . Almost 100,000 copies of the book in its original edition have been sold. . . . The French, Portuguese, and Swedish language rights have been sold, the film rights too, of course. . . . The novel was a Book League of America choice. . . . It was chosen as "Imperative" by the Council on Books in War Time. . . . It was condensed in two magazines, and it has had at least two dramatizations for radio.

Another popular book has also just added to its popularity. . . . Gwethalyn Graham's "Earth and High Heaven" recently divided the $2,000 Anisfield-Wolf awards for the best books on race relations for the year 1944 with Gunnar Myrdal's "An American Dilemma." . . . The award committee was made up of Henry Seidel Canby, Henry P. Fairchild, and Ralph Linton. . . . The total number of copies of Miss Graham's novel now in print is 605,000. . . . It was a Literary Guild choice, you remember. . . . "An American Dilemma" is labeled by the judges "the most comprehensive and penetrating scholarly study of the Negro in the United States and the related problem that has as yet been presented." . . . Dr. Myrdal, social economist of the University of Stockholm, was entrusted by the Carnegie corporation with the task of undertaking a comprehensive study of the question. . . . He was assisted by a staff of able experts. . . . Harpers published their findings last May.

Fellowships Increase in Value.

Another important book resulting from an award is Joseph Wechsberg's "Looking for a Bluebird," which is a Houghton Hifflin Literary Fellowship product. . . . Its wacky characters are deliciously labeled by Francis Ludlow, editor of the Retail Bookseller, as "the beachcombers from the seacoast of Bohemia." . . . Incidentally, the value of the Houghton Mifflin fellowships has been raised to celebrate the 10th year of the fellowship plan. . . . The regular awards have been increased from $1,500 to $2,400, and a special award of $1,000, exclusive of royalties, has been added for a book of poetry.

The winner of still another award was recently announced. . . . Dr. Howard Washington Odum of the University of North Carolina is the recipient of the Edward L. Bernays award for outstanding achievement in Negro-white relations. . . . Presentation of the $1,000 war savings bond was made by the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ, appropriately, on Lincoln's birthday.

How the Red Cross Helps.

And while we are talking about money, what about that contribution to the Red Cross? . . . How the Red Cross helps the men who dig foxholes and dodge shells is told in a remarkable book called "At His Side," by George Korson. . . . It will be published March 26, and if you haven't done more than your share by the time you read it, your heart will be sick at your callousness. . . . Another, smaller book, one of the 25 cent Infantry Journal-Penguin specials, is called "I Knew Your Soldier." . . . It is an intimate picture of our boys overseas by Red Cross girls who really know the G. I. . . . The story of Eleanor "Bumpy" Stevenson, told by Pete Martin. . . . "Bumpy" Stevenson, so called because her maiden name was Bumpstead—"as in Blondie and Dagwood," says Mr. Martin—is the wife of Bill Stevenson, who was head of the American Red Cross in England and later in North Africa and Italy. . . . "There is a saying," writes Mr. Martin in his introduction, "that the situation produces the man. In this case, it produced a husband and wife team, for the Stevensons were obviously made to order for the job they did so well." . . . The book makes plain why Ernie Pyle said of "Bumpy" Stevenson: "She is a sort of . . . cheerer upper, smoother over and finder outer for the whole Red Cross . . . and half the army, too. She lends her ear to tales of woe, turns her smiles on generals and privates without distinction." . . . What those ears heard and what her eyes saw make up this impressive little book.

A Tip to Fag Hunters.

THE JUNIOR BOOKSHELF

By Agatha L. Shea.

TITLE.	SUBJECT.	VERDICT.
"THE MOVED-OUTERS," by Florence Crannell Means. [Houghton, $2.]	Story of the impact of Pearl Harbor on the Japanese Americans of California. Sue Ohara was a senior in high school when the blow fell and she, her family and friends began life in the assembly camps and relocation centers. Describes the evacuation and life in the new centers.	A sympathetic and fair presentation of a problem precipitated by the war, and not yet solved. Young readers of high school age will find in it a challenge to democratic thinking as well as a stirring story of their own generation.
"THEY CAME FROM SCOTLAND," by Clara Ingram Judson. [Houghton, $2.]	Presents life in Indianapolis a hundred years ago. The Scottish family whose story it is, found adventure and many pleasures in their new life, but did not entirely forget the legends and colorful folktales of their homeland.	Readers who like to live in the stage coach days of America will enjoy this story of pioneer people. An excellent addition to this Chicago author's many fine books for young people.
"WILDERNESS CHAMPION," by Joseph Wharton Lippincott. [Lippincott, $2.]	A tale of the great western lands and the men and animals who inhabit them. In particular, the tale of Johnny, the ranger and his lost hound champion Reddy, whom he had lost to the wilds, and found again.	A thrilling story of animal courage and loyalty set in a magnificent background of the plains and mountains. A grand story for any animal lover, and one of this author's finest contributions.

Old Mansion Casts Spell Over Lives

"JENNIFER'S HOUSE," by Christine Noble Govan. [Houghton, Mifflin, $2.50.]

Reviewed by Kenneth Horan.

Jennifer came from England, and, being very rich, very charming, and very much in love with her young American husband, restored his ancestral home, "Riveridge," after it was ravished by the Yankees in the Civil war. Not only the house but the gardens bloomed once more, with the color, the beauty, the fragrance of a dream. But there was nothing of the quality of a dream about Jennifer, who was as practical as she was beautiful, who was adored by all her colored servants and worshipped by the fashionable Tennesseans whose great houses adorned the county.

And this is the rich and the exciting story of what happened to Jennifer's house and how it maintained, despite change, its quality of perfection. And it is the story of how all men pass away and of the futility of trying to make material things permanent. And it all must have happened, right before the author's eyes, or she could not have written so realistically about it, nor with such a passion of understanding.

Jennifer's husband, John Tremont, was so shattered by her death that—in order to keep the house running in its perfection—he married Isabel, the young woman he had brought home to be a companion to Jennifer, to make her invalid days run even more smoothly. For with her passing her husband, as well as her children, her friends, and her servants suffered devastating change.

Longing always to keep Jennifer's personality alive, they clung to the shadow she had cast, unable to find the substance. And young Isabel, now married to ancient John, knew that the children and the grandchildren hated her, but she, too, was captured by Jennifer's presence, and in her own longing for security, she kept Riveridge in its pristine perfection, forever seeing its beautiful surfaces polished as one polishes a jewel.

Obviously Jennifer's house has cast its spell on the author of this haunting and absorbing story. She has seen what Jennifer did to Riveridge and then she has seen what Riveridge did to every one who ever lived in it. A rich, lustrous family chronicle, this one is as sumptuous as the house itself.

To mar its loveliness, however, there are shocking transitions from one event to another, transitions which give no adequate space to important events. They leave the impression that the story has been cut and that there might be more years to chronicle, more subtle changes to portray. But not even this glaring discrepancy can keep the spirit of Jennifer and of Riveridge from pervading the book and making t beautiful.

Thrilling Account of Seabees' Work

"CAN DO! The Story of the Seabees," by Lt. [j. g.] William Bradford Huie, C. E. C., U. S. N. R. [Dutton, $2.75.]

The author, who resigned as associate editor of an eastern magazine to enter the navy as a Seabee, has written a vivid and thrilling account of the tremendous job being done by these fighting builders all over the world. They are the one big, new organization of this war. Starting with only 300 men, this unusual branch of the navy now has 8,000 officers and 250,000 enlisted men—all equipped with experience in construction activities.

Much of this entertaining volume is made up of narratives of action at various far flung fronts. It's an inspiring, exhilarating, and different viewpoint of the war. Recommended especially for those who like war action and thrills, minus the usual horrors. It is well illustrated with photographs and original drawings, and has an end paper map of the world showing where Seabee battalions are working. AL CHASE.

Play Financing More Intricate Than Staging

By John Chapman.

NEW YORK [Special].—The business of financing shows is much more intricate than staging them these days. There are general partners and limited partners, each with his own kind of liability, each with his particular standing with the income tax. Some can write off losses; others can't. It has been reported that wealthy Lorraine Manville Dresselhuys, angel for a tremendous flop, "Rhapsody," found that she could claim as a loss only a fraction of what she put into the Fritz Kreisler musical spectacle.

Generally speaking, a producer does not use his own money. For years, now, the theater has been operated largely by persons who are busy taking money out of it and putting none back. George White, I guess, was the last of the rugged individuals who paid for a show out of his own pocket, even when it was a big revue.

Angels are still to be found in abundance, but the professional angel, or backer, is the more important and the more successful, because he has some knowledge of the stage and he also has the inside track with top grade producers and writers, who are most likely to turn out successes.

A woman wrote me not long ago that she had a few hundred dollars and would I please tell her where she could put it in a show. I would not—not for any inducement. Her money would have little more chance than a goldfish in a cat store, for the few sure things are sewed up, and the chances of cashing in on a surprise hit are just as short as they ever were.

Among the hits now running only two could be called Cinderella productions, and even so the description must be qualified. "Anna Lucasta" was a surprise hit when the American Negro theater produced it in Harlem on a shoe string, but it was brought to Broadway by John Wildberg, a producer and a theatrical lawyer of long experience. He knew what he had and I'm sure he didn't have to pass a tin cup along the Rialto. The other unexpected hit, unexpected in the sense that only Director George Abbott had a Broadway reputation, is the musical, "On the Town." The producers are Paul Feigay, a young lawyer, and Oliver Smith, a scene designer. I do not know who their angels are, but the angels are due for a lot of money.

Financially—meaning simply the percentage between running expenses and gross receipts, and not taking into account any possible movie sales for a half-million or so—the three most spectacular hits current should be "Anna Lucasta," with a modest pay roll; "On the Town," ditto, and Mike Todd's "Up in Central Park," double ditto.

Scene designers have been the most important factors in the profits of the two musicals. For his own show Oliver Smith employed every trick he knew, making scenery stunning enough to satisfy the weariest of us, yet making it so simple that a small crew can operate it. For "Up in Central Park" Howard Bay performed a similar service and succeeded in fooling a number of reviewers, but not this one, into describing the show as "lavish." It looks lavish, but isn't, really. Almost all of it is on drops and can be operated backstage by fewer than half the men it takes to run Billy Rose's really lavish show, "Seven Lively Arts."

In the case of the "Park" and "Town" musicals the net profits are truly immense. Mike Todd is reported to have a clear profit of at least $20,000 a week, and his show should have paid for itself this week. He had been wise not only in holding down mechanical expenses [which he purposely did because he wants to send out touring companies that can move fast], but also in arranging his pay roll for players. The highest wage any of his company earns is $750 a week, which is peanuts compared to the 10 per cent of a $40,000-odd gross Beatrice Lillie gets from "Arts."

Not all hits are hits, even for Todd. "Pick-Up Girl," which had quite a long run and was well thought of, ended its Broadway engagement $75,000 in the red. Mae West's "Catherine Was Great" ran and ran, to the confusion of the critics; but it cost more than a pretty good musical to produce, and when it finally lit out for the road it was in the red. It is reported that Mary Martin's "One Touch of Venus" had not quite broken even after running to capacity for more than a year.

Even the most successful of the angels, Howard S. Cullman, slips. He turned down opportunities to invest in "Oklahoma!" and "Harvey."

Still the greatest theater in New York, the place where more magic is wrought and more spells are cast, is the Metropolitan Opera house. With few of its stars left—no Flagstad, no Pons, and only Melchior and Pinza as first caliber men—the opera has met the war critics gallantly and intelligently. It has filled its ranks with youngsters from a paint company broadcast, and none of them, not even Patrice Munsel, is great.

But the opera has made every opera a show. It has borrowed scenery wherever it could to supplement its own tattered relics. Its people are physically attractive, and it seems to me that more than ever before attention has been paid to directing them. Whenever Herbert Graf stages an opera it has movement, color, and a clear story line, and if I were a rich Broadway producer I would hire Dr. Graf to put on a musical show that would knock Hassard Short's eye out.

The orchestra is excellent, particularly under George Szell, who makes less fuss on a podium than any conductor I ever watched. He seems to have a slow beat for everything, even the scampering, tricky, unutterably lovely music of "Der Rosenkavalier." To Szell has fallen the honor of conducting the supreme offering of the season, "Die Meistersinger."

Here there are good voices, but no great ones. But here is an ensemble at work, people who can act and move, and the result is the most magnificent show of the year, anywhere. It is more than four hours of melody, humor, and enchantment.

Here's to the Met.

Notes of Music and Musicians

Three new ballets are listed for performance by the Berenice Holmes Ballet at the Eighth Street theater this afternoon at 3:30. Miss Holmes is responsible for the choreography, and the sets and costumes for "Side Show," a comedy ballet of backstage circus life, and for 'Reflection in the Water," a study in ballet design to Debussy's music, were designed by Julia Thecla, prominent Chicago artist. The other novelty will be "Dance Poem," a summer reverie," to music of Liszt. Three ballets with choreography by Beatrice Stronstorff, will be presented: "Like a Web Is Sorrow" [music by Ernest Bloch], "Time—Lost Shore" [music by Erik Satie], and "Tomorrow Will Sing" [music by Berna Trine]. The program also includes a set of classical variations from Tschaikowsky's "Sleeping Beauty" and "Nutcracker," and Glazounoff's "The Seasons," and Miss Holmes' "People's Park," with music by Shostakovich and decor by Stanislav Mitruk.

The Metropolitan Artists Ensemble will give a concert in the History and Enjoyment of Music series at the Civic Opera house today at 3:30. The group consists of four members of the Metropolitan opera—Jarmila Novotna, soprano; Raoul Jobin, tenor; Herta Glaz, contralto; Martial Singher, baritone — who present ensemble numbers from famous operas in costume and with appropriate action. The only solo on the program will be the Prologue from "I Pagliacci," sung by Mr. Singher. Ensemble numbers will consist of the soprano and tenor duet from the second act of Massenet's "Manon," the trio from the second act of "Samson and Delilah," the baritone and soprano duet from the second act of "La Traviata," the Carmen-Don José scene from the second act of "Carmen," a duet for soprano and alto from Nicolai's "The Merry Wives of Windsor," and the quartet from "Martha." Leo Muller will be the accompanist.

Lotte Lehmann will give the second recital of her notable lieder series at Orchestra hall tomorrow night at 8:15. With Paul Ulanowsky at the piano, the program will consist entirely of the songs of Brahms, including among the best known ones "Minnelied," "Sandmännchen," "Auf dem Kirchhofe," "Immer leiser wird mein Schlummer," "Ständchen," "An die Nachtigall" and "Botschaft." The Adult Education council, under whose auspices the series is given, announces that a limited number of tickets remain for both recitals, ranging from 50 cents to $2, plus tax. Seats on the stage are being sold for tomorrow night's Brahms.

BOOKS ALIVE

by Vincent Starrett

IT was delightful, and a bit startling, to meet two of the most elusive characters of literature, face to face, the other evening. They sat across the aisle from me, in an obscure corner of the cafeteria, sipping tea; and I recognized them at once. They were Mrs. Harris and Mrs. Grundy, perhaps the most famous "off stage" figures of popular mythology. The frowzy dark one, too much on the plump side, who waggled her jaw like a ventriloquist's dummy, and made obscene noises in her cup, was clearly Mrs. Harris. Mrs. Grundy was the gray haired, elderly woman with the bleak eyes, the stern mouth, and the steel spectacles.

There they were, if you will believe me, Sairey Gamp's alter ego, right out of Dickens' "Martin Chuzzlewit"; and Mrs. Grundy, that paragon of respectability from Morton's 18th century comedy, "Speed the Plough." You remember them, of course. In book and play, altho influential persons of the tale, they are just names on the lips of others—Mrs. Harris a sort of springboard for Mrs. Gamp's observations on Mrs. Gamp; Mrs. Grundy a pious threat, wielding her power thru the words of those who wonder at her probable reactions.

I couldn't hear what they were saying; and an air of historic conspiracy enveloped them—a sort of moldy privacy—that kept me from moving closer. Once when they felt my eye on them and turned to glance at me, I felt my flesh creep. There was a legendary look about them that was frightening; they leered anciently. Then they went back to their chinning, and I looked them over again. When I left the restaurant, an hour later, they were still there and still going strong, and Mrs. Grundy still hadn't said a word.

A cafeteria is of course the best place in the world to see invisible people. I often go there to study them.

A Great Mystery Story.

At last Wilkie Collins' great mystery story, "The Moonstone," first published in 1868, and historically the first full length detective novel in English, has been added to Everyman's Library. It is an attractive little volume, with a scholarly introduction by Dorothy L. Sayers, who feels that Collins' importance has been slighted. If you don't have this title on your favorite shelf, this edition will serve you very well.

Many critics, among them I think Miss Sayers herself, have called this book the greatest detective novel of them all. However that may be, it is undeniably a classic. To a Sherlockian, the story is primarily a sentimental thriller with detective interludes; such detection as goes forward is about on a par with the performances of Lestrade and Athelney Jones before the arrival of the Baker Street wizard. But it is a gorgeous tale, just the same; and Miss Sayers is right when she speaks of Collins' power to invent a spacious world populated by interesting and entertaining people.

"To turn from a modern detective story and to open 'The Moonstone' is to escape from a narrow artificial stage to the crowded reality of the market place," she observes acutely. "Collins' people do not exist simply and solely in order to make their moves on the checkerboard of intrigue; they have a full and lasting existence outside the story thru which they pass; they are solid characters in a real world."

That is a proper tribute to Wilkie Collins and a penetrating criticism of the contemporary detective novel.

Trollope Had a System.

"I have been pining to see some mention of my favorite author, Anthony Trollope, in your Sunday column," writes Dr. Laura E. Henning of Chicago.

Well, doctor, there was nothing temperamental about old Anthony. He had a system. After retiring from the English postal service, he rose every morning at 5:30 and wrote continuously for three hours, with his watch in front of him, turning out 250 words every 15 minutes. It is said that having finished a book one morning, before his daily word quota had been completed, he reached for a fresh sheet of paper and began the first chapter of his next novel. That is, I think, the nearest approach to perpetual motion reported of any celebrated man of letters.

He could write anywhere and under any conditions, at home, at his club, in a railway carriage, or on the ocean. And his characters were very real to him. "There is a gallery of them," he said, "and of all I may say that I know the tone of the voice, and the color of the hair, every flame of the eye, and the very clothes they wear." And again: "I have wandered alone among the rocks and woods, dying at their grief, laughing at their absurdities, and thoroly enjoying their joy. I have been impregnated with my own creations till it has been my only excitement to sit with the pen in my hand, and drive my team before me at as quick a pace as I could make them travel."

However, he killed off his most famous character, Mrs. Proudie, after he overheard two men abusing her—and her creator—at a club. Introducing himself to his critics, he promised to go home and kill the creature before the week was out. "One wonders," says Edward Wagenknecht, "whether any other woman of comparable vitality was ever so frivolously slaughtered for a whim."

Lovers of Trollope will find an excellent and most sympathetic account of him and his work in Dr. Wagenknecht's "Cavalcade of the English Novel" [Holt], from which I have lifted much of the foregoing material. Trollope's "Autobiography" is still a delightful browsing book. The standard biography is by Michael Sadleir.

From Fact Into Fiction.

Daudet's novel, "L'Immortel," John Hervey reports, is founded on the episode of the Vrain-Lucas literary forgeries, discussed in this department some weeks ago. Astier-Rehu, the hero of the Daudet fiction, he tells me, is modeled on the befooled mathematician, Chasles, who was Vrain-Lucas' victim.

Hugh Gibson, former ambassador to Belgium, prizes a child's comment as the finest piece of literary criticism he ever read, and this department agrees. The little girl read a book on penguins, and wrote:

"This book gives me more information about penguins than I care to have."

Book Explains Art of Figure Drawing

"DRAWING THE HUMAN FIGURE," by Arthur Zaidenberg. [Crown, $2.95.]

The author of "Any One Can Draw" and "Any One Can Paint" has compiled in this book a picture method of teaching figure drawing to those who have had some preliminary training. A section devoted to model photographs by Berenice Abbott, and sample drawings made from them, is particularly helpful. There also is a study of historic phases of art from the prehistoric primitive to the modern.

SMITHSONIAN INSTITUTION

at Washington, D. C.

FOR NEARLY ONE HUNDRED YEARS, the SMITHSONIAN INSTITUTION has functioned as a great world headquarters of man's knowledge. It has amassed the fruit of human achievement and discovery from all corners of the globe—and made them available to all. Its researches have made it virtually the scientific arm of our Government, under whose trusteeship it functions. And its vast accumulation of treasures, covering virtually every field of man's progress, attracts millions of visitors yearly to its famed halls in Washington.

Now the Smithsonian Brings Its Riches to You — In Your Own Home!

To fulfill the dream of its founder, "to increase and diffuse knowledge among men"; to bring the Institution to you, you who may never see it, or, as a visitor, may not have sufficient time to absorb more than a fraction of what it offers: that is the purpose of these magnificent, these uniquely privileged books. The SMITHSONIAN SERIES brings to your chairside, in word and picture, the vast storehouse of knowledge that is the SMITHSONIAN INSTITUTION. It brings to you, to your family, to your work and to your hours of self-improvement those things which in the opinion of the scholars of the Institution are of the greatest importance to the greatest number of people.

Each of these twelve volumes opens another door of the Institution to you: each volume reveals a wonderful new world of interest and information.

In the volume devoted to the Institution itself, you learn of the multitudinous ways in which the knowledge amassed by the Institution is gathered and how important a part the Institution plays in our national life. In The Sun and the Welfare of Man, Dr. Charles G. Abbot, Editor-in-Chief of the series, tells vividly of his own research on the sun's rays; how the sun's rays may be used for cooking, for heating the domestic water supply, and even for power; how the sun's energy may replace our diminishing natural fuel not far in the future.

In Minerals from Earth and Sky, you learn how our planet has been a target for "celestial bombs" for ages; you also read the fascinating story of the rarest of earth's own minerals—gem stones. The volumes on Insects, on Wild Animals, on Birds, Fish and Plant Lore reveal to you the amazing secrets of all living things. Between the volumes Man from the Farthest Past and Great Inventions you get an extraordinary account of the earliest beginnings of man's progress on earth as well as modern man's greatest mechanical achievements. This space does not permit full description of the Series, but here are some facts:

- To complete this huge publishing project, it took years of time and engaged the unstinting efforts of many scholars.
- International figures in finance, government and education, leaders in all walks of life, subscribed a total of $437,500.00 in advance in order to see this work accomplished—thus paving the way for the present popular priced edition. Among those who subscribed for the first edition were Andrew Mellon, J. P. Morgan, Charles E. Hughes, W. A. Rockefeller, many others.
- Among its 1800 illustrations are many beautiful color plates acknowledged to be the finest examples of their kind.
- The Series has been hailed by universities, schools, libraries, and individuals from coast to coast, for its clear, concise human coverage of useful knowledge.

Now this great work is offered to you at a remarkably low price—in fact, only a small fraction of the original price—as a further step in the SMITHSONIAN'S program to make man's knowledge available to all. This new printing contains all the material of the original edition: 1,800 illustrations, 5,000 pages, completely revised—brought up to date!

By special arrangement with the Smithsonian Institution, the Smithsonian Series is published and distributed only by the Series Publishers, Inc., organized solely and exclusively for this purpose.

BOOKMAN'S HOLIDAY

By Delos Avery.

IT was the quaint suggestion of Oliver Herford, the rhyming caricaturist, back in the days of the other war, that prose or verse composed while standing on one's head might have a special charm, attributable to the posture. He cited Gilbert Chesterton, who

"Upside down obtains a new
And Chestertonian point of view."

To illustrate his thesis Herford drew a picture of the inverted Chesterton gazing critically at the sun on the western horizon, and seeing it not as a setting but as a rising sun, a bold and revolutionary conception, provocative of much talk and perhaps of fatter royalties. There is also the implied suggestion that if others would stand on their heads to write, they, too, might create intriguing and profitable paradoxes.

Hungrily considering this tempting idea, and reflecting that in all probability the highly marketable paintings of our sad bad mad glad Salvador Dali are produced while he hangs by his toes from a flying trapeze, I am persuaded to a modest experiment of my own.

So I am writing this Bookman's Holiday column in bed, having been commanded by my medic to go there and stay there. It is a project I have not attempted before, but if reading can be done in bed, why not writing? Everything I need is within arm's reach—notebooks, reference works, letters from people I know and some I do not, cigarets [tasteless], and a formidable box of sudfadiasomethingorother for what ails me.

The notebooks, I suppose, must be my main reliance. They are full of scribblings. On the top of the heap is Vincent Starrett's recent description of Dr. Samuel Johnson as "a tiresome old hack," daring words safely launched across the centuries, reminding me that a London printer who once addressed the testy old lexicographer face to face in language less derogatory was "felled with a folio." Boswell quotes the good doctor as explaining, "He was impudent and I beat him."

Wonder if Starrett ever writes in bed? Mark Twain did, and Robert Louis Stevenson. So does Winston Churchill when the British empire is not too heavy on his chest—that empire on which the sun is supposed to be always rising, never setting. Do all Britishers, like Chesterton, stand on their heads to woo the "eternal sunrise" illusion, so comforting to survivors of the Victorian era.

LESSON IN FRENCH.

"Hors d'oeuvre" does not rhyme with "nerve," no matter what Clement Wood says in his otherwise excellent rhyming dictionary. The v is written before the r and must be pronounced before it.

Dear Clement Wood, you have a noeuvre,
Rhyming "curve," "swerve," and "hors d'oeuvre."
Do you really think you should?
Honi soyez Clement Wood!

Note from Moustique, the flibbertigibbet, who takes up new subjects at the drop of a hat and is now reading an encyclopedia of music. "Do you know," she inquires, "that there is such a word as hemidemisemiquaver? It's the answer to a $64 question." Wrong again, Moustique. Not $64, but a 64th part. A quaver is an eighth note and a hemidemisemiquaver is a half of a half of a half of an eighth. Ask that mathematical quiz kid wizard.

My scholarly colleague, L. S., quotes an article [which somebody else quoted to him] from Modern Language Notes offering documentary evidence that it wasn't Voltaire, but a writer using the pen name of S. G. Tallentyre, who said: "I wholly disapprove of what you say—and will defend to the death your right to say it."

Very well. Somebody might make a little essay by connecting the item with other famous sayings attributed to wrong sources. For instance, it was not Mark Twain, but a New England newspaper editor who said, "Everybody talks about the weather but nobody does anything about it." I could tell the editor's name, too, if the book containing it were not so far from my bed.

A few decades ago when B. L. T. [Bert Leston Taylor] was conducting "A Line o' Type or Two," he tried hard to teach cub reporters not to misuse "prone" and "supine." They would write about a man "lying prone on his back" or "standing supinely by." Taylor said such tricks were for contortionists or acrobats. I wrote him a jingle on the subject but he never printed it, so here it is—and Dr. Collins may copy if he pleases:

The literary acrobat
Is so devised and jointed that
While lying prone upon his back,
Inviting B. L. T.'s attack,
He also meekly stands supine—
And thus he doubly makes the Line.

Perhaps the medic is right after all and I should sleep. My bed is beside a window and if I switch out the light I can see the slow parade of stars across the night, millions of miles away—farther than the Rhine. But I hear motors, too, and see the silhouettes of three dark war planes cross the sky, faster—at least in appearance—than the stars.

War Observations By Gertrude Stein

first of the book after reading the last [as I did in a sense, for I had read the magazine articles before I read the book] it is not confusing. One's journey thru it is barricaded by the lack of the customary helps to reading, punctuation, but, taken slowly, it makes tremendous sense.

Of course the record which Gertrude Stein makes is invaluable. In the book—which is really a diary—one sees reflected the attitude, the beliefs, the fears, the indecisions, the political emotional battles, the hour by hour life of the French during a period which will probably never be chronicled by a more dispassionate or a more articulate observer.

These facts and those observations may surprise many readers—the part about Petain for one thing, and the feeling of some of the French that, if Germany won, their chances would be better than if England won, for the French had always been able to get the best of the Germans and they never had of the British. But what impresses one unforgettably as one finishes the book [at long last] is the fact that here is a document which is unique not only in its presentation but in its contents.

Two Books to Help Chase Gloom Away

"PARTY LINE," by Louise Baker. [Whittlesey, $2.50.]

"COME BACK ON TUESDAY," by Ruth Hunter. [Scribner's, $2.50.]

Reviewed by Kelsey Guilfoil.

Here are two books that will afford readers a few chuckles and many smiles. They are of two quite different worlds, the world of the theater and the small town world, but they possess much the same nostalgic charm.

Louis Baker.

Ruth Hunter.

"Party Line" is the story of a telephone operator in a California small town, where the author spent her childhood. In that town the inhabitants followed the custom which still prevails in much of rural America, of taking down the receiver and listening on the party line whether the bell sounded their own ring or some one else's.

These reminiscences, which we are given to understand are truth heavily glossed with fiction, are as good a picture of small town life as one will find. The townspeople are living characters with all the defects and virtues of real people—any one who has lived in a small town will feel that they are old acquaintances.

The only shortcoming I can find in "Party Line" is that the author does not fully realize the destructive character of small town gossip. None of her gossipers is really malicious; the worst they do is not as bad as many tragedies which have been caused in actual experience.

"Come Back on Tuesday" is a chronicle of the stage career of Ruth Hunter, who styles herself one of "the little people of the theater." The climax of her experience was reached in playing the part of Ellie May in "Tobacco Road" for five years.

Long before that, however, Chicago-bred Ruth Hunter had played in vaudeville and had many ups and downs—mostly downs—in breaking into the legitimate theater. "Come back on Tuesday," or some similar evasion, was what she heard oftenest from agents and producers. Again and again she thought she was going to get a good part, or even a leading part, only to have it snatched away and given to another actress.

She managed to get some good parts—in plays that often did not live long—and she shows herself a person of much courage and persistence. However, the repetitious account of her endless effort becomes almost as tiring to the reader as the hunt must have been to her. A little more theater and a little less Ruth Hunter would have made an amusing book into a fascinating one.

Gertrude Stein Gives Some Lucid Observations on War

"WARS I HAVE SEEN," by Gertrude Stein. [Random, $2.50.]

Reviewed by Fanny Butcher.

Gertrude Stein is America's best known literary figure to have lived thru the war and the German occupation in France. In the first World war she stayed in France as she did in this war. Her reactions to both of those tremendous experiences are chronicled in "Wars I Have Seen."

Any one who has read, or tried to read, Gertrude Stein's experimental prose and poetry will not need to be told that she is not a conventional writer. Any one who read her extremely popular "The Autobiography of Alice B. Toklas" will know that when she wishes to, she can write the most pellucidly clear and beautiful English in present day literature. "Wars I Have Seen" started out, it seems to me, to be another experimental piece of literature and toward its end, when the hope of victory drew nearer, when the Maquis and the news from outside were beginning to give the little mountainside village of Culoz the returned vigor of hope to take the place of the necessary day by day and hour by hour living, the emotions of liberation so filled the air and the heart of the author that her own emotions overcame her studied technique. The story of those last weeks and of the arrival of the Americans is as factual writing, as vivid conventional recital as any you will ever read.

Gertrude Stein.

Whether "Wars I Have Seen" will be popular or not of course remains on the laps of the gods, but if it does not have a large audience, the enthusiasm of its readers will make up emotionally for their numbers. For in these pages, which sometimes seem to ramble back and forth over the years and over geography, there is profundity. There are sentences which a reader will never forget because they tell him in a subject and predicate and a few adjectives and adverbs truths which he has always known, but never expressed to himself, like the simple statement "War is never fatal, but always lost." Or "However near a war is it is always not very near." Or "In one war they [the French] upset the Germans by resisting unalterably steadily and patiently and valiantly for four years in the next war they upset them just as much by not resisting at all and going under completely in six weeks. Well that is what makes them changeable enough to create styles."

One could go on for pages quoting sentences or paragraphs of such observations out of their context which are startlingly gripping. But I must confess that in their context those sentences often are confusing to the average reader—profoundly confusing. There are two reasons for that. One is that Gertrude Stein uses no quotation marks, no dashes, no commas, and one has to read a sentence over twice or more to realize just which words are the words of some one else, which are her own, which are her thoughts. The other reason is that we have become educated to rapid reading. There are schools to teach us to read rapidly, and we honor our public men who can read a page as quickly as they can turn it. Well, nobody can read Gertrude Stein that way.

The latter part of the book, however, is as easy to read as part of the same material was when it appeared in Collier's a few weeks ago. It is a factual, vivid, exciting, and penetrating picture of the arrival of the Americans in Europe. And oddly enough, if one goes back to the

Baker Tells of Old Days as Reformer

"AMERICAN CHRONICLE," by Ray Stannard Baker. [Scribner's, $3.50.]

Reviewed by Tremaine McDowell.

"American Chronicle" is an autobiographical account of the brave old world of muckrakers and T. R., of the league of nations, and Wilson.

Ray Stannard Baker.

Born in Lansing in 1870 and graduated from Michigan State at 19, Baker left the University of Michigan without finishing his studies in literature and law, to go into newspaper work in Chicago. Here this autobiography and his real education begin. He marched to Washington with Coxey and his army. He toured the Chicago of Charles Yerkes and Bath-House John with William Stead's sensational book, "If Christ Came to Chicago," and its detailed map of the redlight district as his guide. He studied the Pullman strike at Hammond and set up the Chicago Record Pullman relief fund.

The young idealist soon "came upon troubled times" of his own. Baker was working hard on his Great American Novel but he achieved nothing. He looked for a Moses to lead America out of the wilderness but he concluded that Theodore Roosevelt was no Moses. He became one of the S. S. McClure's top muckrakers, specializing on labor questions, yet he found no answers.

Then followed Baker's happiest years, as he joined his great and good friends, Ida Tarbell and Lincoln Steffens, in founding the American magazine. They promised that their organ "will be wholesome, hopeful, stimulating, uplifting," and that "it will reflect a happy, struggling, fighting world, in which, as we believe, good people are coming out on top." Baker's contributions were further excursions in muckraking and, under the pen name of David Grayson, his best selling excursions into sweetness and light, "Adventures in Contentment," "Adventures in Friendship," and the rest. Finally, he found in Woodrow Wilson a hero he could follow—to the peace conference, thru the fight for the league, and into defeat.

"American Chronicle" reminds us that, if and when the United States and the world are made safe for democracy, humanity will be under a double obligation to the Woodrow Wilsons and the Ray Stannard Bakers. They have shown us what it is to live and to die for high aims. And they have shown us how to defeat those same aims by stubborn egocentricity on one hand and by the naiveté of extravagant idealism on the other. This is a book to be studied by good citizens in general, and by well meaning educators and the clergy in particular.

Engle Says This Is the Best Book on Germans in Poland

"NO TRAVELER RETURNS," by Henry Shoskes. Edited by Curt Riess. [Doubleday, Doran, $2.50.]

Reviewed by Paul Engle.

When war invades a country, it may be expected that pigs will be stolen, with more or less ease, and maidens will be pursued, with more or less difficulty. The spontaneous appropriations of a foreign army are fairly normal.

What distinguishes the Nazi army from all other invading forces of history is the cold and pre-determined destruction of millions of civilians. Not the result of hunger or lust or greed on the part of soldiers, the mass murder of Jews and Poles was a deliberate policy, carefully planned in Berlin by the race-proud Nazis. To this policy, equipment, metal, men, and supplies were diverted.

It was a serious and deadly business. It was done by Germans in whom the latent foulness and brutality [qualities unhappily latent in every man, but buried too deep for recall in most western countries] had been converted into the daily attitude. The careful destruction by scalding with steam, by gas, by starvation, of millions of "inferior" Jews and Poles and Dutch and all other enemies, is the final comment on the kind of world we are fighting.

For those in this country who argue [and there are plenty who do] that the Germans were only getting rid of Jews, let it be recalled that the Nazis looked on the United States as the lowest country, racially, a hideous mixture of pure German with impure aliens.

Every American should read at least one book on the Germans in Poland, and this book is the best single account, documented, factual, precise. It has an elaborate account of the Warsaw ghetto, and the only full report of the magnificent fight against the Germans put up by the last Jews in the ghetto in 1943, one of the incredible incidents of the whole war in Europe. Yet bitter behind it all is the grim fact that while Germans were persecuting Poles, Poles were in turn persecuting Jews, even Jews who had served in the Polish army.

This is the kind of book we Americans, so far from the events it describes, have to read to complete our grasp of that unbelievable continent called Europe.

Henry Shoskes, writer and economist, was born in Poland and educated in Belgium. As a lieutenant in the Russian army in World War I. he won several decorations. Following the war he was associated with coöperatives in Poland, eventually becoming general manager of the Central Coöperative bank in Warsaw. During the Warsaw siege he was a member of the civil defense committee and later he served as an executive of the Jewish Community council. In 1940 he escaped to America, where he now writes and broadcasts about the Polishh Underground.

Curt Riess, author of "The Nazis Go Underground" and "Total Espionage," was born in Germany and first came to America as the correspondent of a French newspaper. He has become known for his accurate predictions of German moves. At the moment he is in Switzerland, where he is writing for an American syndicate service.

How Reds in North Carry War Burden

Reviewed by Philo M. Buck Jr.

We have been waiting for this book now for a long time. Almost since Pearl Harbor the censorship in Chungking has kept the Communist army and Communist China sequestered from the Allies. Meager stories, and some alarming, have evaded the blockade; and for a year now there has been a growing uncertainty and alarm as to what is taking place in China.

Harrison Forman.

Last year a number of American journalists including Mr. Forman were allowed to visit Yenan, the Communist headquarters. There followed a number of stories in the newspapers. And now we have this book, a closeup of Communist China, its leaders, its army, its people, its activity in the war, and its philosophy of life.

It is a welcome book. And above all it may do the United States and China a very real service, in a cause close to both—this war and the peace in the orient that is to follow.

It will awaken controversy; for it contradicts many ideals that were easy and comfortable. But it also answers many questions—including the all important, how communist [Marxian] is Communist China? Or, to put it in another way, what is the political and economic philosophy of the Communist soldier and his leaders; how far is it consistent with the ideals of democracy?

Let us agree in advance—and this book does not contradict it—that a union between the Kuomingtang [the present Chinese government], and the Kungchantang [the Communist party] is desirable and possible. We can go farther: The latter would, on conditions, accept the leadership of Chiang Kai-shek, for no other leader is in sight or proposed.

What then are the differences between the two parties? It is these that this book sets out to make clear. Each party charges the other with putting party interests above national, and in particular in its support of the war against Japan. Mr. Forman recites first-hand the war activities of the Communists, a fight with the most inadequate of weapons. This is one of the most satisfactory parts of the book.

Each party accuses the other of being unrepresentative of China. The Kuomingtang, say the Communists, is a landlord party and neglectful of the interests of the peasants. It is fascist. The Kungchantang on the contrary, its leaders assert, is truly national, even generous; for as at present constituted it accepts only one-third of the posts in its government, the other two-thirds going to other parties. It has, as the book illustrates, the complete coöperation of all within its region. It is a "continuation of the long struggle for national independence and a democratic way of life."

I repeat, this is a most refreshing book. It will allay some of our doubts anent Communism. It may help to pave the way for a United China. But this will be only through mutual understanding in China. It is not for us to take sides.

Imaginative Quality in an Odd Tale

"TAKE THREE TENSES, A Fugue in Time," by Rumer Godden. [Little, Brown, $2.]

Reviewed by Edw. Wagenknecht.

Each of Rumer Godden's four novels has been a fresh experiment, a fresh creative effort; and she seems to have written "Take Three Tenses" after much reading of Virginia Woolf, especially in "To the Lighthouse" and "The Years." Like T. S. Eliot's in "East Coker," her concern is "Not the intense moment

Isolated, with no before or after,
But a lifetime burning in every moment
And not the lifetime of one man only
But of old stones that cannot be deciphered. . . ."

The idea of time haunts the imagination of the contemporary writer as it has haunted no other generation, and Miss Godden moves backwards and forwards in time with a celerity which might startle even J. W. Dunne. I have some trouble with her transitions, I must confess; and I often find myself wondering from whose point of view her material is being presented, for even if we reverse the terms of "Families possessed houses — not houses the family," Miss Godden's house is never quite a sentient entity.

There can be no doubt, however, as Grizel, the American descendant of the family, begins to understand, when she comes to England to do war work, that "Everything here, even the charwoman, seems to link up with everything else." Indeed, Grizel even comes to see herself, individualist tho she is, as "infinitesimal; a grain in the sand; the spring-off of her tribe; the continuation, nothing more, of what was gone. . . ."

I do not, then, find "Take Three Tenses" entirely successful as a novel, nor do I find anything in it anything like so beautiful as the brief central section of "To the Lighthouse," which seems to me one of the most beautiful things in English literature. But it has been imaginatively wrought thruout, and the quality of the writing is high. There are many charming grace notes, the most charming of all in the person of Lark, the singer's daughter, who is abused by Selina and adored by her younger brother, who permits Lark to slip away from him, yet in a sense retains her always.

Airy Little Tale of a Man Whose Life Was Boring

"THIS TIME FOREVER," by Stanley Kauffman. [Doubleday, Doran, $2.50].

Reviewed by Maureen Daly.

Stanley Kauffman.

This is an airy little story about one Kenneth Gibbs, a young composer, who was marking time as a music teacher in a small college until real love came, only to reawaken not only his genius but that old boy-girl feeling. One day in early summer, irked by his life, his work and his wife, all three monotonous, Kenneth Gibbs left in a huff for New York and there, on his first afternoon in town and atop a double decker bus, he sighted the girl of his dreams, the living replica of a miniature given to him by his father which he had cherished from childhood.

By a strange miracle he saw her again that evening at a musical lecture. By a second miracle he was introduced to her—Anne Benedict, actress. And then, descending quickly from the transcendental to the physical, Kenneth went with Anne to an upstate lake resort.

That one week spent together was possibly the warmest week of the season, for the two discovered not only that they loved each other but also that the miniature Kenneth cherished was a picture of Anne's mother, whom his father had cherished [but never married] in his youth. Back home again, Kenneth discovered that two can play that game and that his harping young wife, not one to let seven days go to waste, had also planned divorce and found herself another love.

The book is written in blithe and trusting prose, presuming a blithe and trusting reader. If the situations are too obviously man planned, if the characters aren't quite real and if the love is too blindly idyllic, well—why bother with a little thing like credibility as long as a couple of star-crossed kids can get together? We all know how it is.

Symbolism Is Found in New Wolo Book

"SIR ARCHIBALD," by Wolo. [Morrow, $2.]

As in a previous Wolo book, "The Secret of the Ancient Oak," so in "Sir Archibald" there is a symbolic analogy to a current world situation. An intrepid little monkey who enters the Eerie Woods to retrieve the lion king's crown discovers that the Meanies and Grizzlegrimm are imaginary dangers—in other words "nothing is to be feared but fear."

Columnist's Book Offers Rich Reading

"JOE, THE WOUNDED TENNIS PLAYER," by Morton Thompson. [Doubleday Doran, $2.]

Reviewed by Will Davidson.

Altho Morton Thompson never really gets around to telling very much about himself, by the time you have finished his book you know him pretty well—and you wish that long ago you had discovered his column. He writes about everything—from Mexican menus to tragedy in lonely places, and most of the time his touch is gentle, sure, delightful.

The book has, of course, nothing to do with tennis nor with a guy named Joe, except that each chapter is headed by a usually pointless quote from the "diary" of the title character. This rather heavy handed attempt at the sardonic is about the only real weakness the book has. That and the chapter on Morton's mother, which has the makings of high humor but doesn't come off.

For the most part, joyously, the book comes off superlatively well. There is idiotic delight in some of his Hollywood yarns. There is sheer, stark drama in his forest fire story—a masterpiece of calm, restrained, yet electrifying writing. There is wonderful whimsy in the story of his brother, Lewie the Horse, who talked to the animals and got their personal opinions on the outcome of the races.

When Thompson turns to cooking he becomes the master of Lucullan literature. There is something radically wrong with your taste buds if you don't drool over his descriptions of Tlaloc pie, or Turkey a la Thompson. When he discusses the newspaper business with dispassionate and affectionate understanding, Thompson shows himself to be a sound philosopher, a practical man of high intelligence. When he spins a brief yarn he usually spins it because of an O. Henry-ish twist that delights you.

There is rich reading in this book. And as a bonus you have an introduction by Robert Benchley and illustrations by that macabre madman, Virgil Partch.

Latin American Field Will Be Tried by Pocket Books

By Harry Hansen.

New York.

MILLIONS of Americans who never before read books have become book readers in the last few years because the price is right, as business men say. Reprint editions low in price, manufactured on a mass production basis and sold thru thousands of new outlets, have made this possible. But only in a few instances are such reprints manufactured by the original publisher of the book. Reprint houses, specializing in this field, have been able to do the job better.

Yet when Robert F. De Graff, founder and president of Pocket Books, Inc., went to South America to discuss the organization of a Latin American house, he found the publishers suspicious at first of the reprint business. They didn't have our system. A publisher issued his own books and kept them in stock. Gradually they began to see the possibilities of mass production of books in Spanish and Portuguese according to the De Graff system and agreed to coöperate in starting it. There will be two separate organizations, one for Spanish and one for Portuguese books. Books originating in those countries will be published as well as translations of American books. A number of trade scholarships, obtained thru the coördinator of inter-American affairs, have been given to Latin Americans who will come to the United States to study publishing and especially mass production.

Name Appropriated by Others.

"When I reached South America," said Mr. De Graff, "I learned that the Spanish and Portuguese translations of our title, Pocket Books, already had been registered by others.

"We then decided to take our English name as the distinguishing trade mark and to call the books Selections from Pocket Books, with the stress on the word selections. We shall try to price them as near to our 25 cents as possible. Labor is cheaper in Latin America but translation will add to the expense. The customary octavo book costs about the equivalent of $1.30 to $1.50 in Latin America. They are printed with paper covers, like those of France, and are unopened. In fact, a book buyer would think his copy had been used if it had been opened. We hope, however, that they will like our cut pages just the same."

It should be added that part of the success of the cheap book in America is the result of a cover that is paper but looks like stiff boards. Thus the American buyer overcame his aversion to paper covers and changed the habit of many years.

What Does He Imply?

The frankest publisher in the country is Bennett Cerf, who announces that he has frequently been unable to read one of his authors. Since he is speaking of Gertrude Stein his remarks are understandable. He also says over his own signature that her new book has parts that are "all too comprehensible."

A few days ago, when reviewing "Crows Are Black Everywhere," by Herbert O. Yardley and Carl Grabo, I mentioned Maj. Yardley's famous book, "The American Black Chamber," which was suppressed at the request of the government because it was supposed to tell too much about our operations in deciphering codes. This brought word from a bookseller that he could supply a few copies at $7.50 each. This ought to be a tip to owners of the book that their copies are worth their weight in butter.

A Brilliant Dinner Company.

Newspaper men never have been thought especially good at managing formal dinners, but the Overseas Press club has become quite proficient in this. Perhaps the fact that the most brilliant war correspondents regularly report their experiences to the club when they check in has something to do with it. At its annual dinner in the Waldorf-Astoria the club had among its members and guests many famous names, including Joseph C. Grew, Elmer Davis, Howard Barnes, Bessie Beatty, Frank Crowninshield, Helen Gahagan Douglas, George Fielding Eliot, Clifton Fadiman, James Farley, Fannie Hurst, Josef Israels II., Henry Kaiser, Albert Lasker, Wythe Williams, William B. Ziff, Otto Tolischus, Lowell Thomas, Herbert Swope, and many others. An observer, wishing to add to the man-bites-dog category of sensational news, said: "Miss Dorothy Thompson sat at the speakers' table without making a speech."

Critics Discuss Criticism.

Reviewers and critics attracted a full house in New York Times hall when they met to discuss their profession under the auspices of that newspaper. With Irwin Edman, professor of philosophy at Columbia, as the moderator—that's a good old New England word that the Town Meeting of the Air has given new currency — three critics from the academic world were pitted against three reviewers from newspapers and everything went smoothly. The three critics were F. O. Mattiessen, professor of literature at Harvard; Lionel Trilling, assistant professor of English at Columbia, and Joseph Wood Krutch, professor of dramatic literature at Columbia; the reviewers were Orville Prescott of the Times, Lewis Gannett of the Herald-Tribune, and myself.

I was surprised at the lack of controversy, for usually men from the academic world carry a grievance. Mr. Matthiessen was inclined to criticize mediocrity in reviewing, but he didn't make it personal. Mr. Krutch contended that reviewing could be good or bad in both serious criticism and the timely review and that good work was done in each. The newspaper men emphasized their function as reporters of timely elements in publishing and Mr. Gannett said he believed people wanted to read books that interpret their world to them. He said most books are food only for the day, but they are nonetheless important.

Not to Blame for Amber.

Many people in the audience were interested in reviewing and publishing, or they would not have attended. I was not surprised to have our old friend, the complaint that publishers dictate to reviewers, make its appearance in one of the questions; the man who asked it added that the Book of the Month club also cracked the whip over reviewers. Mr. Gannett replied that he had learned to respect the choice of the club's editors, but saw no reason for agreement; in fact that very day he had criticized unfavorably its choice of "Apartment in Athens." Another man thought reviewers were to blame for the wide circulation of "Forever Amber." This novel, which has had a uniformly adverse press, can hardly be blamed on reviewers.

Fashion Show an Outlet for Personal Idea

By Norma Lee Browning.

Are YOU one of those many fashion-conscious women who have often said:

"I know exactly what I want, but I've never been able to find it."

Then why not transfer your "dream gown" to paper and try for one of the prizes in THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE's $6,000 American Fashions Contest?

Already thousands of hopeful amateurs, as well as professional designers, have requested entry blanks for THE TRIBUNE's sixth annual nation-wide fashions competition, which was begun for the purpose of advancing and stimulating the creation of American fashions for American women.

If you have an idea, but not the ability to draw it on paper, you may collaborate with an artist. The importance of the sketch lies solely in originality of design. This is what THE TRIBUNE is seeking in its contest.

Regarded as the most outstanding event in the fashion world, THE TRIBUNE's contest is broader in scope and more generous in its prizes than similar contests sponsored elsewhere thruout the country.

It is open to any citizen of the United States, including men and women serving overseas. There is no age limit.

The prizes are $2,000 for first prize, $1,000 for second, and $500 for third. In addition approximately 30 prizes of $50 each will be awarded.

Also, for the first time THE TRIBUNE is offering a special prize of $500 for the best design created especially for the teen age girls and eight of 10 awards of $50 each for the teen age group.

The teen-age contest has been hailed by young and old alike as an incentive for those who are interested in designing appropriate costumes for what is known as a "difficult" age.

Mrs. Grace Pickering, nationally known fashion authority and director of THE TRIBUNE's contest since it began six years ago, states:

"I received a letter from a woman who tells how much it means to her as the mother of two teen-age daughters, to hear that THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE is to hold a fashion show which will include correct clothes for the girl of this difficult age. She hopes that designers all over the United States will realize their responsibility in creating clothes that will help guide the young in dressing in a manner suitable as well as becoming to their age."

Closing date for the contest is midnight May 1. An impartial fashion jury will select the designs to be executed into finished garments at the expense of THE TRIBUNE, and early next fall the costumes will be modeled at an American Fashions Show, at which time the grand prize winners will be determined.

All designs must be sketched or drawn on white illustration board, 14 by 20 inches, or drawn on white paper and mounted on cardboard of the same size. They may be in black and white or in color and must show both front and back views.

Fashions and Fancy.................. By Judith Cass

Spring hit the deck at the Service club's annual meeting the other day in the Arts club. She made herself felt in the wonderful sash appliquéd with fluttering roses which Mrs. J. Hayden Macdonald tied about a severely simple navy blue, short sleeved frock, and in Mrs. Macdonald's short stove pipe hat of navy with its tiny matching veil. Springlike, too, was Miss Mary Jane Brummel's ensemble of a sailor, revers, and gloves of blue and pink candy stripes on a white background, and Mrs. William Pope's chartreuse straw bonnet trimmed with a vari-colored parrot. The hat matched the fresh crepe blouse of chartreuse which she wore under her new gray flannel spring tailleur. Spring sang in the lemon yellow corsage of orchids which decked one shoulder of the new president's, Mrs. E. Payson Smith's, gray wool frock. The dress was made with the deep dolman sleeves that are hailed as the latest fashion, and the tailored belt of gray was piped in gold kid. On her head was a charming little flat crowned, brown sailor, with the edge of the brim wrapped 'round and 'round in a rope of tiny feathers in shades of gray, brown, and beige. Gray also was worn by Mrs. L. Hyland Erickson, whose suit had a pencil slim skirt and a softly bloused jacket, fastened at the waistline by narrow gray string ties. The Ericksons, the Smiths, the John Goodalls, the Allen Camerons, and Mrs. John T. Snite and one or two children apiece, all are relaxing now at the Sea Ranch, near Fort Lauderdale, Fla., where the group has spent several happy holidays together. Gray definitely stole the show at the luncheon, with Mrs. Otto Schulz and Miss Emily Goehst, among others, wearing it. Mrs. Schulz's tweed suit had a country air. She wore an American beauty sweater under it. Miss Goehst, looking pounds slimmer, sported a corsage of rosy camellias and was laughing because those flowers had been chosen especially for her as she "always wears black."

A luncheon which the follies committee of the South Shore Country club gave recently in the Camellia House turned out to be a gay event, with plenty of "gags" and the general uproarious atmosphere of the revues which are presented each spring at the club. When Mrs. Paul M. Flagg, in a wide brimmed hat and black frock, announced plans for a men's ballet, other committee members wanted to know whom she could get to be in it. "Men Marvin's age," she replied, referring to Marvin Brown, another long time committee member. "Men over draft age are still men," Mr. Brown commented quietly. He sat across the table from Mrs. Fred Herendeen, wife of the author of the revue. She was wearing outsize twisted circles of gold clipped to her earlobes, quite stunning with her high draped turban. The show, called "Nic-Nacs of 1945," will be presented April 6 and 7. Notes on the recent Gold Diggers ball, held recently in the Camelback inn, Phoenix, Ariz., tell of how Chicagoans dress up for a gay frolic on holiday. Mrs. Constantine N. Johnson Jr., the former Marcy Wescott, who sang during the evening, wore a broomstick skirt and peasant blouse, while her father, Jay B. Wescott, disguised himself as a bartender with a black mustache. The George Duwe family burst forth in super western regalia, with Mr. Duwe in a bright plaid shirt and levis, which were worn also by his wife and their daughters, Dorothy and Bette, the latter on midsemester holiday from the University of Michigan. Mrs. Philip J. Harrington went to the party in a gypsy costume. Her daughter, Miss Ann Harvey, was beautifully gotten up as a Navajo princess, with flowing skirt, velvet top, and Navajo jewelry. John Ryan attended as a Chinese laundryman, complete with queue and drooping whiskers, while Mrs. Ryan was dressed in a Spanish costume, a stunning white dress trimmed with gold sequins, and a white mantilla.

Women Aids of Symphony Celebrate 10th Anniversary

By Thalia.

To celebrate the 10th anniversary of the founding of the woman's committee of the Chicago Symphony, 158 women gathered at the Casino on Wednesday for luncheon and a triumphant review of their decade of accomplishment. Mrs. Telfer MacArthur, their hard working and efficient chairman, reminded them that for 40 years the men of the Orchestral association had gone on elegantly and exclusively without the benefit of a woman's committee. The masculine members of the association did, in 1928, admit one woman to their sacred precincts, Mrs. Clyde Carr, and in 1934 they welcomed both Mrs. Frederic W. Upham and Mrs. Bartholomay Osborne [now Mrs. Henry Sprague Sturgis of New York], who for six years headed the woman's committee.

Mrs. Upham, who was its first chairman, and Mrs. Carr were at the speakers' table to beam, with the other women in the room, over the committee's progress. It began merely as a ticket selling group, but became so efficient in helping finance the orchestra that last year it raised, thru its sustaining memberships, 53 per cent of the total annual deficit.

Two reasons why there is a deficit were explained by George Kuyper, manager of the orchestra. The series of popular concerts on Saturday nights and the young people's concerts, he said, altho they always are sold out, increase the deficit, for, with every seat sold, their respective revenues are $1,465 and $903.68 [to be exact, he said] and it costs $2,831.60 to give a concert.

Edward L. Ryerson, president of the Orchestral association, paid a warm tribute to the work of the ladies and suggested that they change their name from "woman's" to "women's" committee since "woman's" recalled the days when one woman, but not women, were allowed by the trustees to have a voice in the orchestra's life.

Désiré Defauw, conductor of the orchestra, made a little speech during which he called attention to the fact that on that very day, when he had been rehearsing the choruses of the high schools in the hymn from Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, the allies were converging on Bonn, the city of Beethoven's birth, the city where over a century ago Beethoven had written that tremendous hymn of joy. Altho Mr. Defauw did not mention it, it was there, too, that was written the great fifth symphony, whose heart-bursting four notes became a clarion call to victory.

Three new heads of the suburban groups, which number 15, were announced at the meeting: Mrs. Paul B. Magnuson Jr. to head the Barrington, Mrs. Arthur W. Wakeley the Kenilworth, and Mrs. William F. Peter the Lake Forest groups. The social register of music filled the lovely Empire room of the Casino.

The series of modern arts lectures sponsored by Poetry magazine got off to a brilliant start a week ago yesterday when the ladies, more than a few men and even children crowded into the Arts club to hear and watch Francis Chapin tell and demonstrate how he paints. Most of the audience stayed to luncheon, many of them missing the Council on Foreign Relations luncheon, which they otherwise would have attended to hear Lt. Col. T. V. Smith talk on "British-American Relations in Military Government," and to welcome back to Chicago one of the University of Chicago's faculty members who has been an administrator in North Africa, Sicily, England, and Italy.

At Poetry magazine's speakers' table there were more painters than there were poets. Among them was young Joan Mitchell, daughter of Mrs. James Herbert Mitchell, coeditor of Poetry magazine. Joan Mitchell won first prize at the Art institute summer school of painting at Saugatuck, Mich., which is directed by Mr. Chapin. She also recently won the first prize of the Poetry Society Plans Special Meet Saturday

With the sign of the shamrock appearing again in the land as St. Patrick's day nears, the Catholic Poetry society turns to Ireland of the saints and the scholars for the program theme of its mid-March meeting.

Gathering at 3 o'clock Saturday in the Woman's City club rooms in the Fine Arts building at a literary tea, the group will hear a talk on "The Celtic Revival in Modern Poetry," by the Rev. Jeremiah C. Lehane of the De Paul university English literature faculty. Father Lehane is a native of Blarney, in the county of Cork, the place synonymous with Irish eloquence. Harry Bourke, former president of the De Paul University Glee club, will contribute a group of Irish songs to the program, with Miss Mary Agnes Ryan playing the accompaniments. Garth Healy, consul for Ireland here, and Mrs. Healy have been invited to attend.

Miss Mary Lynaugh, who heads the chapter's publicity committee, is in charge of program arrangements, and Miss Josephine Meers, of tea. Miss Nora Cawley is president.

Another writers' group meeting this week is Matrix, which will give Wednesday evening to manuscript reading. Matrix members are all professional writers or publicists. Manuscript sessions are held periodically, at which those who have new articles or stories prepared for publication are given an opportunity to read their work for critical appraisal. Mrs. Erwin Knehans, who will be in charge Wednesday, plans to show souvenirs from a recent trip to Guatemala. The meeting is set for 7:30 o'clock in the clubrooms at 75 E. Wacker dr.

Friends of American Writers will have a tea meeting at 1:30 o'clock Wednesday in the Cordon club, at which Miss Eleanor Montford will talk on "Shanghai Since Pearl Harbor." Miss Montford was a teacher at Bridgman's school in Shanghai when the city fell to the Japs and was held for seven months in an internment camp. She returned to America on the Gripsholm when the ship made its second trip. Miss Montford is now at the University of Chicago, studying Asiatic history. On the hostess committee Wednesday will be Mrs. Walter Bird and Mrs. Herman H. Schroeder. Mrs. Colin M. Higgins will preside.

Poppy Paleologos to Wed Zenophon Mitchell

Mr. and Mrs. Constantine V. Paleologos of Winnemac av., announce the engagement of their daughter, Poppy, to Xenophon W. Mitchell, son of Mrs. William Mitchell of Chicago and the late Mr. Mitchell. Miss Paleologos is a graduate of Northwestern university and Columbia university. Her fiance, a graduate of Athens university in Greece, has received an honorable discharge from the marine corps, with which he served in the first division on Guadalcanal and Tulagi.

SEEING tanned Elizabeth Hanaman of the Oklahoma State Symphony, in white silk shirt, white shorts, white sandals, playing a violin solo at the Sunday meeting at Camp Sylvania. The muscles under the golden brown skin of her beautiful legs rippled with the rhythm and I realized that superb violin music may indeed come from the heart, but it also comes from the toes!

VISITING in the attractive Eureka Springs, Ark., home of Glenn Ward Dresbach, internationally famous poet, and his gifted wife, Line o' Type Contributor Beverley Githens. As a climax to a delightful evening, we asked Glenn to read one of his poems for us. As Glenn began to read, Judy, our Boston Terrier, who was asleep, began to snore. Gently at first, then louder and louder the snores progressed, slitting the poetic phrases like daggers of sound. Ten years' of Judy's snoring have deadened the Jedge's ears to the disturbance. He sat listening to Glenn, enthralled by words so exquisitely written and beautifully spoken, unaware of the noise. Too far away to poke the snorer, I dripped embarrassed perspiration.

BEING deathly afraid of Brenda, our woman-hating cow with horns and a mean disposition. Then seeing slim little blonde 25 year old Mary Butler walk into Brenda's stall, give the wondering cow a friendly slap on the flank and proceed to play a rhythmic tune on the bottom of the milk pail with Brenda's fresh warm milk.

WHEN Toughie, my own personal pet cat, refused to come into the house because I met him at the door in my dress-up house coat. I realized with humiliation that I had worn denim so much he looked upon me as a stranger in velvet.

MEETING a forest ranger and telling the Jedge: "I want one of those for Christmas!"

SEEING a dozen of my fried pies sell for $100 at a war bond rally. I learned that super-fried pies can be made by starting them baking in deep fat, then transferring them to a moderate oven to finish the job. Especially recommended for fried pies stuffed with mincemeat.

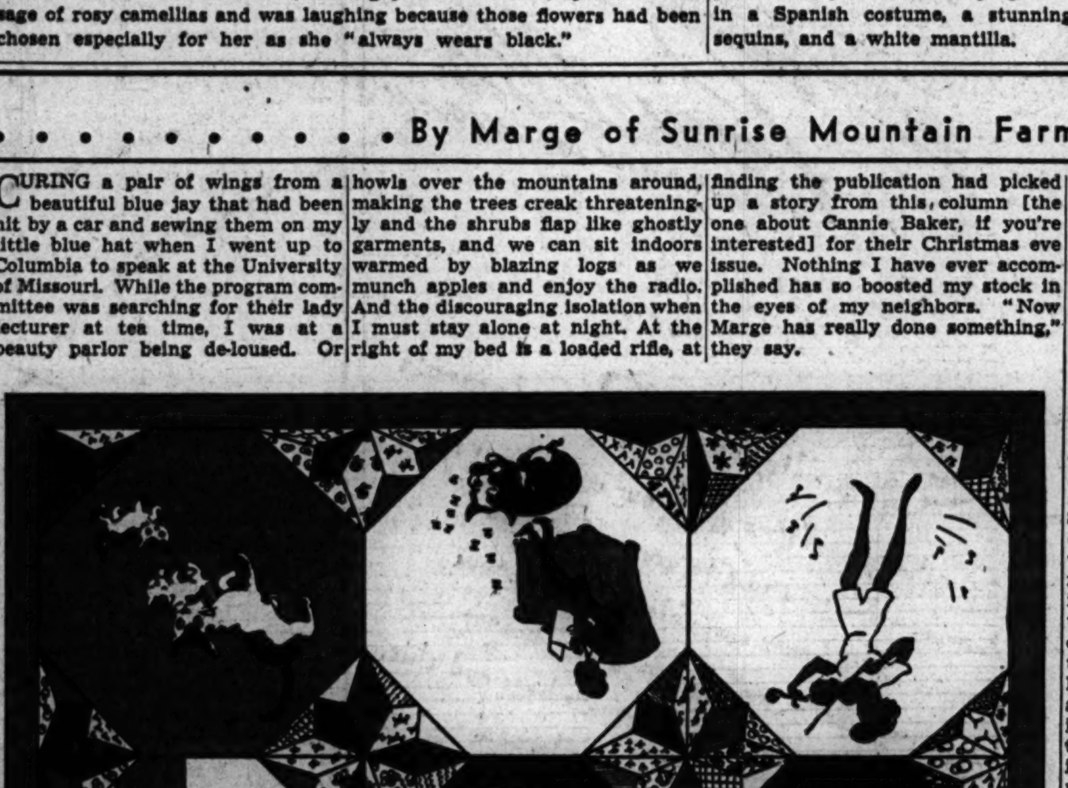
SEEING my Betty Prior rose bush still loaded with exquisite two-color pink blossoms on election day and thinking: "How splendid! I shall have a bouquet for my birthday." [Nov. 9]. An hour later the cows got into the yard and stripped the rose bush of its pink blossoms and green leaves.

SEEING an orange colored harvest moon coming up over the mountaintop, with the features of the man in the moon unusually plain upon its surface, and floating before it a wisp of cloud that looked exactly like a Groucho Marx moustache.

COOKING the giblets from two roast geese with onion, celery leaves, and my pet seasonings to make the world's best giblet gravy for my dinner party. And finding the gravy gone when I returned from powdering my nose. The Jedge had stayed in the kitchen to feed the dogs their evening meal and had mistaken [he says] the gravy for the kettle of pork kidneys and hearts previously cooked for the pets. He had put all the delicious gravy on the commercial dog food fed to the big dogs and the cut-up giblets had gone to Judy, the Boston terrier. Lives there another adult who doesn't know a heart from a gizzard?

POKING fun at an amusing hill character in one of my kodachrome slides when I showed the pictures hundreds of miles from where that particular photograph had been taken. Then learning that the gentleman was the uncle of my hostess' husband. It is a small world and a closely knit one here in the hills.

CURING a pair of wings from a beautiful blue jay that had been hit by a car and sewing them on my little blue hat when I went up to Columbia to speak at the University of Missouri. While the program committee was searching for their lady lecturer at tea time, I was at a beauty parlor being de-loused. Or maybe it was the loose salt that hadn't been shaken out of the wings.



THE delightful daytime isolation of our farmhouse with not another house visible in all the hills around us. [Unless we look from the outdoor fireplace]. The exciting isolation at night when the wind howls over the mountains around, making the trees creak threateningly and the shrubs flap like ghostly garments, and we can sit indoors warmed by blazing logs as we munch apples and enjoy the radio. And the discouraging isolation when I must stay alone at night. At the right of my bed is a loaded rifle, at the left a loaded shot gun. And everybody in the community knows about it and laughs because the burglar would have to show me how to shoot either one of the darned things.

OPENING the Sunday school paper in the interval before class dismissal and the closing hymn, and finding the publication had picked up a story from this column [the one about Cannie Baker, if you're interested] for their Christmas eve issue. Nothing I have ever accomplished has so boosted my stock in the eyes of my neighbors. "Now Marge has really done something," they say.

BEING house-bound four days by a sleet storm, with no callers and no passers-by, and seeing Rounder Smith, ex-moonshiner, striding across the fields toward the farm. Said Rounder, as he warmed himself at the fireplace: "I got to thinkin' mebbe you-ens needed some wood cut or somethin'."

GOING outdoors around 10 p. m. flashlight in hand to investigate Shep's barking and seeing a big airplane high in the starry sky traveling east by south almost over our garden. Just for fun I beamed the light skyward and waved it chummily. Bless the understanding heart of the pilot who turned on his bright lights as a friendly greeting from one who rode the Milky Way to a stranger on a dark lonely mountaintop. For nine years the Jedge has waved madly at airplanes praying for a wing waggle. And I got a response on my first try! Speaking of pilots, recently at Sunday dinner at the Commercial hotel, we met a flyer from a not-too-far military camp. Jokingly, we asked if he were the chap who all but took the ventilators off our poultry house one time and told him in general terms where we live. "O, do you live HERE?" he asked. Taking up a paper napkin, he quickly sketched in each of our buildings [seven on the hilltop, four in the valley] giving the frontal direction of each, proportionate sizes and relative distances between buildings, and topped off the memory demonstration by spotting in the rock piles and pond of our home 40. We argued with him about the location of the rock piles and checked up when we reached home. The flyer had been correct.

MAKING a service flag for our little Harlow Schoolhouse Sunday school and finding that it looked best with 24 stars on it. I sewed them on, with the thought that any extra stars, from 1 to 13, could be named for my first cousins now in service. But I found we had exactly 23 service men and a nurse from this little hill community.

WHEN Charlie Lichty pruned great branches, each loaded with pink blossoms, from the peach trees in our orchard. I carried them into the house and found the only container big enough to hold them was the wooden scrub pail. At Christmas time the same scrub pail held great juniper boughs, richly dark green and loaded with berries as blue and frosty looking as ripe blue plums. Scrubbing always seems so unimportant when the pail is needed for bouquets.

BEING unanimously voted in as a member of a country women's club [Trask Colonial Dames] and learning one of the members [Iris Stapleton] had declared before the meeting: "I won't say how I'll vote until I've met her. If I like her, I'll vote for her. But we've got along without a writer for a long time, and we can still do it!" What you have done, what others say of you, counts nary a hoot in the hills. You're strictly on your own, as a person!

HEARING Grandma Oliver say, at her 90th birthday party: "We'll probably never meet again in this world, Marge. But we'll be together in that Place where there are no partings." Then she added: "Soon's I git this quilt out of the frames, I'll start on yours. Send me them quilt pieces, honey."

SITTING in the cozy dining room writing a letter to my mother and sniffing with conscious delight the pleasant fragrance of the open wood fire in the Franklin stove. "Wonder what kind of wood that is," I thought as I glanced toward the stove. The fragrance had come from burning wallboard. The stove pipe had worked its way out of the chimney and the wall was on fire.

HEARING Beethoven's Sixth for the first time after our record player had been out of order for six long recordless months.

GETTING a Mexican card from beautiful Noreen Linduska, a 1943 victim of infantile paralysis, saying she had flown down to Mexico City to be married. She had progressed from crutches to canes and somewhere along the line of that near-recovery, she had found love!

SEEING a mocking bird with a big ripe red cherry in her beak flying against the blue Ozark sky above feathery green tree tops. Seeing a woodpecker park another cherry in a hole in an orchard fence post, hook his heels into the wood below it, then deftly turn the fruit about, exposing first one side and then the other, until he had eaten the last juicy morsel. And enjoying the obvious pleasure of the birds even tho they were our cherries and our tongues were hanging out for fresh cherry pies.

SEEING the look of shocked surprise in the eyes of strangers who come here to see an author in her ivory tower. Usually they catch me cleaning the chicken house, painting the kitchen furniture, or doing the family washing. I feel terrible at spoiling cherished illusions, but if we had an ivory tower on this farm we would use it for hay.

GOING up to the barn to look hopefully for hidden eggs for an angel food cake in the middle of a summer afternoon and being first one to see Little Eva's two kittens. For six weeks she had successfully kept them hidden at night and morning chore times, allowing them to play when the barn was empty of people and animals, particularly dogs!

WALKING in the woods after a winter rain and seeing every twig tipped with a crystal drop of water. [Sign of more rain.]

DRIVING home at night from a week's story gathering trip, listening [via radio] to John Charles Thomas singing Panis Angelicus as I came along the shadowy wooded road and seeing before me the whiteness of Shep waiting at the big gate, the whiteness of the Jedge's summer suit as he waited in the open door, and the whiteness of a big mountain moon floating above the farmhouse. Home! O, wonderful, beloved Ozark home!

Women Aids of Symphony Review Work

Art Students league of the Art institute and was one of the youngest artists, at 19, to have a canvas accepted for the institute's annual show of the work of Chicago artists. Near-by was Charles West, a generation older, a builder of submarines who relaxes from ship building by painting. He and Joseph T. Ryerson are the "angels" of the summer school, and last year they spent a wonderful two and a half weeks, Mr. West told me, painting as hard as any of the students.

Many of Mr. Chapin's audience were surprised to see how he blocked in his painting—of a girl in a red dress sitting before a golden screen—"without making an outline," one shocked matron exclaimed. In the swift tempo of an hour he made two paintings of the same subject, one to demonstrate how glaze of one color can be applied over another to give it luminosity and the other to demonstrate how carefully the artist must choose his colors for painting directly in oils.

Among the attractive amateur artists at the speakers' table were Mr. and Mrs. Byron Harvey Jr., both of whom paint, and Mrs. Alfred Shaw, president of the Arts club, who studied painting in Paris and almost made it her life work.

The series will continue with a hilarious morning next Saturday when jazz and modern classical music will ring thru the stately hall of the Arts club.

It wasn't so many years ago when Joan Mitchell was one of the country's foremost amateur skaters, and Chicagoans often watched her floating over the ice of the Arena like a butterfly over a poppy bed—making incredibly beautiful swoops. Many of us who were part of the rapt audience of the A. W. V. S. benefit performance of the "Ice-Capades" were reminded of those days when smart Chicago of all ages bound skates onto their willing but not always tutored feet, often with hilarious results. It was very chic for a while to skate—tho few Chicagoans, young or old, worked hard enough at it to become more than mobile.

The American Women's Voluntary services benefit last week was a sellout two weeks before the gala night. Bus loads of soldier patients from Vaughan and Gardiner hospitals and many navy men gave extra color to the evening, as did the members of the A. W. V. S., all of whom wore their chic uniforms. The evening's proceeds will go to the maintenance and enlargement of the three service centers which the A. W. V. S. maintains. One is the only Chinese hospitality center in Chicago, one is a lounge for women officers in the services, and the third is a convenient between-trains lounge.

A week ago yesterday the Chicago Historical society opened a special preview of the fourth Chicago international salon of photography with a tea which filled the foyer of the first floor. The photographs are being shown in the print galleries, which usually shelter the collection of prints of early American cities and scenery which are part of the late Charles B. Pike's legacy to the Chicago Historical society, of which he was for so many years president and enthusiastic friend. James M. Cudahy, the society's president, is in Palm Beach with Mrs. Cudahy. Mr. and Mrs. Stuyvesant Peabody acted as host in his stead. Mr. Peabody is chairman of the photographic committee and himself had three pictures accepted by the jury, which consisted of three men from out of the city, from Baltimore, Amherst, Mass., and Dearborn, Mich., who from the 1,100 prints submitted chose 254 for hanging.

Another tea to preview art was that held for the members of the Arts club on Monday afternoon when the paintings of Jackson Pollock and of I. Rice Pereira were shown. There always is much divergence of opinion concerning the work shown at the Arts club, for its walls are dedicated to news in art, and it is in no sense an art museum, as the Art institute performs that function for Chicago.

Monday's opening elicited from the members the usual divergent comments such as: "Modern art always looks like oilcloth designs to me;" "That Pollock man's paintings look as if he mixed flour with his colors [he does mix cement with them, I have heard];" "Why does Irene Pereira call herself I Rice—anybody could tell those canvases were a woman's." "Did you ever see anything more enchanting than those glass do-dingers of hers? I'd certainly love to own that one called 'Painting on Two Planes'"; "Some day I'm going to buy myself one of these modern paintings and make my life over to fit it—not an antique in the house, not an old idea in the head. I'll hate it, but it'll probably wear me out so that I can settle into old age with gratitude," or an occasional tentative or belligerent "I don't care what any one says, I like what I like."

When Chicago Was Young

By Herma Clark

Letters from Martha Freeman Esmond to her friend Julia Boyd of New York.

Chicago, March 16, 1897.

Dear Julia: I felt sorry to read in the paper a week ago of the death of Mrs. Henry Ward Beecher, widow of the famous preacher. What a strange coincidence that she should have passed away on the anniversary of her husband's death, just 10 years to a day! She had had an interesting life, as wife of the most outstanding preacher in America. There was much of tragedy in it, too—when her husband was sued by Theodore Tilton for the alienation of Mrs. Tilton's affections. I never could believe Mr. Beecher guilty. His wife stood loyally by him during those dark days, and I have read that Mr. Beecher testified that it was her faith which strengthened him in the ordeal. She did not have the talent of her sister-in-law, Harriet Beecher Stowe, but her letters from Florida, published in book form, were quite charming and her magazine articles were excellent and full of sense.

John Hay.

I attended a meeting of the Woman's Exchange of Chicago, held at the Wellington hotel, this week. This is one of my pet philanthropies, for it helps women to help themselves when they aren't able to leave home. I often buy delicious cake and other edibles there and their sewing is beautiful. Mrs. John B. Lyon is our president—a fine woman. I don't know what we'd do without her.

Will is much gratified by President McKinley's appointment of John Hay to be ambassador to Great Britain. We aren't lacking fine representatives for foreign courts. Hay has had a brilliant career, hasn't he? I should think he'd want to pinch himself to be sure he was really the same person who once lived in Pike county. I was surprised to find that he was not a native Illinoisan, but was born in Salem, Ind. However, the family moved to Warsaw, Ill., when he was young and he grew up there. The name of this town originally was "Spunky Point," but it was changed to Warsaw by some people who had been reading "Thaddeus of Warsaw" and Hay wrote later: "I hope every man who was engaged in the outrage is called 'Smith' in Heaven." It was in this town that he found his material for "Pike County Ballads," which I hear he is a bit ashamed of now, tho he needn't be.

His first college days were spent in Springfield, Ill., where he must have come in contact with such men as Lincoln, Trumbull, David Davis, and Stephen A. Douglas, and must have heard the great debates of the time. After graduating at Brown university, he returned to Springfield and entered the office of his uncle, Milton Hay, lawyer. Next door was the law office of Lincoln, so that fate helped him into a wider sphere than that of an Illinois town.

It was John G. Nicolay who got him his position as assistant private secretary to the President when Lincoln left for Washington. He must have been very useful there, with his tact and sincerity. But what an experience for a country boy to live in such close contact with a man like Lincoln! I suppose if you didn't have it in you to be noble, you wouldn't have caught the spirit of Lincoln, but Hays seems to have appreciated the privilege he had, and he must have set down some of his experiences or he couldn't have done such good work on the Hay and Nicolay "Life of Lincoln."

Will thinks his literary success will give him much prestige with the British. I have heard that he and Mr. Nicolay received jointly 50 thousand dollars for the manuscript. We have established a precedent in sending as ambassador to Great Britain such men as Lowell and Motley, and they now must expect to have literary representatives. Hay's marriage to the wealthy Miss Clara Stone of Cleveland will enable him to maintain a position in London which will command respect, too. Now I must close. Much love,

MARTHA FREEMAN ESMOND.

FOOTNOTES.

John Hay [1838-1905] was on the staff of the New York Tribune with Whitelaw Reid; ambassador to Great Britain, 1897-1898; secretary of state under Presidents McKinley and Theodore Roosevelt, 1898-1905. He negotiated the Hay-Pauncefote treaty, by which the Panama canal was begun, and the "open door" agreements concerning China.

Country Sayings.

Mrs. James O. Bailey, Watseka, Ill., sends a country saying we never heard before: "The cat would eat fish but would not wet her feet." . . . John Hooks of Chicago rhymes his contribution to this department:

My grandmama, a wise old bird,
Whose life was deep and real,
Had one old saying, often heard:
"Who will not learn must feel."

[Doubtless Grandmama's words were accompanied by a tap on the head with her thimble.] . . . Mrs. M. L. Keplinger, Carlinville, Ill., has found some rhymes on early rising which she sends. We offer her contribution as a Poem of the Week. [See below.]

A Chicago Woman's Rhymes.

"Up On the House Top," by B. R. Hanby, has been mentioned recently in this column. From notes about this song, obtained by Earl R. Hoover of Cleveland from the Ohio Archeological and Historical society, we learn that it was first sung on Christmas day, 1864, in New Paris, O. It grew into six stanzas when Hanby sent it to a friend, who signed herself "Paulina." "Paulina" liked it and added two stanzas, which included "Lazy Jim" and others. Now, what makes it specially interesting to Chicagoans is that "Paulina" turns out to have been Mrs. W. R. Griswold who wrote verses for George F. Root, P. P. Bliss, and other composers. Has any one any information or recollections of the song: "Up On the House Top" or of Mrs. Bliss ['Paulina']? What else did she write?

Club to Hear Talk-Recital Next Tuesday

Jewish thought is the dominant note of two club programs this week, one directed to its expression in religion, the other thru the medium of music.

Sonia Sharnova.

"Jewish Music and Its Message" is the the title of a lecture-recital which Sonia Sharnova, contralto with the Chicago Opera company, will give for the Chicago Woman's aid at a noon breakfast gathering of that group Tuesday in its rooms at 185 N. Wabash av. Mme. Sharnova will have as her accompanist Esther Hirschberg.

In addition to the music breakfast, the aid also has a current events session on the week's schedule. At noon Friday, B. Designed as a "Town Hall Meeting on Judaism" is the program to be presented at 1:30 o'clock tomorrow before a general assembly of the National Council of Jewish Women's Chicago section in the 5th floor auditorium at 185 N. Wabash av. The similarities and differences of reform, conservative, and orthodox Judaism will be discussed.

Spokesman for orthodox Judaism will be Mrs. Nathan Harrison. Mrs. Harrison is a daughter-in-law of Rabbi Hirsh Harrison. Mrs. Milton J. Klee, a board member of the Illinois State Federation of Temple Sisterhoods and former president of the sisterhood of North Shore Congregation Israel in Glencoe, will give reform Judaism's views. Conservative Judaism will be interpreted by Mrs. Milton C. Lippitz, member of the Board of Jewish Studies, vice president of the Conference of Jewish Women's Organizations, and a past president of the Anshe Emet sisterhood.

Mrs. Felix Levy, for 11 years a leader of the council's contemporary Jewish affairs class, is to have the moderator's role. Mrs. Levy is the wife of Rabbi Levy. Mrs. Lawrence Friedlander and Mrs. Charles Levin have collaborated in arranging the town hall meeting.

Mrs. Harry J. Myerson.

The council's important department of service to the foreign born, of which Miss Harriet Aries is executive director, and Mrs. Harry J. Myerson chairman, will sponsor a special institute at 1:30 o'clock Wednesday. Miss Aries will present "A Case History, in Person." The program title is literally accurate, for the speaker will be a European refugee whose escape and eventual reunion with her daughter in America were accomplished thru the council's aid. Chicago section of the council is headed by Mrs. William H. Sahud.

Phoenix Style Show Benefits the Red Cross

PHOENIX, ARIZ.

There's a great day coming—mañana. With this theme the annual parade of desert fashions took place around the Arizona Biltmore pool last week-end. Some 500 Phoenicians and resorters watched the gay spring "desfile de las modas del desierto" and, at the same time, benefited the American Red Cross.

Play clothes came first. A sultry brunette, dressed in a two piece green rhumba bathing suit, and bare-footed, was first in line. The sun was out, but spectators were glad she didn't have to dive in the pool.

Outstanding among the costumes shown in this group was an exotic wrap-around, in leopard print embroidered with sequins. An American Beauty rose was worn on one ankle.

Riotous color combinations were noted this year, one ensemble boasting as many as five contrasting hues. It might look strange in the east, but with the bright turquoise pool as background and its mosaic border of yellow, navy, red, and green, it seemed fitting and right.

Dudes watching the show astride their favorite steed made an interesting background for the show. Many of the spectators were mistaken for models. Prominent among them were several Chicagoans staying at the Biltmore. Mrs. Edward Cudahy wore a green spectator, two piece sport suit with a white blouse. Mrs. Hugh Foresman was dressed in a soft gray suit, with a pink print blouse. Mrs. Fred Sauter wore a chartreuse silk print with a summer wool coat, set off by a tiny white straw hat with a matching green veil. Mrs. Matthew P. McCullough wore a sport dress of army green with brown accessories. Mrs. D. R. Kearns was wearing a sky blue linen with silver buttons and a white cape. Miss Jane Conrad, vacationing at the Biltmore with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Conrad of Winnetka, wore a turquoise blue suit with a silk print shirt.

Guests at the Camelback inn who were seen at the fashion show were Mrs. Harmon Eberhard of Peoria, who wore a suit of gray herringbone, set off by sables and carried a red lunch box handbag; Mrs. Foster Beamsley of Kenilworth, stunning in a black wool suit trimmed with sables, and Mrs. Lawrence Burke of Chicago in a light blue dress, with matching blue feathers in her natural color straw hat.

Following the show the Frank Elliotts of Chicago, Biltmore guests, entertained a group of fellow Chicagoans at a cocktail party. Among their guests were Mr. and Mrs. Robert J. Dunham, Mr. and Mrs. Berry J. Davis, Mr. and Mrs. Fred J. Sauter, and Mr. and Mrs. Matthew P. McCullough.

Miss Mary Andersen of Chicago, a regular winter visitor in the valley of the sun, entertained a number of Chicagoans at an informal reception in her Biltmore estates home recently. Cocktails and jacamali spread sandwiches, together with Miss Andersen's vivacity and enthusiasm, were the attraction. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. Roy Osgood, Mr. and Mrs. Foresman, Mr. and Mrs. Edward H. Ravenscroft with their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Edward A. Ravenscroft, Mr. and Mrs. Cudahy, Miss Nora Carney, James R. Offield, Mrs. E. Bartholomay Chapin, Mrs. William P. Cagney, and Miss Candida Crowe.

Other Chicagoans at the palatial Arizona Biltmore these days are Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Winston, Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Smith of Winnetka, Mr. and Mrs. Lannan J. Patrick.

Three Women to Tell Stories of Their Lives

By Irene Steyskal.

Every one who has a desire to write a book, the professors of literature, and even some editors and publishers, are wont to say, has at least one first rate story to tell, and that is his own. The Woman's City club has a vice president, Mrs. John Sharpless Fox, who, while not necessarily advocating a mass movement to the typewriter for unlimited production of autobiography, is in general agreement with the professors. With Mrs. Fox, however, it's the story that counts, and whether or not it appears in print is beside the point for her particular purpose.

Recognizing that there was a wealth of interesting stories within the membership, Mrs. Fox, with the publicity committee assisting, has been arranging a series of programs which, focusing on unusual careers, has given the club some of its most pleasant evening meetings this season. One of these informal programs of story telling has been arranged for 7:30 o'clock Wednesday night.

It is not the orthodox account of a professional career, however, that Mrs. Fox offers on her programs, but rather those auxiliary careers that busy women find time to pursue in voluntary civic service. Wednesday night the club will hear personal experiences related by Mrs. Harry Himelblau, Mrs. Folkert Postuma, both members of the club, and Mrs. Dorothy Hunley Wolf, a prospective member.

Mrs. Himelblau is a teacher, but it is not her class room work that she will discuss. During the years of the depression, before relief was formally organized in her Rogers Park community, Mrs. Himelblau's was the moving spirit that started many a good neighbor policy to work, and that is the chapter of her story the club will hear.

Mrs. Postuma's husband was with the Netherlands consulate here for many years, and she will relate experiences in Red Cross work, particularly toward aiding families whose members have been separated by the war to reëstablish contact.

Mrs. Wolf gives demonstration programs in the fuel and power exhibits at the Museum of Science and Industry, professionally, but as a young housewife she did pioneer work with children's groups, and that will be her story.

Previous career story evenings have brought out stories of volunteer workers who have served astonishing numbers of "hot dogs" at service men's centers; who have done yeoman work for Dan Cupid, and helped mend broken hearts.

Some have even followed thru to the closing happy chapter, attending the wedding of the young couple whose romance they helped push over the rocky spots. Others have learned things that have amazed them in service as election judges and clerks—all good grist for the telling.

Tomorrow morning members and invited guests will assemble at 10 o'clock at the club and proceed to the west side district where the proposed medical center will be set up, in the County hospital vicinity, after the war. Walter J. Kelly, business director of the Medical Center commission, and E. Todd Wheeler, director of planning, will accompany the party of club women. Returning at 2 o'clock a discussion meeting will be held at which Mr. Kelly and Mr. Wheeler will speak.

Birthday week, starting tomorrow for the Girl Scouts, recalls that the world has an organization of more than a million youthful misses who are veritable veterans in international coöperation and friendship. There are Girl Scouts and Girl Guides in 32 countries. In the United States, birthday observances are planned on the theme of international fraternity in salute to those youngsters of occupied lands who were for a time driven underground, but who, as the allied armies advance, now are emerging, reorganizing their units, and reëstablishing ties again with friends across borders and seas.

In the Chicago vicinity are some 13,500 girls who wear the green uniform with the scarf pin bearing the familiar emblem of the trefoil. Most of the Scouts, with their troop leaders, will attend church services today in groups, and recognition of Scouting will be conveyed in sermon from many pulpits. St. Paul's Union church at Winchester av. and 95th st. will welcome five troops at today's service; four will attend the Fourth Presbyterian church, and two will congregate at St. James United church at Rockwell and Albion avs., to designate a few.

Each of the 500 Chicago troops have teas or programs planned for the week to which parents and friends have been invited. These are the occasions for the annual collection of pennies for the Scouts' world friendship fund in honor of Juliette Low, the founder. It is the practice for every girl to give, according to her age, a penny for each year—7 to 18. Last year's collection yielded more than $32,000, Chicago Scouts contributing $1,160. The American Friendship pennies purchased milk and eggs for Russian children, rice for Chinese orphans, and clothing and medicine for many a small refugee.

War service of both the Boy and Girl Scouts is a story of astonishing accomplishment which has won praise from the nation's leaders. Membership in the Girl Scouts since Pearl Harbor has increased by 50 per cent. Concurrent with the birthday celebration, a drive for funds is under way to expand opportunities for many more girls to participate in the Scouting program. The campaign here is directed by H. C. Laycock Jr. Eighty per cent of the budget for Chicago Girl Scouting, Mr. Laycock discloses, is met thru contributions from public spirited citizens.

BRIDE OF OFFICER

Mrs. Robert W. DeMoss, the former Gertrude Maternowski, and Lt. (j.g.) DeMoss, son of Mr. and Mrs. John D. DeMoss of N. Lorel av., are at home in Patuxent River, Md. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Maternowski of South Bend, Ind. Lt. DeMoss was graduated from the University of Notre Dame.

Service Societies Schedule Meetings During the Week

The Friends of Handicapped Children, gathering at 10:30 o'clock Thursday morning in the auditorium of the Jahn school, 3149 N. Wolcott av., will hear Dr. Frank G. Bruner lecture on "Just Crippled Children."

Another service group interested in the welfare of physically handicapped youngsters, the Willing Helpers for Crippled Children, will have Miss Mary Cavanaugh, dietitian, as guest speaker at a 1 o'clock meeting Wednesday in the Spalding school, 1628 Washington blvd. Following Miss Cavanaugh's talk concerning school lunch rooms, pupils of the school will entertain with Irish songs. Mrs. Otto M. Olsen will preside.

Arts Society Plans Musical This Afternoon

Members of the newly organized Chicago chapter of the National Society of Arts and Letters will gather for a musical tea at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon in the home of their president, Mrs. Harry Daniel Briggs of 942 Lake Shore dr. The program, which was arranged by Mrs. Lola Carter Robuck, vice president, will bring as participating artists Ruth Klauber, pianist and composer, and Doriss Briggs, harpist.

That the group is interested in patriotic endeavors as well as in its organizational purpose of promoting literary, musical and artistic activities, is evidenced by its sales record of $50,000 of war bonds since the chapter was formed last November.

To swell its war service fund, the Scandinavian Women Singers will give a concert at 4 o'clock the afternoon of April 8 in the auditorium of the Lane Technical High school, Addison st. and Western av. The musical group, composed of the American Daughters of Sweden chorus, the Danish Illinois Singing society and the Norwegian Women Singers league, will present English, Swedish, Danish, and Norwegian songs, which are to be augmented by brief movies of each of the foreign countries.

Mrs. Benjamin Ziegmund of 6635 N. Washtenaw av. will open her home for a literary tea to be given by the Musarts club at 1 o'clock the afternoon of March 24. The program will consist of a talk on Jewish artists by Loucille Leighton, a current events resumé by Elsie Stern, and songs by Lenore Smith. Miss Mildred Weinress is literary chairman.

The club's regular meeting is scheduled at 2 o'clock Wednesday in the Woman's City club, with Mrs. Edward Weinstein presiding. Mrs. Robert L. Huttner will introduce as program artist Miss Beatrice Hollobow, who will give a series of dramatic readings.

The Arts club will provide the setting for a program tea to be given by the Lake View Musical society at 2 o'clock tomorrow. Appearing in 18th century costume, Ethel Swindelle, contralto, will sing songs of the period, with Hellen Morton as her accompanist. Sharing the program, arranged by Gladys Porter, will be Cara Verson, pianist, who just has returend from the west where she has been giving lecture recitals in colleges and universities; Irene Stolofsky Davis, violinist, and Margo Smith, accompanist. Mrs. Frederic Tellander, president of the society, will assist the social chairman, Mrs. Vito B. Cuttone, in receiving the guests at the tea hour following the program.

The Music Study club of Chicago will observe Music Federation day with presentation of a brief version of the opera "Lakme" under direction of Edith Heffner Dobson at 3 o'clock this afternoon in the Alliance Francaise headquarters, 410 S. Michigan av. Betty Jeffries will sing the title role, supported by Helen Wojnarowski, Louis Rousseau, and Charles Fries. Special guests to be welcomed by Mrs. P. George Prescott, who heads the Music Study group, will be presidents of other music clubs as well as Mrs. Alma K. Anderson and Mrs. Royden J. Keith, president and past president, respectively, of the Illinois Federation of Music Clubs.

Mrs. Anderson recently received word from Mrs. Edgar Stillman Kelley, national federation chairman of chamber music, that Mrs. Kelley's committee is offering a prize of $25 for the best answer to the oft repeated question, "What Is Chamber Music?"

Entries from state contestants should be forwarded to Mrs. Louis Kirschbaum, 5943 N. Central Park av., Chicago, not later than May 15.

RECENT BRIDE

Mrs. Robert S. Champion, the former June Marie Peterson, is at home in Salina, Kas., where Mr. Champion is stationed as a navigation instructor at the army air field. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Noble O. Peterson of Oak Park. Her bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Warren W. Champion of Peoria. They both attended Knox college in Galesburg.

Professional Club Women Plan Sessions

It is off with the serious forum and on with the fun for members of the Alliance of Business and Professional Women of Chicago when they gather at 6:15 o'clock tomorrow night in the Chicago College club. Entertainment during the dinner hour will be provided by the club's dramatic group, the Alliance players. But fearful lest the dignity of the group might be impaired, the director, Miss M. Irene Shantz, has refused to divulge the name of the humorous skit which is to be presented.

Mrs. S. Katherine Maddux.

Miss S. Katherine Maddux, president, will remain on the sidelines until time for a brief business session, at which members of the club's 1945 nominating committee will be elected. In the cast of the playlet are Miss Myra C. Billings, Miss Elizabeth M. Haney, Miss Neva O. Leslie, Miss Alva Lowrey, and Miss Annette Van Bezey.

Another business women's group, the Chicago Office Supervisors club, will have A. D. Spaulding, district traffic superintendent of the Illinois Bell Telephone company, as the special guest and speaker at a dinner meeting at 6:15 o'clock tonight in the Army and Navy club rooms, 410 S. Michigan av. Mr. Spaulding's talk will be on "The Shadow of Your Personality."

At 12:30 o'clock Tuesday, members and guests of the Social Economics club will gather in the assembly room of the Republic building, 209 S. Marine Artist to Be Awarded a Scholarship

By Eleanor Jewett.

Coöperation between the art galleries of Chicago and the art of the fighting forces seems to us always a matter of particular importance. The Marshall Field galleries have been asked by the United States marine corps to coöperate in exhibiting a collection of drawings and paintings by marines from Chicago and the middle west now on duty in combat areas. The galleries have agreed to do this, and the exhibit will open Friday.

But the Marshall Field galleries have gone further in the matter. They are doing more than merely showing the work. They gathered together a jury of Chicago newspaper art critics and chose the drawing of greatest artistic merit. The artist of the chosen drawing will be offered a scholarship at the Art institute to help him develop his talents upon discharge from the marine corps. The name of the successful marine will be announced at the opening of the exhibit. This seems to us a small but valuable contribution to the relationship of service man and gallery that could well be repeated in other shows, at other galleries.

Just a word in passing to Signe Palmblad to congratulate her on her 75th birthday tomorrow. Mrs. Palmblad can look back on a career filled with artistic pursuits—painting, dancing, and music. One of her first efforts in Chicago was in connection with Marshall Field where she worked for a time, drawing the most beautiful monograms. She has not lost her skill in this craft. Her paintings of Swedish peasant subjects have given pleasure to hundreds of patrons. In the current exhibit by Swedish artists of Chicago, Club Woman's Bureau, Mandel Brothers, Mrs. Palmblad is represented by two paintings done on her last trip home, a charming "Summertime in Sweden," two little boys playing near the beach in the sunny margin of the sea, and "Afterglow," a typical Scandinavian landscape and sky.

There probably was never a more successful opening in Chicago of a new gallery than the brilliant opening on Feb. 27 of the Associated American Artists, 846 N. Michigan av. Four thousand guests visited the galleries and sales of over $7,000 were made. One picture sold for $1,500 and prices ranged from that down to $5. The galleries are among the most beautiful anywhere in the United States. The art is entirely contemporary American. A rather interesting item about the new galleries is the fact that the cost of preparing them [which came to a startling total — no expense was spared] was defrayed entirely thru the sale of American art. This speaks well for the commercial value of the work done today. The Associated American Artists do not press the most modern art but encourage painters of the sort of picture one would like to hang in one's home, intelligible pictures, beautiful pictures, strong, dramatic, and amusing pictures, charming pictures, and exciting pictures. In fact, if one is looking for a diversified collection of good paintings by some of our most brilliant and solid artists of today, it is well to try your luck at 846 N. Michigan av.

The Chicago Galleries association, 215 N. Michigan av., shows similar work by a group of artists drawn chiefly from Chicago and the middle west, tho a Californian or two, like Jesse Arms Botke and Orrin White, are on their membership list. No one will go wrong who follows the changing exhibits in both these galleries.

A Chicago painter, Carl Wuermer, who now lives in New York, won first prize of $350 for the most appealing autumn scene in the current exhibition of autumn landscapes at the Grand Central galleries. Anthony Thieme, another painter whose work is extremely popular here and has been shown in the attractive Findlay galleries, was awarded second prize of $150. The prizes were awarded by popular vote. They were offered by Henry J. Fuller, president of the Grand Central Art galleries.

The masterpiece of the month for March at the Art institute is a beautiful sofa covered with Beauvais tapestry. The scenes on the back of the sofa illustrate the game of blind man's buff, two little children playing in a summer landscape, and the coloring and composition are exquisite. The accompanying chairs have tapestry backs arranged in pairs illustrating the seasons. Such sets of furniture with their original frames are now a great rarity. The set from which this sofa was taken was originally in the Deering collection. It was presented to the Art institute by Mrs. Chauncey McCormick, Mrs. Richard Ely Danielson, and Lt. Col. William Deering Howe. Other pieces from the same set may be seen in gallery A10 of the museum.

You're being seen at home

... and once more, you look the lady that you are. Not a gamin, in severely chic slacks and sweater. Not a siren. Instead, a gentle woman ... at home to your supper guests in a hostess costume ... like this. You look charming. Feminine. And, yes, you look ... gentle. It is your gown. You see in it the soft silhouette, the easy lines, the pale colors characteristic of this spring's gentle coats and suits and dresses. It is your lipstick ... pink. Your hair ... so carefully groomed. Your accessories ... used with wit and imagination. Yes, it is the gentle look — the look so right for spring, for you. The look we recommend ... and you know, by that token, is right.

GENTLE ... the gown you wear at home. Its broadened shoulders, its fuller skirt planned to make you look narrow of waist. Its line flowing, graceful.

AND GENTLE ... its crystal-sequinned shoulders. Lending a new and cool look to spring and summer hostess gowns. This original by Joseph Whitehead, $135

GENTLE ... your cosmetics. Pink, oh always, pink. Giving cheeks and lips the look of apple-blossoms. Gentle, your hair, up or down, but so carefully groomed.

GENTLE ... the shoes you wear with your new, gentle hostess gown. Perhaps, like these, high narrow wedge sandals of silver kid. Very bare ... and rationed. $22.75

New Orleans Visitors Tax Hotel Service

By Mildred Peterson.

NEW ORLEANS, LA.

Recalling the icy blasts of the north, Chicagoans are revelling in the bright sunshine, warm weather, and the spring blossoms, of historic old New Orleans. Everywhere there are great splashes of vivid pink and red azaleas and camellias in the public squares and gardens.

Hotels are bursting with the highest capacity load of their history, and the five day limit for a reservation is being enforced rigidly in the face of a possibility of the army taking over some of the space.

Southern hospitality is being dispensed even tho "America's Most Interesting City," as it is frequently called, is working night and day to train, equip, and transport fighting men.

This colorful city has been alive not only with sunshine in an 80 degree temperature, but also with music, opera, and social activities, heightened by the visit here of the British ambassador to Washington and his wife, with their son, Lt. Robert Wood, and other members of their party, who were guests in the century old St. Charles hotel.

The Clarksons were hosts at a luncheon at the attractive, popular Town House officers' club in the hear of the city. Lt. Arthur C. Sullivan Jr., U. S. N. R., son of the senior Sullivans of Winnetka was present. Much decorated, Lt. Sullivan has had some 18 months service in the South Pacific. Another navy officer stationed at the base across the Mississippi river at Algiers, is Ensign Eleanor Burke, daughter of Mrs. Warren J. Burke of Hubbard Woods, who was on the committee for a recent dinner dance given at the base officers' club.

Lt. and Mrs. William A. P. Watkins, U. S. N. R., and their daughter, Claiborn, of Lake Forest, also are in New Orleans and worrying, along with other service families about the housing shortage. Another couple, the William Janisches, formerly of Highland Park, are among those taking small houses in the Oakland Park housing project, where the residents have no individual phones, due to the shortage, altho a booth is set up on the street and phone calls made from there.

Mr. and Mrs. Don Hall of Chicago, who are stopping at the Roosevelt hotel after a five day stay at the Jung hotel, which in turn was preceded by the allotted five days at the Roosevelt, also are frequent visitors to places in the "Old Square" or French Quarter, which now comes under the midnight curfew. Much speculation is now going on by the natives, as well as visitors and owners of the bright spots in the Quarter, as to the effect the new ruling eventually will have on this old section, scene of romances, tragedies, and incidents connected with the birth of civilization in the entire Mississippi valley.

On Tuesday Mrs. Wesley Sowers, formerly of Flossmoor, entertained at tea at her home in the attractive Metairie district. Among her guests was Mrs. Harry Rainold, whose husband formerly was a Chicagoan.

Tucson Again Participates in Movie Making

TUCSON, ARIZ.

The Old Pueblo is movie making again. "Duel in the Sun" is the name of the technicolor extravaganza. Hollywood folk of the renown of Selznick, King Vidor, Jennifer Jones, Joseph Cotten, Lionel Barrymore, Anita Colby, and Lillian Gish are in town at the Santa Rita and shooting has started.

In money, cast, time, and buildup, it appears that "Duel in the Sun" will be the colossallest movie yet done in Tucson. Hundreds of local cowpokes are being used as extras, among them guests vacationing at nearby ranches.

Stopping at the Santa Rita and surrounded by the movie activity there are several Chicagoans, among them Leo J. Warren, Mrs. J. N. Wile, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Billiekin, Miss Dorothy Robin, Alfred Kahn, William Fox, and George Shutter.

At Clarey's Lazy K Bar ranch, a short haul northwest of the city in the direction of Cortaro, Mr. and Mrs. Harry H. Hofherr and their son, Edward, of Evanston are riding, reading, sleeping, basking in the sun, and swapping tales on the life of the old west. Also at the ranch are Walter Noyes of Chicago and Mr. and Mrs. Irving K. Stone of Battle Creek, Mich.

Rancho Grande at Nogales, 70 miles south on the Mexican border, continues to attract visitors who find that the international flavor and gayety of life in the border town present a pleasant antidote to the frantic immediacy of metropolitan living. Commencing this week, Nogales has become more closely connected with lower Sonora thru the institution of regular air routes from Nogales, thru Sonoran capital Hermosillo, to Guaymas, Mazatlan, and Guadalajara.

Now at Rancho Grande, pleasantly situated atop a mountain overlooking Nogales and the northward road on which automobiles tooling along at night look like remote fire flies, are Mr. and Mrs. Melvin H. Cline, Miss Ernestine Paul, Mr. and Mrs. Philip S. Bloom, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Herzman, Mrs. Edwin Hokin and son, John, all of Chicago; and Mr. and Mrs. John F. Clark of Wenonah av. in Oak Park.

Wise Parents Help Children Learn Habits

By Gladys Huntington Bevans.

[Copyright: 1945: By News Syndicate Co., Inc.]

There's no questioning the fact that many things our babies and small children do are instinctive—such as sucking [or eating], crawling, reaching, crying, and other activities and reactions. But there are many things our babies, living in a civilized world, do not do instinctively. The many physical and moral habits they must acquire have to be learned—by direct or indirect teaching, by example, and by the atmosphere that prevails in their home. Leaving out the question of moral and social attitudes, let us look at the physical development of our children.

If we think about it, we realize that babies and children living in a civilized world have to acquire just the ordinary skills gradually step by step, and with patience. This is a fact—one which all of us parents should keep in mind as we see our children thru their early years.

The habit, for instance, of eating in our civilized way by using a spoon and fork, of getting food neatly into the mouth and keeping it there, and of adjusting to a variety of strange foods of different tastes and textures, is one that has to be learned. These and others, like washing hands and lacing moccasins and all routine acts, we must remind ourselves, are new and difficult to a young child, altho familiar and stale to us after years of repetition.

With this "slow learning" angle on our children's habits well in mind, another suggestion should be a foregone conclusion. It is: Banish the idea of spanking or punishment. It isn't an intelligent approach. It doesn't develop your child's intelligence, and so doesn't help him to learn. And it certainly doesn't start you both out with a relationship based on love and understanding—which, incidentally, is a practical as well as an agreeable relationship.

And now comes another suggestion, number three. It is: Make life as pleasant as possible for your child while early habits are being acquired—that is, while things are being learned. Perhaps I can illustrate best by giving an example of the opposite: If a small child is nagged and scolded for his manners at the table while he's trying his best to manage his spoon and eat in the way we call proper, he's going to have a resistance to the whole eating performance, and probably to the food itself. Frequently this leads to later meal time troubles, not to mention that all this friction interferes with his digestion.

Another example of wrong methods is provided by the mother of the near-baby who, in trying to teach him bladder control, scolds and spanks him for "accidents," so that he associates the bathroom [or its equivalent] with cross looks and voice. He not only becomes unhappy, but often quite confused or resistant, and so learns less well. Or perhaps he doesn't learn at all! Nursery schools and guidance clinics often find this to be the result of trying to spank a child into control.

The motto then is to have pleasantness associated with the habit to be acquired.

Yet another suggestion is: Capitalize your little child's successes and minimize his failures. This doesn't exactly mean that you have to make a fuss over or praise extravagantly every achievement in learning, but it does mean that you might act pleased or approving, or actually praise him when learning is going forward apace, especially where your "small one" seems to have made some conscious effort.

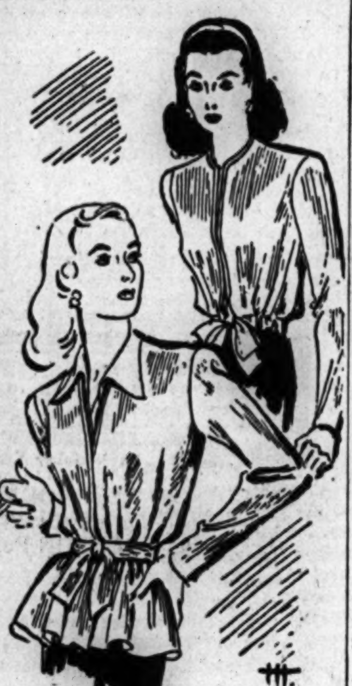
You see, lots of the things your child tries to do are done not because he sees that they're right, or even sees the sense in them, but simply because he knows you want him to do them, and he needs your approval. So celebrate, in a sensible degree, your child's successes.

Fashions

By Angela

Girls and young women who always have an extra sports jacket in their spring and summer wardrobes would do well to discover the luscious, soft, 100 per cent wool jersey jobs in three different styles, moderately priced, and in a wide color range.

The delicate powder blue, wool jersey, torso length jacket has a smooth fitting stitched-in belt with loose tie loops marking the center closing. A slight fullness is indicated above the waist line in black, and soft shirring shows below the belt in front. An inverted plait across the shoulder creates an effective broad shoulder detail. It also is available in coral, fuchsia, shocking, lime, Kelly, aqua, cocoa, and black.



A style similar to the large figure illustrated, with a buttoned front closing instead of the tie, is available in sizes 10 to 44 and priced under $6.

For wear with slacks, skirts, and over a one piece dress is the lovely, 100 per cent wool jersey lumber jacket, in background. Collarless, it has two rows of stitching around the casual neck line and down front. The adjustable belt runs thru a slotted waistband and ties in a neat bow. It is available in sizes 10 to 20 and priced under $6.

A Friend in Need

[Activities of the Sally Joy Brown department are sponsored by Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc.]

By Sally Joy Brown.

We hope our readers will continue to give their friendly help to our needy here at home. Because of aid sought for the peoples of desolated war torn countries, and the time and financial assistance given services concerned with military and naval welfare, we are apt to be unmindful of unfortunates who are by-passed in the stress and strain of war time activities.

It is difficult to keep the head and spirits up when clothing is shabby and worn. We ask our readers' consideration of the following requests.

Mr. M. suffers with a heart ailment and has had the misfortune to have one foot amputated. These physical disibilities, coupled with the additional handicap of advancing, age, make it extremely difficult for him to obtain and hold a job. He is in need of a warm overcoat, size 40, and will be able to arrange to call for a south side offer.

Mr. B. of the welfare department in a neighboring state, interested in the rehabilitation of men under his supervision, writes: "Clothing drives have utterly cleaned out the usual sources of supply here, and there seems to be nothing left for our own unfortunates. I thought you might be able to help me obtain two topcoats or overcoats and suits, size 44, for men who must be able to present a respectable appearance in order to accept the positions open for them."

Mrs. L., whose age and physical infirmities prevent her from working, writes in behalf of her only son, who suffered a partial stroke some time ago, but has recovered sufficiently to accept employment on a part time basis. A suit and topcoat, size 38 tall, are requested. They live on the north side of the city.

A jacket, size 36, and trousers, size 32x32, are urgently needed for a boy 16 years old. Caught in the turbulence of the times, too young for military service, restless, and lacking the essentials for normal living in his every day life, he has been given an opportunity to erase his mistake under the wisdom and guidance of a man who thoroly understands the problems of underprivileged youth. Offers may be sent to this office for forwarding.

Chicago Junior ORT Program Meeting Today

Chicago Junior ORT [Organization for Rehabilitation thru Training] will have a diversified program at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon in the Midland hotel, which will include a lecture on social security by S. E. Padman of the Chicago Security board, and a showing of late style trends in a "Fashion Rhapsodies" revue to be staged by professional models under supervision of Mary Mogal. Leonard Morganstine, president, has invited all members and friends of the society to the gathering.

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1 no trump	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead, two of spades.

When the going is difficult it is wise not to attack. The smart quarter back on a rainy day is inclined to turn possession of the ball over to the opposition with the hope that they will do something favorable to his side. So it is with the declarer who holds certain combinations of cards with which it is not easy to attack. When a player holds the queen in one hand and the jack in the other it is very difficult to promote a trick, but if the opposition can be made to lead that suit a trick is assured. Today's hand provides a clear illustration.

East's bid of one no trump is proper. Holding a 4-3-3-3 distribution and only a little more than four honor tricks, that call is much preferable to an introductory bid of one diamond. Unless partner has about one and one-half honor tricks it is not likely that game can be scored. If he has that much he will raise to two no trump and the opener can go on. If he has less than that he will pass. If a diamond is bid and partner responds with one no trump, that may indicate one trick or a trick and a half, and East will not know whether to pass or try once more.

South opened the deuce of spades and the jack went to declarer's king. Six tricks were readily available and East set about building up the seventh trick in diamonds. A low one was led towards the jack and was taken by North's ace. The spades were cleared and after the clubs were run another diamond was led towards the queen. The defense thus took three diamond tricks, two spades and two hearts, defeating the contract a trick.

This was just the type of hand on which declarer should give the opposition the ball. If the opening lead is honest South is marked with only four spades and declarer should cash the ace and king immediately. This should be followed by running off the four club tricks. The opponents then are given the lead with a spade and after cashing another trick that suit, they will be obliged to lead either a heart or a diamond. Whichever it happens to be declarer will have his seventh trick built up for him by the opposition.

Thru The Looking Glass

It's just about at this point of the neither-winter-nor-spring succession of days that a gal needs something to buoy up her spirits and brighten her appearance. It's too soon to wear an Easter hat, and it's monotonous wearing winter duds. So the best thing we know is to treat yourself to a new lipstick. It's a fine way of accomplishing two purposes with a profit to yourself.

Most of us can almost always use a new lipstick, and, if you'd like to try something really nice, look up a new stick that recently has come to market. It's a companion to an outstanding make-up base that made its appearance some months back and is just as excellent as its predecessor. This is the kind of stick that gives the lips the look of lovely smoothness you're apt to envy in the photographs of fashion models. The lips can stand close scrutiny when they're covered with this cosmetic, and have a soft, velvety textured finish that is most attractive.

The manufacturers tell us that the stick is "climatized" with special protective qualities that help sensitive lips withstand the rigors of weather. With March winds upon us, this is a quality worth noting. This same feature helps the lipstick adapt itself to any type of lips, keeping dry ones comfortable and smooth. Conversely, it will help naturally moist lips to withstand smearing.

We're particularly impressed with the durability of the lipstick. It stays put for long hours, with the lips remaining perfectly made up and without need of redoing for as much as a full morning or afternoon.

There are six excellent shades to choose from, ranging from a deep garnet tint to a buoyant fuchsia. It's this latter tone we think is particularly pretty and appropriate for wear with the new spring colors.

The plastic case in a delicate pink tone with gold lettering is wonderfully slim, and you'll be proud to add it to the contents of your purse.

Dorothy B., Bay City., Mich.—If I put too much bluing in some garments I soak them in a mixture of 2 quarts of hot water and 3 tablespoons vinegar. This will do the work.

Emily C., Chicago—To remove dust from pages and covers of books at housecleaning time I use a wall paper cleaner. This is a time saver.

Amy B., Milwaukee, Wis.—When the nozzle lips of my vacuum grow gummy or greasy and there's a grimy film apparent I fall back on some good metal polish and steel wool. This will furnish a nice "glow" and the cleaner has a fresher face.

Mrs. Teresa G., Columbus—To restore color to a wood finish which has turned white because of heat or water I mix the following solution in a small bottle: 1 tablespoon vinegar, 3 tablespoons boiled linseed oil and ½ teaspoon turpentine. Shake this well before using, cover spot with liquid and let stand a few minutes. Then rub with soft cloth following grain of wood. I repeat if necessary.

Now—please—your idea!

Thousands watch the face grow younger this scientific way

Sounds too good to be true, doesn't it . . . that science . . . with ENDOCREME . . . is helping thousands of women between 22 and 70 to regain a more youthful skin of face and throat? But it is true . . . true to a degree hitherto thought impossible. Yes, ENDOCREME can aid most women to improve and beautify the skin itself, not merely its superficial "look." Only ENDOCREME contains that great laboratory discovery, ACTIVOL. Now, ACTIVOL is the scientific counterpart to a natural, skin-vitalizing substance that tends to decrease with age. The ACTIVOL in ENDOCREME acts to compensate for this natural deficiency. Absorbed beneath the skin's surface, ENDOCREME helps to firm tissue, rebuild cells. This aids the skin to become fresher, softer, more radiantly youthful again. How better can you invest your cosmetic dollars? Many report vast improvement in only 30 days.

Quick Biscuit Variations Are Boon to Cooks

By Mary Meade.

[Copyright: 1945: By The Chicago Tribune.]

Plain baking powder biscuits are good eating for anybody, provided they are light and fluffy, and served hot. Whether you make your own or use a prepared mix doesn't matter much, but every cook should know half a dozen or more variations of baking powder biscuits.

The addition of a little sugar and an extra tablespoonful of shortening makes shortcake dough out of biscuit dough. An egg or two can transform the mixture into a coffee cake. Here are a few biscuity treats which illustrate the versatility of the basic dough.

Orange Peek-a-boo Biscuits.

[About 16.]

- 2 cups sifted enriched flour
- 3 teaspoons baking powder
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ¼ cup shortening
- 1 tablespoon grated orange rind
- ⅔ to ¾ cup milk
- 16 orange sections
- ½ cup sugar

Sift flour, baking powder, and salt. Cut in shortening and add orange rind. Add milk, stirring only enough to moisten flour. Turn out on lightly floured board and knead for 30 seconds. Roll out to a square sheet ¼ inch thick. Cut in 3 inch squares. Roll orange sections in sugar and place each section diagonally on a square. Fold corners of biscuit dough over orange sections, pressing tips together. Place on greased baking sheet and bake at 450 degrees about 12 minutes. Serve hot.

Marmalade Triangles.

Roll baking powder biscuit dough ¼ inch thick and cut into 4 inch squares. Drop 1 teaspoon orange marmalade in the center of each square and fold one corner across to opposite corner. Press open sides together with tines of a fork. Brush lightly with melted margarine and bake at 450 degrees.

Quick Apple Coffee Cake.

Add 2 tablespoons sugar to baking powder biscuit recipe and roll the dough ¼ inch thick. Brush with melted shortening and cover with chopped apples, using about 3 cups chopped apples. Sprinkle with ½ cup sugar and 1 teaspoon cinnamon [or use honey and cinnamon]; roll up like a jelly roll and shape into a circle or a baking sheet. Bake 20-25 minutes at 425 degrees and frost lightly while warm with simple confectioners' sugar icing. Sprinkle with chopped nuts.

Crumb Topped Coffee Cake.

- 2 cups sifted enriched flour
- 4 teaspoons baking powder
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ¼ cup sugar
- 1 egg
- ¾ cup milk
- ¼ cup shortening

Topping:

- ¼ cup margarine
- ¼ cup white or brown sugar
- 1 teaspoon cinnamon
- 1 cup fine dry bread crumbs

Sift flour, baking powder, salt, and sugar. Cut in shortening. Add egg to milk and stir into dry mixture. Stir vigorously for a few seconds. Spread in greased square cake pan and cover with topping. To make topping, cream the ¼ cup margarine with the ¼ cup white or brown sugar and the cinnamon. Work in crumbs.

Waffled Sandwiches.

Roll biscuit dough ¼ inch thick and cut with round cutter. Spread half the rounds with sandwich spread and top with the other rounds. Place a sandwich in each section of a hot waffle iron and bake about 3½ minutes, or until well browned. Serve hot.

Cinnamon Twists.

[One dozen.]

- 2 cups sifted enriched flour
- 3 teaspoons baking powder
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ¼ cup sugar
- ¼ cup shortening
- 2 eggs
- ¼ cup milk
- Melted margarine
- Cinnamon sugar or honey and cinnamon

Sift flour, baking powder, salt, and sugar. Cut in shortening. Beat eggs and add milk. Stir into flour mixture, then turn out on lightly floured board and knead gently for 30 seconds. Roll into a large square ¼ inch thick. Cut into strips an inch wide, then cut strips in halves crosswise. Brush each strip with melted margarine and sprinkle with cinnamon and sugar, or brush with honey and cinnamon. Fold two ends of strip together and twist the strips. Place on greased baking sheet and bake at 425 degrees for 12 to 15 minutes.

New "Lemonade-Type and Terpenes" Treatment SPEEDS RECOVERY FROM COLDS

Used originally by New York doctors, this new-type treatment greatly lessens severity of colds and coughs and helps speed their disappearance. Colds promising to become severe become mild; customary discomforts are minimized.

Benefits Comparable to Taking Lemonade

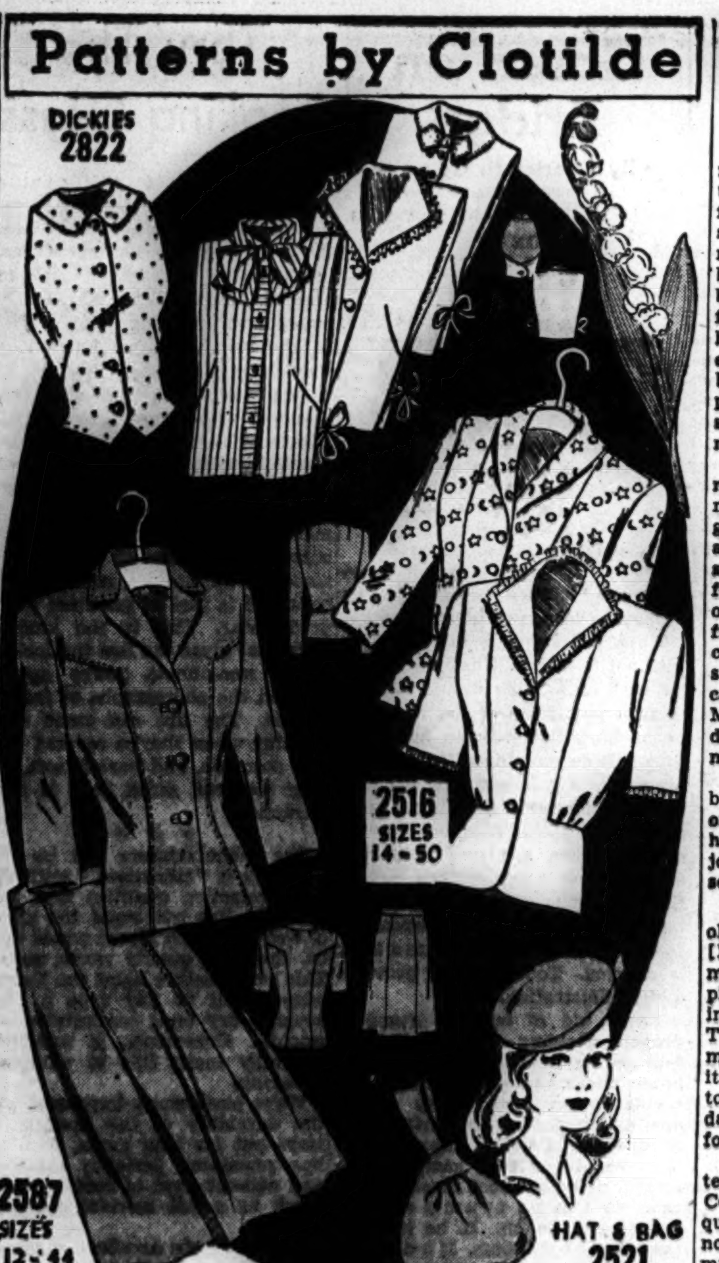
By this combination treatment, sufferers receive large doses of Vitamin C and terpenes several times daily. Vitamin C is largely responsible for effectiveness of lemonade with colds; terpenes act on bronchial tubes to help speed breaking up of cough. You give yourself this combination treatment, get those vital Vitamin C and terpenes, when you take Foley C & C Treatment Tablets and Foley's Honey & Tar Cough Syrup.

Unbelievably Quick Relief

Cold and cough sufferers find this new combination treatment unsurpassed. Head becomes clearer . . . nasal discomforts lessen . . . coughing diminishes . . . throat eases . . . aches and pains subside! Because of Vitamin C and terpenes, colds and coughs go quicker.

If you have a cold and cough now, take advantage of this new development. Get a 50c bottle of Foley C & C Treatment Tablets and 60c bottle of Foley's Honey & Tar Cough Syrup at any Walgreen or other leading drug store today. Your money back unless delighted with the speedy relief and speeded-up recovery secured.

Patterns by Clotilde



By Clotilde.

These four patterns comprise a complete spring ensemble. Add a smart pair of shoes and some lovely gloves, and you have an outfit to stand you in good stead on Easter Sunday and in succeeding weeks.

The first pattern makes four varieties of dickies; the second, two versions of over-the-skirt blouses; the third, a two-piece suit with smooth and tailored, but softly feminine, lines. The fourth design creates a bag and hat ensemble.

All types of lingerie fabrics, either plain, dotted, or striped, make up well in the dickies, which are wonderful pinch-hitters when you tire of blouses. The blouses, on the other hand, go in as well for fanciful prints as they do for whites and pastels.

Style No. 2822 is designed for one size, each version requiring only one yard of 39 inch fabric.

Style No. 2516 is designed for sizes 12 to 50. Size 36 requires 1¾ yards of 39 inch material with 1½ yards of ruffling for version with short sleeves and revers; 2⅝ yards for other version.

Style No. 2587 is designed for sizes 12 to 44. Size 36 requires 4 yards of 39 inch or 3 yards of 54 inch material.

Style No. 2521 is designed for one size, both hat and bag requiring ⅝ yard of 35 or 39 inch material.

Each pattern is 10 cents, plus 2 cents for mailing.

The spring edition of The Chicago Tribune Book of Clotilde Fashions now is on sale at the Public Service offices, 1 S. Dearborn st. and Tribune Tower lobby for 15 cents. The cost is only 12 cents if the book is ordered with a pattern from the address in coupon.

Lady of the House

An Old Spoon.

Perhaps sheer perverseness made me stir the corn bread batter with the old wooden spoon my grandfather had whittled from a stick of straight "body maple," when a more effective tool would have been the slotted one of yellow birch I had bought at the door from the man who made it. But, having a vast respect for the honest, simple old things being brought back into service these days, it pleased me to be sentimental instead of progressive, for the moment.

The spoon had sacrificed symmetry to service; many, many stirrings and beatings through three generations have worn the left side almost to the middle, and left the slender handle polished smooth by feminine fingers. I wondered how often it had kept the apple butter from sticking to the bottom of the crock on the back of the old cook stove; how often it had beaten up cake batter in mother's old lustered Maastricht bowl with the Chinese design; but the sphinx on the trade mark does not say.

Certainly it has taken all those beatings face on, and given way only fiber by tough, tiny fiber; for here it is still able to do a good job. Rather typically American, it seems to me.

To add to our little chapbook of old family customs: Kittie Stiles [Benton Harbor], following in her mother's footsteps, always makes a pillow case on New Year's day to insure plenty for the coming year. The pillow case represents "a money bag to keep your wealth so it doesn't get away from you." She, too, cooks a cabbage on the first day of the year to insure good luck for the household.

Mary Marie, who does a most interesting column for the Putnam County Record with all the piquancy of the best mixed pickles—not too sour, too sweet, nor too much mustard—tells of one of the traditions of the Hawthorne family. They have a cupboard door where all of them for three generations have been measured from the time they could just stand under it until they were full grown. They never allow that door to be redecorated on the inside, for it is all covered with marks and names and dates.

What cherished old custom has your family? What new one are you starting?

Like so many of us who are hard pressed, Alice Moran, in some leisure moment, likes to revert to thoughts of happier days—

Oh, let me dream when even sun is low,
  Of Pyrenees in far off sunny Spain,
  Of heather fields of Scotland in the rain,
Of snow capped mountains in old Mexico.

Oh, let me see the great pine woods of Maine,
  Historic homes in Chatham by the sea,
  Tapoca lodge in dear old Tennessee,
The Smokies in the spring—just once again.

Dim not my memories of Lake Champlain,
  Of quaint old streets in Canada's Quebec,
  White sea gulls from an ocean liner's deck,
Brown orchids in the tropics after rain.

That I may view again the art in Rome,
  Killarney's Lakes within the Irish shore,
  The Tower of London with its ancient lore,
Loved town of Durham, once my father's home.

Give me an open fire and there to dream
  While clocks proclaim the lateness by the chime
  Of bells, that mark the passing hours and seem
To say, "In life there is so little time."

Gertrude Robb, whose verse in this column many of you treasure, sends us this comforting—

PROPHECY.

Does the grass grow tall above me,
  Blood watered these many years?
Do the flowers burst above me,
  Still drenched with mothers tears?
Do the guns of war,
  With their mighty roar,
Tear up the earth again?
Do not despair,
Does not the thunder herald the cleansing rain?

Copies of Mrs. Robb's "The After glow" again are available—free to all Gold Star Mothers, 25 cents to others. Address Mrs. Cyril B. Robb, 10357 Avenue J, Chicago, 17.

Lenten dishes can be made "super-delish" if you'll let HEINZ Condensed Soups help out! Each of them can be used in so many ways . . . as nourishing soup-starters for your meals or to add a more delicious taste to your entrees. Try these, for instance . . .

SPANISH RICE

Fry 4 slices bacon until crisp; remove from skillet and chop. Saute ½ cup chopped onion and ½ cup chopped green pepper in bacon drippings until onion is tender. Add 1 11-oz. can HEINZ Condensed Cream of Tomato Soup, ½ cup water, 2½ cups cooked rice, 1 tsp. salt, ⅛ tsp. pepper and bacon. Bake in a greased casserole in a moderate oven (350° F.) for 30 minutes. Serves 6 to 8. ¼ cup grated cheese may be sprinkled over top.

PEA SOUFFLE

Heat 1 11-oz. can HEINZ Condensed Cream of Green Pea Soup and ½ cup grated American cheese together. Cool. Add 4 egg yolks, one at a time, beating after each addition. Add 2 tbs. bacon fat. Mix thoroughly. Beat 4 egg whites until stiff but not dry, and fold into the mixture. Pour into a buttered casserole, bake in a slow oven (300° F.) 1 hour. Serves 6.

Remember that HEINZ Condensed Soups bring you the valuable nutrients found in real cream, plus the food value of the finest vegetables!

Silvo silver polish

Silver does NOT have a "split personality" . . . but it DOES show a "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" change in looks depending on how you care for it! Don't think this means lots of time and elbow grease on your part, though . . . for SILVO Liquid Silver Polish keeps silver lustrously shining and polished in record time! This creamy liquid polish gets right down into crevices and cleans with only the lightest of rubbing. It leaves no chalky deposit for you to remove. Best of all, it's SAFE for your silver . . . kind to your hands! Ask for SILVO (25c) at leading Department and better Grocery stores!

The VICEROY filter tip keeps tobacco crumbs from spilling out and leaving you with a limp, unattractive looking smoke . . . it checks resins, tars and other throat irritants and rewards with a clean, mild smoke,—minus the nuisances of tobacco crumbs flecking into your mouth or onto your teeth. Ask for VICEROYS!

MONEY . . . TIME . . . COMFORT! These are three mighty important things to save for yourself . . . and you can have more of each if you'll try a CROWNING GLORY Cold Wave Permanent right at HOME! This compact is utterly stunning . . . a 5" gem that's crowned with a circular shield of sterling silver, beautifully engraved in a scroll leaf. Cost is $10 (plus tax) . . . to me it looks well worth $15! A circular mirror (large enough to show your whole head), and a sifter for loose powder fitted inside. As a gift, this VOLUPTE gem is bound to be a magnificent "hit". Ask for it at your favorite store.

Few Molyneux Originals Are Shown Here

By Rea Seeger.

Fashion news of pre-war importance marks the few but genuine Molyneux originals from a spring collection, now available in a swank Chicago shop. They are representative creations of this famous designer, unmistakably Molyneux because of the fine details, the superb craftsmanship visible in the seaming, cut, and flawless fit. Molyneux always, with or without the hampering limits of war time shortages, creates with top flight genius for the well groomed woman, for the woman who demands excellence in line and fitting.

Two piece suits, so simple that they are classics, still rate superlatives. The jackets are the "just right" length, long the signature mark of a real Molyneux. The shoulders are appreciably wider; sleeves are easy and beautifully cut; details, such as clever insets, stitched on motifs of elongated chevrons, or stitched flat folds that form decorative motifs, are true Molyneux touches. The skirts, cut on a true bias, flare youthfully around the hem and fit snugly over the hipline.

Ensembles of dress and coat are perfect models of the well mannered combination. But this spring these duets appear far more securely matched than formerly. It would take an intrepid soul to separate the two, and wear either dress or coat with other wardrobe dresses, jackets, or coats. Details of the coat are repeated in the dress worn underneath so perfectly that any separation would be a fashion error.

Simply designed coats with this creator's ability to cut and fit, instantly recognized, are of spring navy blue. To the uninitiated they merely are full length coats of navy blue wool, until they are on the figure. After that they are models of great distinction, with tailored details peculiarly Molyneux in his tradition of flawless simplicity.

Under such models are worn his newest spring dresses of daintily printed rayon crepes. These, too, are dresses that look far more sophisticated on the figure than off. Necklines are high and round, with a soft bow to show over the collar of a coat or jacket, and a gathered skirt with fullness knowingly pushed to the sides.

Short dinner dresses are accentuated with lace in skirt, bodice, and sleeves. One model features lace as an overskirt, and altho the shade of the lace is unexpectedly mauve-ish, remember Molyneux designed with available materials, and under the most difficult conditions of history, bombed London.

The long or floor length dinner dresses stress the sculptored or fitted silhouette, great simplicity of neckline, the new widened cap shoulders, and the sheath skirt slit in front.

Sketched are four newly unpacked originals by Molyneux. They are part of a small collection featured exclusively in one of Chicago's swank shops. For further information call Superior 0200.

On the House

By Louise Bargelt

Have you seen our leaflets on post-war homes? . . . If you have not already received them you will find they contain vital information available at the present time if you are looking ahead to V-day when remodeling and building will start again.

This is by no means a complete list, as many manufacturers are busy on war work at the present time, but the list does contain some of the available data you can obtain now, and we shall add to this list as time goes on and booklets and folders and new products begin to make their appearance in ever increasing numbers.

As an example, there is a new free lighting booklet which deals with fluorescent lighting; small booklets are available for 5 cents each on "Choosing a Heating Plant Wisely" and "What You Should Know About Plumbing"; free booklets are available with ideas of tomorrow; also information and plans on bathrooms and kitchens, house plans, and style trends in our houses of tomorrow.

[If you have not already received a copy of these leaflets on post-war homes, we will be glad to send them to you on receipt of a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Please address Louise Bargelt, Home Owners' Editor, The Chicago Tribune.]

Mineral Laboratory.

As result of recent explorations, the state of North Carolina has authorized funds for construction of a mineral laboratory in the western part of the state.

NATURALLY! Clearer, Fairer Smoother Skin with Mercolized Wax Cream

DON'T try to hide darkened, discolored, or weathered skin with layers of foundation and powder. Thousands of smart women use Mercolized Wax Cream, for it contains a special "active" ingredient that really helps nature clear and lighten your skin, gives your complexion an extra translucence and depth, a lovelier natural coloring. Even freckles lighten and fade with Mercolized Wax Cream. You will discover a fairer, lovelier and truly younger looking skin, one that is smoother and firmer. Mercolized Wax Cream helps make and keep your skin looking as young and lovely as your skin can look. That is why faithful users would not trade their lovelier complexions with women years younger. Use only as directed.

STARTLE your skin to fresher loveliness with Saxolite Astringent. Temporarily contracts loose surface skin, reduces prominence of premature fine lines and wrinkles. Removes excess surface oil.
